BRING BACK SUSPECT CHURCH

250 BELIEVED KILLED IN SAN ANTONIO

MANY MILLIONS IN DAMAGES BY TEXAS STORMS

Troops in Control of Stricken City.

Storms, floods, and accidents claimed a heavy toll in life and property Friday and yesterday. The most serious losses follow:

	Dead.
San Antonio, Tex.—Flood	250
Chester, Pa.—Bridge Collapse	34
Lyons, France—Train Wreck	25

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 10—With the known list of dead standing at forty at 4 o'clock this afternoon, police officials still believe an estimate of 250 lost as a result of the disastrous flood which struck this city early Saturday morning, to be a conservative one. No attempt has been made to estimate the property damage but it is certain to run into millions of dollars.

Of the known dead, twenty were children, most of them under 12 years old, and a majority of the others were men and women ranging in age from 40 to 60 years.

Because of the continued swollen condition of the three streams which caused the flood, the work of recovering bodies is progressing slowly. Great piles of driftwood which have lodged in trees and against bridges, when removed, it is feared, will reveal additional dead. Many bodies also are believed to have floated down stream and may never be accounted for.

Streams Subside to Old Beds.

With the waters of the San Antonio river, the Alazan and San Pedro creeks back in their banks only a few hours, relief work and sanitary precautions are already well under way. A thoroughly organized relief committee has begun caring for flood victims and city health officers are engaged in a rigid clean up of the city to prevent any possibility of an epidemic.

As reports gradually trickle in from outlying sections of the city they only serve to confirm the fear that the flood is the worst in the city's history. Streets adjacent to the three streams, in some instances have been swept clean almost their entire length.

Houses in the southern portion of the city were lifted from their foundations and piled one upon another, or in some cases driven entirely through adjoining buildings. Dead animals line the banks of the streams.

Great District Inundated.

The flood waters from the San Antonio river and from Alazan creek and small tributaries inundated an area approximately two miles long by one-half mile wide, including the heart of the business section and a portion of the residence section along River avenue and adjacent streets, as well as the thickly populated west side, where today thousands of Mexicans are homeless and the dead not yet counted.

The flood is the greatest disaster in the history of San Antonio. The water rose almost to the mezzanine floor in the Gunter hotel.

Such structures as the Brady building, Wolff & Marx Department store, Stower's, St. Mary's church and school buildings, the St. Anthony hotel, the Elks club, formerly the Travis club, several hospitals, the Central Telephone exchange, the city hall and police and fire headquarters, and countless other structures along the low lying river valley were in the pathway of the flood.

Tragedies of the Night.

These were the things visible to the eye when day dawned, cloudy, gloomy, and threatening. But what occurred in the blackness of the night, when scores of men, woman, and children met death in the oil coated waters of the flood, as houses collapsed, bridges were swept out, trees and electric light and telephone poles crashed, and their wires became entangled with the other wreckage, is something that will never be known in detail.

Countless acts of heroism are current, as civilians and soldiers, forgetful of personal safety, braved the current and floating débris to carry women and children to places of safety. Thousands of families along the river were rescued before daybreak by men who worked the long hours, often neck deep in water, risking their lives almost every minute of that time to save others.

Storm Followed Cloudburst.

Unquestionably there was a cloudburst. The electric display was the most vivid ever seen here, as lightning

Irish Outlook Bright; Accept Parley Offer

BULLETIN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Irish Republican cabinet was in session late tonight. It is expected that J. C. Barton, the Sinn Fein envoy, will leave for Inverness tomorrow night, certainly before Wednesday's meeting of the Dail Eireann. This is taken to indicate that the Dail Eireann will accept Premier Lloyd George's invitation to a conference and that the meeting of the Dail Eireann has been summoned to indorse the plenipotentiaries.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—[By United News.]—The Irish outlook was decidedly brighter tonight.

Authoritative statements to the effect that the Sinn Fein cabinet had already decided to accept the British invitation to a conference and was merely postponing action to obtain formal ratification from the Dail Eireann brought a return of the feeling of optimism.

It was reported that Arthur Griffith, Prof. MacNeill, and Ralph Barton would be three of the Sinn Fein plenipotentiaries. Mr. de Valera and others, it is said, will, however, be immediately available for consultation by the Irish represenatives.

The Dail Eireann will hold a secret session on Wednesday, after which, it was believed, the Sinn Fein note of acceptance of Lloyd George's proposal for a conference will be sent to Inverness.

DEMAND ACCEPTANCE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Reports from Dublin to both the government and the Irish representatives here indicate that there is a strong demand among the rank and file among the Sinn Feiners for acceptance of the government's invitation to a conference at Inverness by Dail Eireann at its meeting next Wednesday.

It is pointed out by Irish representatives here that it is quite within the range of possibility for the Irish to ignore the first paragraphs of Prime Minister Lloyd George's letter and to accept an invitation to "ascertain how the association of Ireland with the community of nations known as the British empire can best be reconciled with Irish national aspirations."

This is regarded as admitting discussion of every possible relationship, even that of a dual monarchy, which is said to be the solution gaining favor among the moderate Irish.

A most significant sign is that the Irish press has recovered its voice and is talking for the first time with some show of independence. Every newspaper is urging acceptance.

GET YOUR COAL IN AND 'BENNY' OUT, SUMMER'S GONE

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their coal bins.

Summer has gone from Chicago and left no forwarding address; and, regardless of October leases, autumn has moved in—autumn the painter of red and gold leaves, gray-brown stacks in the harvest fields, the frost on the pumpkin, and the fading grass.

Prof. Henry J. Cox, weather distributor, made the announcement yesterday, and the forecast was for cool winds out of the northwest, and a drop in the temperature.

Frost was reported from the northern portion of the Rocky mountain plateau, snow in Montana. Frost was predicted for Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, and Utah; and before the week is over there will be cool weather all the way to the Atlantic.

But it was rather warm yesterday, after the rain, eh?

JAZZ CAN'T PASS AS ANESTHETIC IN HOSPITALS HERE

Jazz music stays outside the operating rooms in Chicago hospitals. 'Twould never do to have the surgeon's scalpel shimmy to the cacophony of the African harmonic hash.

That was the diagnosis yesterday of Dr. E. L. Moorhead, chief surgeon of Mercy hospital, who denounced at the Hospital Superintendents' convention in the Hotel Sherman the scheme to play phonographs during operations, as advanced Friday by Dr. Robert E. Parr of Minneapolis, at the State Medical convention in Milwaukee.

"Jazz," said Dr. Moorhead, "has never been classed as either a local or a general anesthetic. It will hinder the hospital staff, even if the patient's nerves are soothed, and the music might make them forget their work and do a few fancy steps. No, music does not belong in the operating room."

Fifty hospital superintendents went to the new Speedway hospital at Maywood to inspect the 1,000 bed structure recently opened by the government for ex-service men.

400 OFFICERS OF BALTIC SOVIET FLEET ARRESTED

[Copyright: 1921.]

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 10.—Following reports from Helsingfors yesterday of mutiny in the soviet Baltic fleet and rebellion in the garrison at Petrograd, dispatches today say 400 officers of the fleet have been arrested and brought to Moscow.

In Kiev the officers' plot was discovered and 180 arrested.

In Moscow 362 students were sent to different prisons for not wanting to recognize the Bolshevik high school. Now the reform carried through high schools has lost all autonomy. In addition 150 persons have been arrested in Moscow as being connected with the Russian help commission.

DAUGHERTY MAY RESIGN TO RUN FOR U. S. SENATOR

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—The official announcement is expected soon of the decision of Attorney General Daugherty to resign from the cabinet.

It is reorted authentically tonight that Mr. Daugherty intends to become a candidate for United States senator from Ohio and expects to leave the cabinet so that he may prepare for the contest. The winning of the senatorship would fulfill a long existing ambition and immediately make him the administration leader in the upper branch of congress.

It has been known for some time that Mr. Daugherty has been urged to enter the race for the senate.

Mr. Harding is said to realize that his fortunes three years from next November may be influenced largely by the way Ohio goes at the next election. It is the understanding that he has discussed with Mr. Daugherty the possibility of his becoming a candidate for the senate to strengthen the ticket, and that if the attorney general desires to make the race the fullest administration support will be extended.

CHICAGO GIRL'S TITLED FIANCE ARRIVES IN U. S.

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Viscomte de Janze, who is to marry Miss Alice Silverthorne of Chicago, a niece of J. Ogden Armour, arrived today on the Paris, and is staying at the Ritz-Carlton prior to departing for Chicago in a few days.

Although no date has been set for the wedding, it is said it will take place in this city, and that the viscomte and his bride will sail shortly afterward for France. His mother has an estate near Dieppe.

Their engagement was announced last July. Miss Silverthorne has made her home with Mrs. Frances E. May of Chicago and has spent considerable time in New York. She was to have been one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of her cousin, Miss Lolita Armour, to John J. Mitchell Jr., but went abroad some time before the event to spend the summer in France. She returned at the end of August to make arrangements for her wedding.

Old Fish Home Bought by Margaret B. Wilson

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Miss Margaret B. Wilson, daughter of former President Woodrow Wilson, has bought the old Stuyvesant Fish residence, 108 East 15th street. What purpose Miss Wilson has in acquiring the property could not be learned.

QUIZ ARBUCKLE OVER DEATH OF FILM ACTRESS

Comedian Arrives at San Francisco.

BULLETIN.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 10.—Roscoe Arbuckle arrived in San Francisco late this evening and went immediately to the office of the chief of detectives, with whom he now is in conference regarding the death of Miss Virginia Rappe.

Arbuckle and his attorney, Frank Dominguez, had traveled the 500 miles from Los Angeles to San Francisco in less than seventeen hours in Arbuckle's automobile.

"I am coming here to do all I can to help with the investigation of the case," Arbuckle said.

Arbuckle, in a brief statement, reiterated his statement that he was at no time alone with Miss Rappe during last Monday's party in his apartment. He made a complete denial of statements given out by the police.

FOLLOWS HOTEL PARTY

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 10.—Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, motion picture comedian, who started from Los Angeles last night by automobile to clear up his part in an affair at his suite in a hotel here last Monday, following which the death of Mise Virginia Rappe, a film actress, occurred, was reported to be nearing San Francisco tonight.

Arbuckle will be taken into custody by the police, it was announced, pending an investigation into the woman's death. No charge will be placed against him, according to Michael Griffin, acting captain of detectives, but he will be detained until after the inquest, which has been set for next Thursday.

Death from Peritonitis.

The stomach of Miss Rappe has been submitted to Dr. Frank T. Green, city chemist, for analysis, following the report of several doctors that her death resulted from peritonitis.

Arbuckle, on learning of Miss Rappe's death, left Los Angeles at 2 o'clock this morning, accompanied by Frank Dominquez, Los Angeles attorney.

En route from Los Angeles to this city today Arbuckle denied responsibility for the girl's death.

Arbuckle Issues Statement.

He issued a statement in which he said:

"While I was at the St. Francis hotel, San Francisco, Monday, Miss Rappe, Mrs. Maude Delmont and Al. Seminacher, manager for Miss Rappe, came to my rooms at my invitation to have a few drinks. I was clad in pajamas, bathrobe and bedroom slippers and was having my breakfast when they entered. We sat in the room, had a few drinks and talked over matters that concerned us.

"Shortly after Miss Rappe had taken a few drinks she became hysterical and complained she could not breathe and then started to tear off her clothes. I requested two girls present at the time to take care of Miss Rappe. She was disrobed and placed in a bathtub to be revived. The immersion did not benefit her and I then telephoned to the hotel manager, telling him what was wrong and with the request that Miss Rappe be given a room. She was taken out of my room and put to bed.

"At No Time Alone."

"When no change came in Miss Rappe's condition I summoned a physician.

"I departed from the St. Francis hotel Tuesday, having engaged passage on the steamer Harvard the Saturday before to go to Los Angeles. The report that I was ordered by the management to leave the St. Francis is not true.

"I was at no time alone with Miss Rappe. During the time in my rooms there were at least half a dozen people there all of the time and I can produce witnesses to bear out that statement. I had Miss Rappe taken from my room because she had gotten too noisy."

Contradicted by Young Women.

Arbuckle's statement of the manner in which Miss Rappe was taken ill seems to be contradicted in a signed statement to the police by Miss Alice Blake, said to have been another member of the Arbuckle party, who says

Landis Ready To Reconsider Wage Awards

Judge Landis announced from his fishing camp at Burt Lake, Mich., last night that he stands ready to grant a rehearing to the building unions which are dissatisfied with the wage award.

This news, promising peace in the building world, hardly had been disseminated among labor chiefs when representatives of 14,000 union carpenters, attending a meeting of the Carpenters' District Council at 505 South State street, unanimously voted to reject the $1 an hour wage offered them by the two employers' organizations.

A resolution was passed demanding the enforcement of the old scale of $1.25 an hour until May 31, 1922. Little hope is entertained that the union will recede from this attitude at another conference to be held with the Associated Builders tomorrow.

See Peace in Other Crafts.

With the exception of the carpenters, Judge Landis' message, it is believed, will have a beneficial effect in inducing the other dissatisfied crafts which have walked out to return to their jobs tomorrow pending the rehearing.

When informed the public was eagerly awaiting some expression from him, Judge Landis sent the following reply to THE TRIBUNE:

"Certainly if either party desires a rehearing it can have it."

Immediately following the receipt of the message, Thomas S. Kearney, president of the Chicago Building Trades council, issued an appeal for every building trade mechanic and laborer to remain at work until arrangements were made for a rehearing.

Tells of Men's Grievances.

"A number of the unions have grievances to settle when a rehearing is held by Judge Landis," he said. "Some of the unions have been hit harder than others in the wage award and it is difficult to keep them at work. But I candidly believe most of their differences can be ironed out.

"In the meanwhile the workers should remain solidly behind officials of the union. The news that he will grant a rehearing should keep those workers on the job who have not already quit, and should send the others back to work. I believe the men will have time to think matters over on Sunday and will listen to reason and go back Monday morning."

Employers Standing Pat.

Both employers' organizations, the Associated Builders and the Building Construction Employers' association, are standing pat on the stand they have taken that the Landis decision must be abided by both in letter and spirit by contractors and workers alike. If the workers refuse to keep their pledge, they say, nonunion men will be employed under the terms of the agreement and Chicago will be an "open shop" city in the building industry.

The carpenters were barred from the arbitration proceedings from the outset because they refused to accept the provision sending all jurisdictional disputes to the National Board of Jurisdictional Awards for settlement. They then announced they would abide neither by the wage scale nor working rules promulgated by the arbitrator.

Harry Jensen, president of the Carpenters' District Council, personally called all his men off the job at the new Federal Reserve Bank building yesterday.

HISTORIC CIVIL WAR BATTLE TO BE RE-FOUGHT

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—The historic battle of Chancellorsville will be reënacted with modern arms and equipment by the east coast expeditionary force of the marine corps on the site of the original battle Oct. 1. Details of features of this battle of the civil war are now being worked out as part of the fall maneuver, which will call for the use of about 3,000 marines and include an air raid.

The marine brigade will leave Quantico, Va., Sept. 26, and march to Aquia creek, a distance of eight miles, where it will bivouac for the night, continuing to march to Fredericksburg, a distance of sixteen miles, the next day.

While at Wilderness Run on Sept. 29 combined military problems will be undertaken, and will be followed by an air raid on the diagram of a battleship laid out on the ground, equipped with searchlights and anti-aircraft guns.

Winter Brings 14 Inches of Snow to Saskatchewan

Moose Jaw, Sask., Sept. 10.—A heavy blizzard swept over Swift Current and the surrounding territory today. Early this morning the snow was fourteen inches deep on the level. Snow plows were called upon in an attempt to keep the streets clear.

AUSMUS FOUND; BURIED ALIVE UNDER GARAGE

Youth Clings to His Innocence Claim.

Within a few hours of the discovery of the body of Carl A. Ausmus, the second victim in the handcuff murder mystery, in a shallow grave in a garage at the home of Harvey W. Church at 2922 Fulton street, Church himself arrived in Chicago early this morning in the custody of the police after a 250 mile automobile ride from Adams, Wis.

Church is charged with the murders of Ausmus and B. J. Daugherty, automobile salesmen. His aged mother, Mrs. Edwin O. Church, is also in custody. She is held as a material witness.

With Church's coming State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who through Chief Investigator Ben Newmark has been directing a thorough inquiry into this most sensational of cases, took an open hand in the proceedings.

Church Jovial on Trip.

Mr. Crowe last night instructed Newmark to have Church taken to the state's attorney's office immediately after the suspect's arrival and detailed two assistant prosecutors to question the lad. This was done. Church, dubbed by his home town friends a "cry baby," was taken to the Criminal court building.

Church, debonair, nattily dressed, was the "life of the party" on the trip from Adams to Chicago. Automobile breakdowns, the prospect of the grilling he was to face, and the grisly potentialities which might ensue from it apparently worried him little.

He rode the Packard twin six which the police declare is the underlying cause of all the killings. The car, covered with mud and grime, had lost all its aspect of newness.

Brings Attorneys with Him.

In the car with Church sat his mother, his father, Edwin O. Church, his attorneys, John Lindsay of Adams and James Grady of Portage, Wis., A. M. Devoursney of the Burns Detective agency, and their guard.

In a car behind trailed some Chicago detectives who had been rushed to Adams early Friday afternoon, before Church's arrest, on the chance that he might be heading for that town.

The party left the Wisconsin village at 7:30 yesterday morning. The first stop was Portage, where gas and oil were taken on.

Church repeatedly refused to answer questions concerning the actual killings. His stock answer to these questions was:

"I do not know."

Claims He Paid Liberty Bonds.

At Portage the Burns man left his seat and one of the detectives succeeded him.

"About this car, now," the detective asked him in an idle moment. "Where did you get it?"

"Why, this Daugherty gave it to me on West Madison street. I paid him $5,000 in Liberty bonds—ten bonds of $500 each," Church answered.

"My mother was with me at the time—she saw the payment. Isn't that right, mother?" He turned his head to the white haired woman by his side and smiled. She nodded an emphatic affirmative and answered:

"That's right—that's one of the reasons that I'm so sure of my boy's innocence. If I hadn't seen that transaction completed I might have—no, I wouldn't have entertained any suspicions of Harvey, anyway."

"Did Daugherty leave you then?" the investigator persisted.

Gets Bill of Sale for Car.

"Yes, he did. That was about 2 o'clock. I didn't see him after that. He gave me a bill of sale for the car."

"Have you still got it?"

"I sure have—it's in my pocket now. I tell you I'm not guilty of this thing they accuse me of. I just knew Daugherty to speak to him, and I didn't know Ausmus at all. They say he was the man with Daugherty. There was a man with Daugherty all right, but I don't know who it was."

The cars left Portage shortly afternoon. From there to Oconomowoc, Wis., the going was fairly easy. Mile after mile the two machines purred along in a shower of dust. The road conditions were good. Now and then Church hummed a bit of song.

Lose Route; Two Hours' Delay.

The afternoon wore slowly on and dusk arrived. One time the party lost their way—it took two hours to get back on the right road again. Then came a stop for supper and for a refill of gas and oil for the big automobiles.

And under all this tedious business Church's spirits sagged but little. Sometimes he would reply to questions asked him, at others he'd remain silent—feigning that he didn't hear them.

Detectives didn't want to ask him too much about the case—they gave the excuse that if he knew the real seriousness of the evidence against him he would stop while in Wisconsin and refuse to cross the state line into Illinois.

Quizzed by Newspaper Men.

Arriving at Kenosha, the party was met by a crew of newspaper men. Questions were hurled to and fro. Some of them Church answered. Others he refused.

"I'm not guilty—yes, this is the car I got from Daugherty—I don't know how the bloody clothes and all that truck got in my basement—I don't believe it ever was there—this whole thing is a frame-up!"

And then:

"I'll tell my story in good time when we get in Chicago—why don't you wait till then? I haven't anything to conceal!"

"But everything points to one thing—that you murdered Daugherty and Ausmus—how do you explain the evidence that has been found not only in your basement but in your garage as well?"

Claims He's Not Under Arrest.

"I can't answer that question now—I won't answer it! I'm coming back to Chicago of my own free will. These men haven't got me under arrest—maybe they will have when I get into Illinois—I don't know about that!"

"Could Ausmus' body have gotten into your garage, beneath your Harroun car, without you knowing it?"

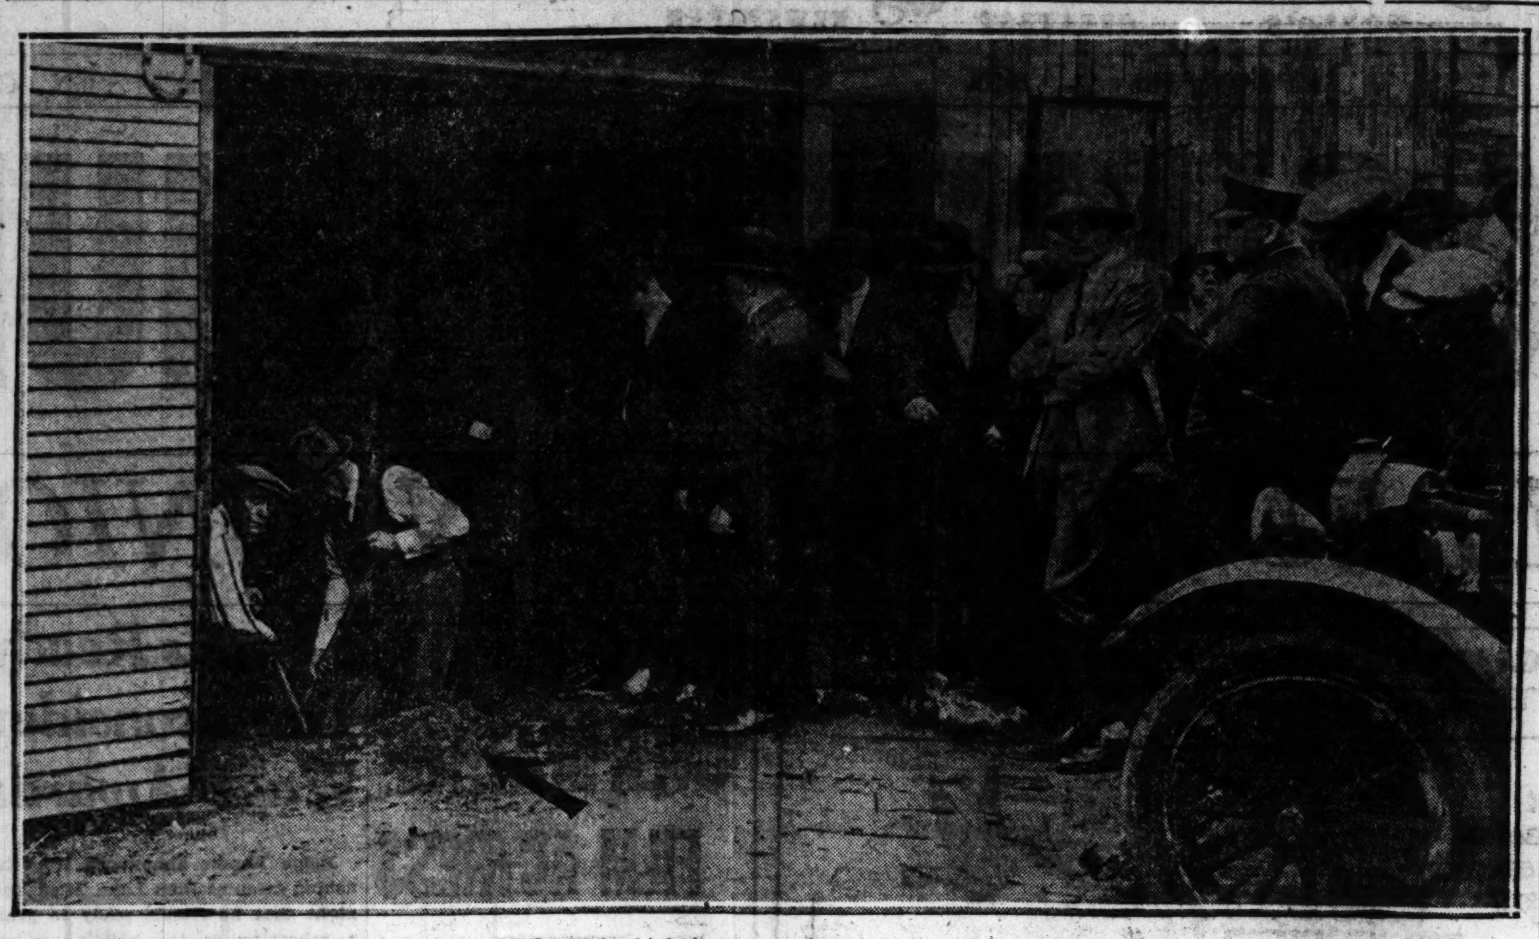
"I don't see how—but it must have been done while I had a party of my neighbors out driving—but what's the use—I'm not going to talk any more—that's final!"

From Kenosha the party drove slowly into Chicago. At every step of the way they were beset by photographers and other newspaper men. Flashlights were taken from every angle. The procession to the state's attorney's office was perhaps the most sensational comeback ever staged by any suspected criminal in Chicago.

And as the doors of the state's attorney's private office closed behind him, Church turned around to fling forth one final remark:

"There won't be any confession, boys, from me tonight—you may as well go home!"

WHERE THE BODY OF AUSMUS WAS FOUND



In the picture is seen the garage, in the dirt floor of which Ausmus was buried alive after having been hacked and beaten. At the right of the picture stands the old Harroun car under which the grave was found. It was with difficulty the car was moved out to make way for the police with their shovels.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

FINDING OF AUSMUS' BODY

The body of Ausmus, the second known victim of the murder plot, was exhumed yesterday from a shallow grave in cinders, coal dust, and refuse in the garage at Church's home at 2922 Fulton street.

Beaten, kicked, and tightly bound with hempen rope, a piece of woman's brassiere nearly a foot square jammed solidly in his windpipe, and his neck broken just above the shoulder line, Ausmus was not yet dead when he was buried.

That he was so buried alive was attested by Coroner Peter M. Hoffman, after an inspection of the body with Coroner's Physicians William H. Burmeister and H. W. Reinhardt.

Buried Alive, Coroner Says.

"When the murderers threw Ausmus in the makeshift grave face downward they doubled his head under his chest and stamped on his neck, breaking it," the coroner declared.

"But there was still life in the body. Respiration had probably ceased, but the heart continued to function for five or ten minutes. In that time the body was covered over by the refuse."

The finding of Ausmus' body came as a sensational climax to nearly thirty-six hours of untiring efforts on the part of police and newspaper men. To Sergt. John Hanrahan of the detective bureau goes the credit.

Stirs Whole Neighborhood.

The finding of Ausmus' body stirred the crowds of hundreds of curious at the Church home to a fever of dramatic expectancy.

All night long parties of men had worked silently under the glare of electric searchlights, testing every inch of the ground in the neighborhood of the Church home. Perhaps it was some definite clew that led them there. More probably it was that strange psychological prescience which guides those in a man hunt which told them that important evidence was concealed beneath the dirt and cinders and trash of the West Fulton street back yard.

When daylight came the investigators, tired but dauntless, persisted. Pails of steaming coffee were brought to them. The wearied diggers worked more slowly.

Wearied Searchers Discouraged.

At noon they were discouraged. Virtually every square foot of ground had been seemingly probed. The garage had been combed—with the exception of the space directly under the old and battered Harroun car which Church had discarded in favor of the newer and more powerful Packard Twin Six.

Sergt. Hanrahan it was who first noticed something peculiar about the wheels on one side of the car.

"Look!" he said to Sergt. Charles Welling, "the wheels on one side of the machine have sunk into the ground; the wheels on the other side are all right." And on that slender clew the delvers went to work again.

The old machine was laboriously pushed into the alley behind. Below the marks of the tires, they saw freshly turned cinders. Sergt. Hanrahan jabbed in a shovel. It touched a pair of shoes.

Buried Only a Foot Deep.

Scarcely a foot below the surface of the garage floor lay the body of Ausmus. Around the wrists the hempen rope—a piece of the same cord which was found around the throat of Daugherty—was coiled thrice and tied in a double knot. The cord then extended to the ankles, the right one being bound first, the left one last. The knees were drawn up almost to a level with the chin.

The collar had been torn off the shirt. The chest lay open. Over the entire left side a dark green discoloration extended. This, on the arrival of Coroner Hoffman and Coroner's Physicians Reinhardt and Burmeister, was unhesitatingly pronounced to have been due to hemorrhage, caused by a terrific blow.

The skull was battered, the face being almost obliterated. The remainder of the body had been clubbed with a heavy instrument, presumably the baseball bat found in the basement of the Church home.

Sixty Dollars Found in Pockets.

In the pockets was found two $20, one $10, and two $5 bills. There were no papers. There was a gold pencil in the coat and on one wrist was an army wrist watch. It had stopped at 6:48.

After the exhumation the body was rushed to the Kisselburg undertaking parlors at 2903 West Madison street. There Coroner Hoffman and Dr. Reinhardt performed an autopsy.

It was the coroner who first noticed a tiny thread of cloth protruding from the dead man's mouth.

"What's that?" he asked of Reinhardt.

Reinhardt grasped the thread and pulled. The thread broke off. And then investigation disclosed a ball of cloth forced into the windpipe so strongly that it was necessary to make an incision before it could be released.

The cloth was more than a foot square and heavy. It was the front of a woman's brassiere. The property of Church's mother?

It was here at the undertaking rooms that Asmus' body was identified by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Ausmus of Bloomington, Ill., and an aunt, Dr. Anna Loos Lapham of Chicago.

The vital organs were last night turned over to Coroner's Chemist McNally for examination on the possibility of poisons. Here also will be determine the theory that perhaps whisky was the lure which took both salesmen to the basement coal hole, where at least one of the killings was committed.

HOLD DAUGHERTY INQUEST

The inquest over Daugherty's body, held in the Dietzel undertaking rooms at Maywood yesterday, was a rather quiet affair. Coroner Herman of Du Page county presided.

J. C. Cahill, boyhood friend of Daugherty, was the first witness. He told of the dead man's parentage and youth, of his good qualities and few vices.

"I can't conceive of any reason why any one would kill him—he was a good man," Cahill declared.

M. J. Sommers, manager of the Chicago Packard branch, was the next witness. He testified that Daugherty was 29, unmarried; that he had once studied in Harvard and once had taken a medical course. Daugherty was insured for $10,000, he declared, the beneficiary being his aged mother.

Only Small Sum in Bank.

"He left our salesrooms at 10:30 Thursday morning," Sommers said. "He was to go to the bank with Church—we didn't see him any more."

"Did Church have money in the bank?"

"The bank officials—that's the Madison and Kedzie State bank—say he had $225 there, and that he drew out $200 of it Thursday afternoon," Sommers responded.

"That must have been a subterfuge—that trip——" the coroner began.

"Seems so," Sommers answered him. And then: "We learned from neighbors that Church displayed a blue slip, which he said was a customer's contract, but that didn't mean anything. He couldn't do anything with it—it wasn't a bill of sale."

PROBE CHURCH'S PAST

Inquiry into Church's past became an interesting angle in the case yesterday, and many revelations were disclosed.

At Adams, Church's home town, natives whispered up and down the street that he'd been a "curious boy" for years; that all his faults had been covered up out of respect for his mother. And there are rumors of a car stolen at a dance in New Lisbon, Wis.—a car belonging then to Charley Helde of Adams. The machine was later found abandoned on the roadside. The Case against young Church was never pushed.

When railway switchmen formed an outlaw union and went on strike there were existent many vacancies in railroad work. The Chicago and Northwestern was one of the hardest hit by the walkout. The pay offered by the roads for volunteers was high.

Young Church, attracted by the money, took a job as switchman. He tells many interesting experiences on the job—how he was slugged once, of a dozen fist fights and verbal quarrels, of enemies he made then. Once in a conversation he said those enemies "would do anything to frame him" for his "'scab' railroading."

B. N. and P. M. Keeffe, fellow railroaders from Adams, yesterday said Church was always a little inclined to wildness.

"He got into the hands of the police ever since he was a kid of 12 or 13," they declared. "We folks up there always thought something was wrong with him. He wasn't popular with the kids, either; they always criticized him.

Cites Story of $5,400 Car.

"He didn't have to leave there and come to Chicago to work. His father had plenty of money. And then his stories—they were always wild. Take this case, for instance. He says his father wanted him to purchase a $5,400 car.'

"Anyone who knows his father would laugh at such a suggestion. He and Mrs. Church are simple people without any airs like that. A flivver old man Church might buy, but a Packard—nix.

"If he killed those two men, he'll confess the minute he sees he's up against it. 'Harve' Church always was a cry-baby."

FIND HANDCUFF SOURCE

Police last night uncovered, too, what they believe to have been the shop where some one—maybe Church—purchased the handcuffs found on Daugherty's wrists.

It was last Wednesday afternoon—the day before the murders—that a young man entered the jewelry shop of Frank Flower, 2 South Clark street.

"Hello, Frank," he asked. "Know where I can get a pair of handcuffs?" Flower said he looked at him and dimly recognized him. He doesn't know the man's name.

"Yes," the jeweler answered. "My old friend, Charley Izenstock, just down the street a couple of doors, has some for sale. Go down and ask him."

And into Izenstock's store at 10 South Clark street the young man, with a companion, wandered.

"Frank Flower sent me down here—said you could sell me a pair of handcuffs," he told Mr. Izenstock. The latter called on Theodore Bartelstein, a clerk.

A pair of handcuffs—formerly government property—was sold to the young man for $2.95. Both Izenstock and Bartelstein say they can identify the man. When shown Church's picture, they declared in unison:

"It looks just like him."

ADDS MORE MYSTERY

The finding of the second body has added still more mystery to the actual murder. Could Church—toward whom all the circumstantial evidence points—with his slight physique, have overpowered two such physically capable men as Daugherty and Ausmus? Could he have, unaided, fought their efforts at resistance and subdued them to the point where he could bind them, handcuff them, beat them, and kill them?

And if he did, what was the motive? Could a man—even one cold blooded in the extreme—have killed two men just to gain possession of a $5,400 car—when auto theft is easy of accomplishment without detection?

Psychologists yesterday were pointing to a score of details which they said savored of a mania motive.

Work of Murderous Maniac.

"Insanity?" one said. "Certainly insanity. It would have taken a butcher without a heart to have done those things. There are so many things that point to a murderous maniac. The man who did that job must have had a disordered brain."

Is Church insane? And if he did the killing, how does it come that now he laughs and talks in a manner perfectly natural? Did his experience as a soldier in the world war numb his sense to the point that he is calloused to human suffering—to sense of repulsion felt by every normal man regarding a murder in cold blood?

These are some of the questions the police will endeavor to learn from either Church or his mother.

Under this barrage Church is expected to break down. And if he does? Who were his confederates?

JOY MAD BRITISH CROWN FILM KING 'MADE IN THE U. S.'

Chaplin Hero Where Once He Was Ignored.

BY OTIS SWIFT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Mobbed by cheering and rioting tens of thousands, kissed by dozens of pretty girls, hammered, battered, mauled, and almost torn to shreds by his admirers, Charlie Chaplin came to London today. Only by the protection of hundreds of police, who fought the crowds, was the life of the comedy hero preserved from the affection of the British public.

No emperor or potentate ever received a more trimpnant welcome here. London went mad with enthusiasm. "King Charlie" had come home.

It is nine years since at the age of 22 Charlie Chaplin left England to try his fortunes anew in America. He was an immigrant boy when he left—a mildly amusing yet unnoticed vaudeville comedian, playing in dreary English provincial one night stands.

Once Unknown, Now King.

Charlie was born in London in the slums of Kensington. He had scanty schooling. From his earnings of $15 a week he had saved $1,000, whereby he hoped to start in the golden land of success. The small town managers missed him when the "humming birds" toured again. That was all.

At 11:30 this morning 10,000 cheering persons, held back somewhat by a cordon of 300 police from Scotland Yard, jammed Waterloo station and stood in the drizzling rain in the adjoining streets. There they awaited King Charlie—the millionaire filmland monarch whose crown is his acrobatic derby, whose scepter is his animated walking stick, and whose syncopated feet have won him the hearts of the world's children for a domain.

Like Cornered Squirrel.

Then the boat train from the liner Olympic arrived from Southampton.

A little group came down the platform, centering on a slim, immaculate young man. He wore a light gray overcoat and a bowler hat. As he walked he looked nervously to the right and left, seemingly eager to escape. He looked like a cornered squirrel. He was not what they had expected—he could not be the hero.

Then a child's high pitched voice shrieked, "That is Charlie." With a rush the yelling crowds stormed the gates, battered the struggling police, and dashed upon him.

In the lead ran a swift footed, pretty girl. With a wild swoop she grabbed him by the neck and implanted a smacking kiss on the mouth of the embarrassed youth. A second behind her a stouter and older woman dashed in, dragged him off, and did likewise.

Cheering, Fighting Mob.

Now the crowd had lifted him up on its shoulders while two giant policemen attempted to drag him down and twenty cops hammered a pathway through the howling, cheering, and fighting mob, while crowds attempted to kiss, hug, handshake, and photograph him. They shoved autograph albums at him and tore off bits of his clothing as souvenirs.

Fighting for every inch of the way to keep Charlie from being crushed to a pulp, the police gained a limousine ten yards away and shoved him like a sack of meal, firing in his derby and stick after him and slamming the doors.

Men jumped on to the roof of the limousine and climbed on the radiator. They smashed the hood and mudguards. Hands were thrust in at him as he lay breathless, laughing, white-faced, and nervous in a corner.

More Thousands in Way.

Slowly the car shoved through the mob into the street where there were more thousands fighting and blocking the way.

Crowds lined the way to the Ritz, where a dense mob plunged after him as he alighted. There was another battle at the entrance, but he managed to enter and the doors were locked. The crowd, however, would not disperse until after he had appeared on the balcony and made a speech.

When he threw down a handful of carnations on the crowd, a riot ensued in which a woman was badly trampled in the scramble for souvenirs.

Wholehearted Welcome.

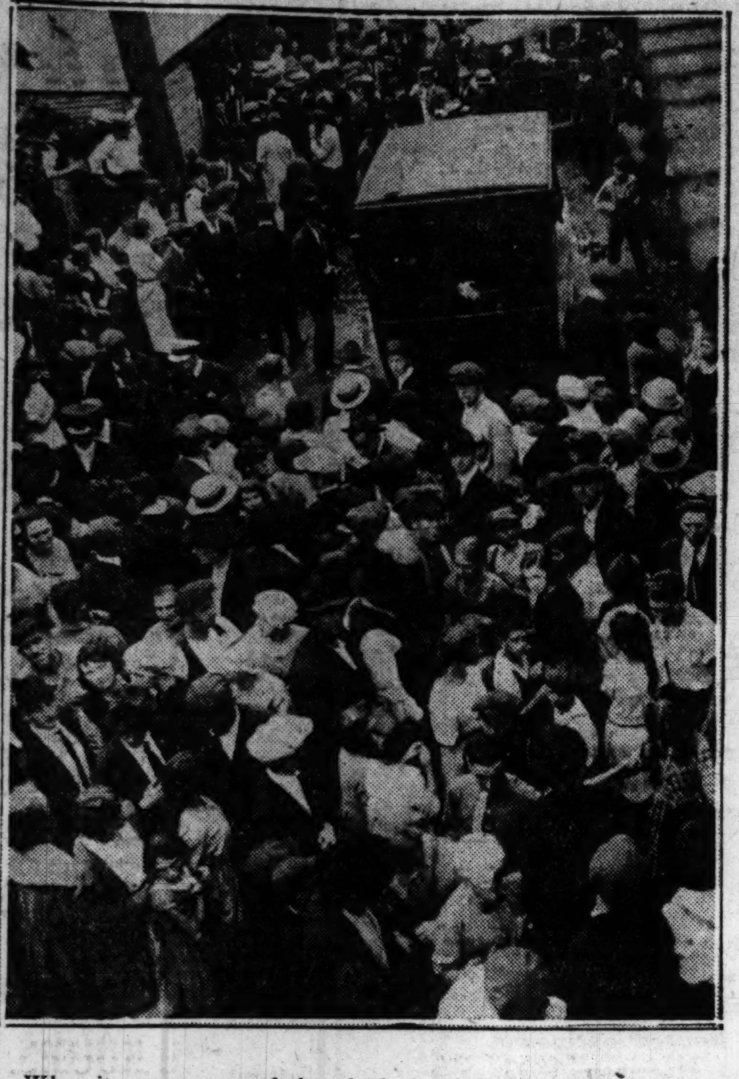
England has wholeheartedly and affectionately responded to the romance of the poor boy who, like Dick Whittington, returned to his home land famous. The day was a triumphant pageant for him.

Early this morning hundreds waited down at the docks at Southampton for him. The mayor of Southampton received him officially and when the mob got to him scenes similar to those in London occurred.

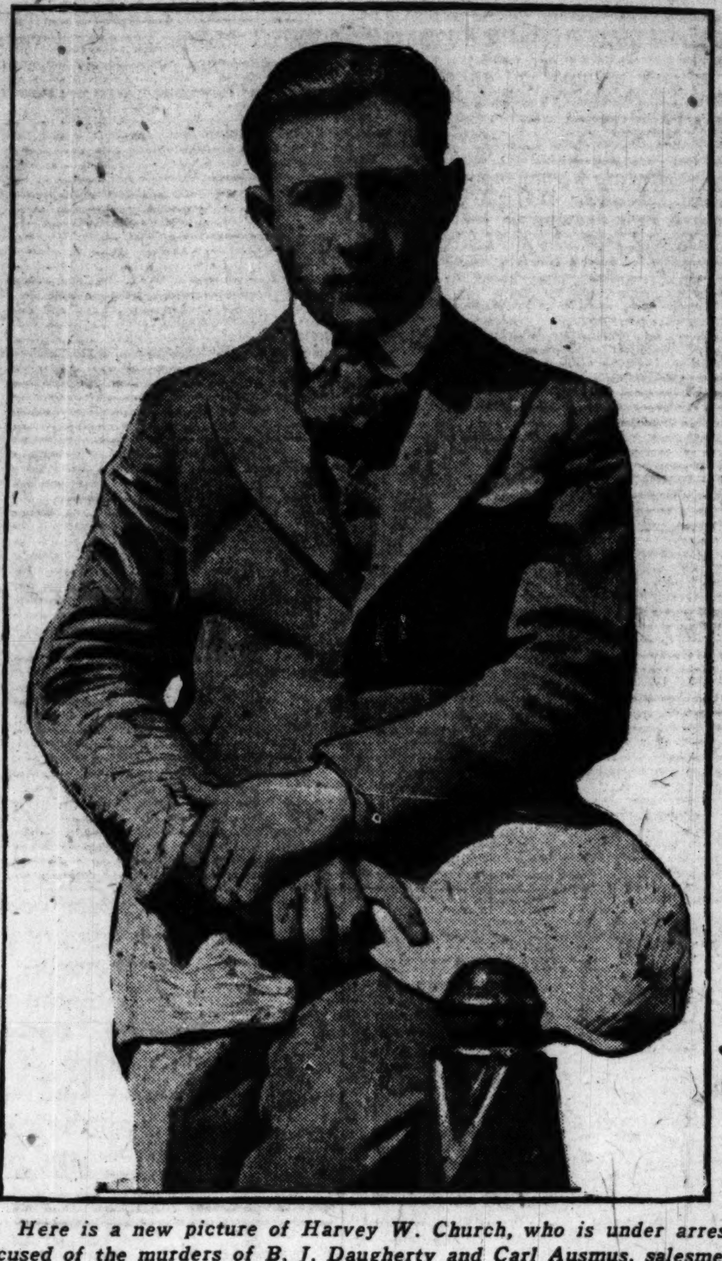
The progress of the boat train to London called out the biggest crowds since the war at every station, and the country folk waited at the cross roads in the foggy, misty morning to catch a glimpse of him.

Seen at the Ritz he said: "It is all very wonderful, but I did not come for this. I came here to get away from myself—to forget my crazy patchwork pants and elongated feet, and to try to be the plain human being that is myself. The clown isn't me, it is the real me that I am hoping to find again in the old scenes in London."

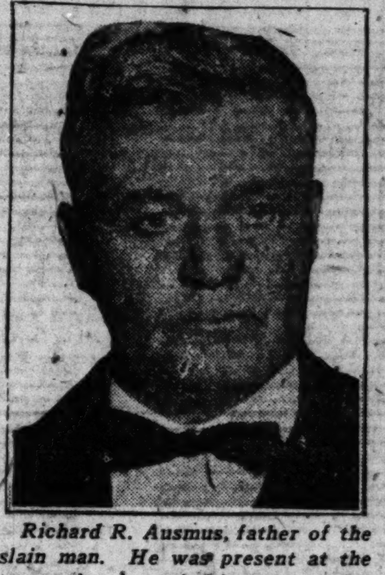
FIGURES IN THE HANDCUFF MURDER—SOME WITNESSES



When it was announced that the body of Ausmus had been found in Church's garage the neighborhood swarmed into the alley to get a view of the grewsome details of the newest development in the handcuff murder. A police patrol wagon may be seen.



Here is a new picture of Harvey W. Church, who is under arrest accused of the murders of B. J. Daugherty and Carl Ausmus, salesmen for the Packard Automobile company.



Richard R. Ausmus, father of the slain man. He was present at the coroner's investigation yesterday and completed the identification.

Charles Izenstark, owner of the army goods store, who says he can identify the man who bought a pair of handcuffs of one of his clerks.

Theodore Bardelstein, clerk in the army goods store, who sold a pair of handcuffs to a young man, whom he says he can positively identify.

Frank F. Flower, jeweler, who was approached by a youth said to resemble Church concerning the purchase of a pair of handcuffs.

Edwin O. Church, father of the accused youth. He accompanied his wife and son on the auto trip from Adams to Chicago.

LONDON WORKERS PARADE TO FREE JAILED ALDERMEN

LONDON, Sept. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—A delegation from Poplar, a thousand strong, marched through London this afternoon, carrying banners demanding the release of Poplar borough council members who recently were imprisoned for refusing to comply with an order of the High court requiring them to raise tax rates in accordance with a ruling of the London county council. Numerous policemen, mounted and on foot, escorted the procession, but the demonstration proved entirely orderly.

The majority of the marchers were workingmen and most of them were in merry mood. Many at times danced to airs played by a band in the typical East End fashion, with which Piccadilly became familiar during the armistice celebration.

A feature of the demonstration was fife and drum corps' playing of the Irish "Soldier Song."

Cool, crisp autumn days will soon be here. Already you can feel the tingle in the air.
With cooler days you will need more fuel-food, to create body-heat, maintain bodily resistance against fall and winter colds and preserve your health, vitality and energy during the winter months.
WARD'S BREAD

Every pound will furnish you with 1200 calories of body-heat and energy—more than you can get from the same amount of beef or other expensive foods at from three to six times the cost of bread.
The children especially, at this season need plenty of good Ward's Bread. At school—at play—their restless little bodies are continually burning up energy. Give them plenty of bread and butter, bread and milk, bread and jam, then add some fresh fruits and vegetables and they will be perfectly nourished.
But don't make the mistake of supposing that any bread will do, either for you or them—that all breads are alike—that one is as good as another. There can only be one best of anything and the best bread is Ward's Bread.
Best, because we put into it only the finest laboratory-tested flour, sugar, yeast, salt, vegetable shortening and other pure food products.
Best, because it is made in spotlessly clean bakeries, by the most scientific methods, and from dough-mixer to your table is untouched by human hands.
Best, because it is made by "WARD'S," the world's greatest, most modern and most scientific bakers with three generations of baking experience behind them.
Protect yourself and your family! Always insist on getting one of the three great Ward Breads—

QUIZ ARBUCKLE OVER DEATH OF FILM ACTRESS

Comedian Closeted with San Francisco Police.

that she and Miss Zey Prevon missed Miss Rappe from the room and, investigating, found her in an adjoining room "in great distress."

Clothing Badly Torn.

The police say that the clothing which Miss Rappe wore when she became ill is missing. This clothing, according to the statements of several witnesses, the police say, was badly torn and was left in rags about the bed, little of it remaining on the girl's body when assistance was rushed to her.

Miss Rappe later was removed to a hospital, where she died yesterday. Miss Rappe's body was taken from the morgue today to a funeral establishment pending removal to Los Angeles.

Arbuckle and all members of the party will be subpœnaed to testify at the inquest, according to the coroner.

Harry Kelly, secretary of the grand jury, said the county grand jury would investigate the case at its meeting Monday night.

"So many women's clubs and private individuals interested in the moral welfare of the city have demanded an investigation," said Mr. Kelly, "that I will present their demands to the grand jury."

"The only charge that would be suggested by cases of this character is murder," Detective Griffith Kennedy, assigned to the case, said, "and we have no evidence as yet that such a charge is justified against any one. However, the situation is an extremely serious one."

ROSCOE (FATTY) ARBUCKLE.

Noted screen comedian, at whose party in San Francisco Miss Virginia Rappe became ill, dying shortly afterwards.

Miss Rappe Born in Chicago.

Miss Rappe was born in Chicago. She was twenty-three years old. She went to Los Angeles about five years ago and obtained employment with motion picture companies.

In the last season or two she appeared with well known male stars. She made her home in Los Angeles with an aunt, who was said to have acted as chaperon, even when Miss Rappe went to her work before the camera.

On Film Stage Two Years.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Miss Rappe has been prominently identified with successful motion picture comedies in Los Angeles during the last two years. She was at one time a chorus girl in New York musical comedies and was brought to California two years ago by Henry Lehrman, director and producer.

Her first picture was made at the Fox studios, but later, when Mr. Lehrman erected his own studio at Culver City, she was featured by him in comedies. The one in which she is known the best was called "A Twilight Baby."

Recently, it is said, Miss Rappe has been featured in comedies made by the Century Film corporation studio at Hollywood. Her most recent picture, in which it is said she worked with "Ham Hamilton," screen comedian, has just been completed and is soon to be released. The name of the picture has not been announced.

The Fred Fishbeck named in the San Francisco dispatches as having been a member of the Arbuckle party in that city was said tonight to be the Fred Fishbeck who directed Miss Rappe's most recent picture.

THAT "$100,000 PARTY"

Boston, Mass., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Reports of the latest troubles of "Fatty" Arbuckle served to recall tonight the famous "$100,000 girls and champagne party" here several months ago in which the screen comedian figured.

This road-house affair, staged by movie producers and actors, became public in charges by Attorney General J. W. Allen against District Attorney Nathan Tufts. Tufts was tried in ouster proceedings in the Supreme court. He explained that the big sums he was charged with receiving from a "$100,000 blackmail fund" were from his father's estate.

Pretty Girls and "Kissing Bee."

Two angry girls caused the exposé. They had been engaged as musicians and there was a quarrel over the pay. The place was raided, several arrests made and a quantity of liquor seized.

The attorney general charged that Tufts threatened prosecution of the men present; that an attorney extorted $100,000 from the men, mentioning Jesse Lasky, Adolph Zukor and others, and that Tufts eventually did not prosecute.

It was brought out in the Tufts trial that the male members of the party had all attended a very proper banquet for Arbuckle at a Back Bay hotel earlier in the evening, but that the real festivities were deferred until midnight when the favored guests witnessed girls dancing on tables, sitting on guests' laps and conducting "kissing bees." More than a score of girls, it was testified, and most of them in their teens and pretty, kissed every man in the party.

After the "party" was raided, there was consternation among the men, who feared publicty, and the alleged $100,000 blackmail fund resulted.

It was never brought out whether Arbuckle contributed to the fund.

HIT CHICAGO BELLBOY

Roscoe Arbuckle was arrested last July in his suite at the Congress hotel in Chicago, when, in the midst of a sprightly party for some movie friends, he is alleged to have struck Joe Greenberg, a bellboy, in the eye. The film comedial was forced to ride in a patrol wakgon to the South Clark street station, where he deposited $50 for bond.

He failed to appear before Judge John F. Haas on July 20 to answer to a charge of disorderly conduct and the bond was forfeited.

Greenberg told Judge Haas that Aruckle hired him to serve at the party in the Arbuckle suitte, and there was a disagreement over the rate of pay.

SIGN CENTRAL AMERICAN UNION CONSTITUTION

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Sept. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The constitution of the Federation of Central American Republics was signed here today.

One of the features of the simple but impressive ceremonies was the planting of a memorial tree.

The flag of the federation, symbolizing the resurrection of the republic of Central America, will be raised here on Sept. 21, the one hundredth anniversary of the independence of Central America from Mexico. Allegiance to the emblem will be sworn at that time.

BERLIN-MUNICH RELATIONS FACE ANOTHER CRISIS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—The Bavarian crisis again seems to have taken a serious turn as a result of threats of President Kahr of the Bavarian ministry to resign in the event that he is compelled to raise the state of siege in Bavaria. The Socialist press is alarmed by reports that Herr Kahr confers regularly over the crisis with Crown Prince Rupprecht, whom he unofficially acknowledges as the uncrowned king of Bavaria.

Unquestionably the Kahr government is attempting to exploit the crisis to the advantage of the reactionary and monarchist circles.

1921 IS REWARDING FIGHTERS

BRIDGE BREAKS AS CROWD SEES HUNT FOR BODY

Thirty-four Are Killed at Chester, Pa.

Chester, Pa., Sept. 10.—Thirty-four persons were drowned or crushed tonight when the footpath of a bridge over the Chester river collapsed.

Crowds leaving a moving picture theater near the center of town had seen policemen dragging the river. They heard a child, playing on the bank, had fallen in and been drowned. Here was a new thrill. Soon the footpath on the bridge was packed with people. Then that part of the bridge collapsed.

As the first people fell from the bridge, others, falling just after, struck them as they hit the water and prevented their ever regaining the surface. The water was fifteen feet deep. Firemen and policemen rushed to the bridge and the work of rescue began at once. Firemen made a dam of ladders to prevent bodies from floating away, as the river is affected by the rise and fall of the tide, which was at ebb.

Drags Out Twenty-three Persons.

James Emerbe of Chester was standing near the bridge when the crash came. He was one of the first to reach the water's edge. He dragged out twenty-three men, women and children. Nine of them were found to be dead. "Soup" Pierce, a river boatman, was coming up the river with his launch when the footpath collapsed. He rescued eleven persons alive, and after repeated diving brought three bodies to the surface.

A theatrical company on the way to a show, was about to cross the bridge, but the crowd prevented. At the instant of the disaster, men of the company began to help the rescuers.

A nearby garage was used as an emergency morgue. The news spread rapidly and the streets were filled with persons who had lost or feared that they had lost relatives.

Within the first hour after the disaster, twenty bodies had been recovered. By that time men and women seeking for news had become almost hysterical. The river at that point is deep and wide enough for coal barges and searchlights were mounted on them to aid those who were searching for bodies. Before midnight twenty-five of the dead had been identified. All came from Chester or nearby towns.

Many Women and Children.

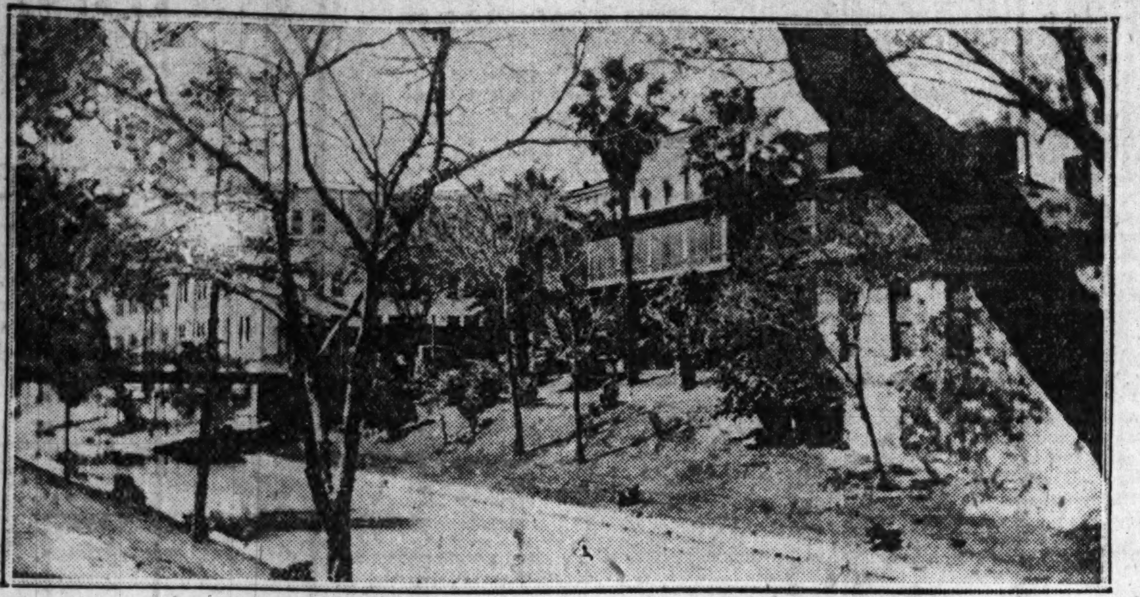
Many of those who were on the bridge when the collapse came were women and small children. Among those recovered from the river were fourteen persons that were placed in a truck and rushed to a hospital. There it was found that only one of them, a woman, was alive. The name of the boy, who was drowned and the hunt for whose body the crowd gathered to watch, is not known.

The bodies that had been taken to a garage and those later recovered were taken to the morgue. At the doors of that building there were crowds of men, women, and children seeking a view of the dead.

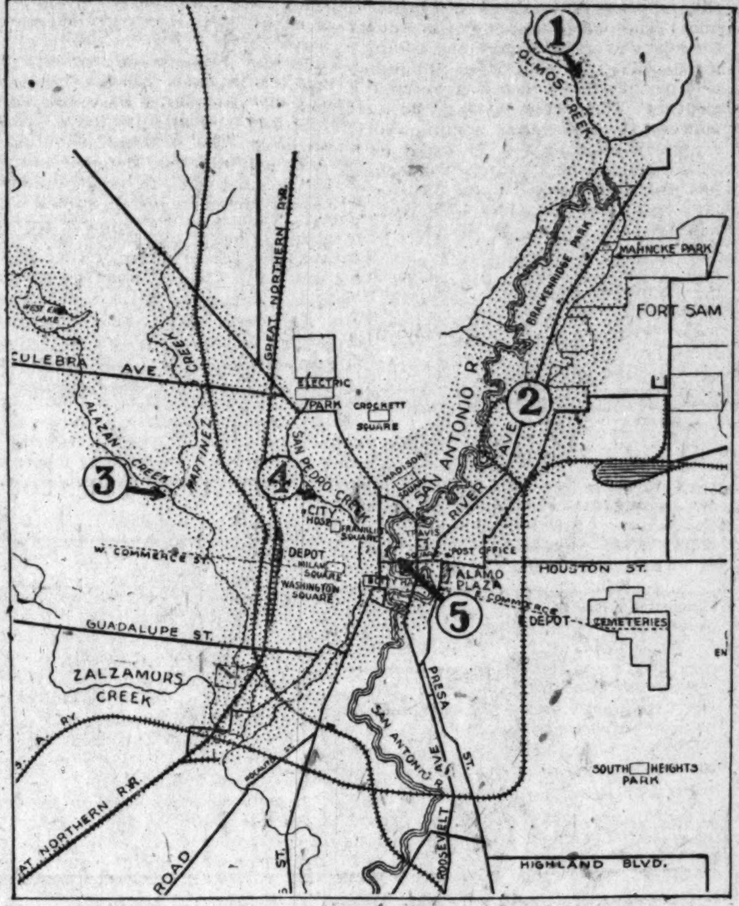
The bridge was an old iron structure. It carried two car tracks. The footpath was built of wood and protected from the iron structure. The main part of the bridge did not fall. From it much of the work of rescue was directed.

The bridge was owned by Delaware county, and, it is alleged, has been condemned three times.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, SWEPT BY FLOOD



Section of San Antonio river in the center of the best residential district of San Antonio. The stream is contained in masonry walls for most of its way through the city. This leaves little capacity for taking care of such a sudden flood from a cloudburst as swept on the city Friday.



The shaded portion of the map shows the flooded area of San Antonio, Tex. The sudden rise of the San Antonio river, which runs north and south through the city, fed by the Alazan, San Pedro, and other creeks, inundated the entire business district and the western section. At its crest the flood is said to have reached a height of thirty feet.

1—The cloudburst that brought on the deluge occurred in the Olmas valley, to the north of the city.

2—The River avenue district along the San Antonio, where many fine residences were destroyed or damaged.

3—Alazan creek, from which a second flood swept into the western part of the city into the San Antonio river.

4—San Pedro creek, which also carried heavy flood waters into the city.

5—The business center, which was flooded to the second story and badly damaged.

250 KILLED IN SAN ANTONIO, IS STORM ESTIMATE

flashed almost continuously and the thunder boomed and reverberated through the heavens. While torrents of rain were still falling in the streets of San Antonio and the residents, unableto get out because of the downpour, went early to bed, a roar was heard, subdued, but ominous, as the flood waters broke upon the town.

Following the river and Alazan creek and small tributaries, the flood waters swept upon the city with terrific force.

"It was impossible to stand on your feet against the swift current," said one man who escaped from his home before the flood struck. "I got away early as the first waters rose in my home and even then I was compelled to cling to buildings, trees, fences and wreckage. I could not stand upright against the force of the water. When the crest came a few minutes later, I do not beleive any human being could have withstood it."

Wall of Water Hits City.

In some parts of the city a wall of water variously described as ten to thirty feet high struck with a rush that carried houses from their foundations, swept motor cars away, destroyed concrete bridges, tore down trees and poles, and ripped up the paving in the streets like so many pebbles.

But after the first rush of water when the river and Alazan creek left their banks, it was possible for rescuers to work at the edge of the flood retreating steadily backward like a battle line yielding inch by inch before the charge of the enemy. The waters quickly swept up and down Houston and Commerce streets for blocks, running over sidewalks into basements and rising steadily ever higher and higher.

They quickly made their way from street to street, up alleys, miniature waves slapping against the sides of the buildings angrily. Now and then a piece of wreckage was tossed here and there through the streets until it collided with a show window. Then "bang, crash!" went a shower of glass and merchandise was seized by the waters and carried out and away while a thick film of crude oil, muddy ooze and gravel spread through a once spotless store in the heart of San Antonio's retail district.

Alamo Escapes Damage.

The Alamo, "the cradle of Texas liberty," escaped damage by waters due to its elevation.

San Antonion is a city of about 175,000 people. Besides being the largest city in Texas, it is also the military headquarters for Texas and New Mexico, and has a division stationed here.

Troops under Col. Porter opened headquarters in the federal building shortly after midnight and are patrolling the city and aiding in rescue work. Relief measures are being supervised by the military and civil authorities.

Other Texas Areas Suffer.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 10.—High winds and heavy rains which swept south Texas late yesterday and early today in one of the most severe storms in several years, causing property damage of thousands of dollars and injury to numbers of people, has subsided late today, according to reports received here from cities in the area touched by the storm.

Near Austin property damaged estimated at $150,000 was caused and eight persons were injured by the tornado and cloudburst. During the twenty-four hours ending at 7 a. m. today. 18.23 inches of rain fell at Austin, the federal weather observer announced.

All trains from Austin to San Antonio and Dallas are held up on account of damage to tracks and bridges.

Reports from Cameron, south of Waco, said the Little river broke its banks and caused much havoc in Milam county, the damage being confined principally to crops. Rain totalling 11.45 inches fell there.

San Marcos was under water this morning and without light or power, although later reports said that the water was receding.

A rise of ten feet in the Colorado river at Bastrop is anticipated, which will inundate a large area and cause a loss to crops and dwellings.

An announcement made by the Texas-Mexican railroad at Corpus Christi last night said eleven bridges and 8,000 feet of their track had been washed out between Corpus Christi and Laredo.

The pontoon bridge across the Rio Grande between Laredo and Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, was destroyed. This cut off traffic entirely between the two border points. In last advices the business district of Laredo was reported inundated.

Numbers of bales of cotton can be seen floating down the river and carcasses of dead animals also are numerous. All corn and cotton in the river valley has been washed away, it is said.

Middle West Is Affected.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 10.—Heavy rainstorms and hail were reported from many parts of the middle west yesterday and today. Only at Sioux Falls, S. D., were any casualties—three persons having succumbed to injuries received in the collapse of a building there.

Des Moines and Avoca, Ia., and Watertown, Wis., were struck by terrific downpours of rain, while dozens of small towns in Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, and Wisconsin advise of bridges washed out, crops damaged, railroad tracks destroyed, wires torn down, and rivers swollen out of banks. An estimate of the damages has not been compiled.

25 DIE, 60 HURT, IN RAIL WRECK CLOSE TO LYONS

LYONS, France, Sept. 10.—Twenty-five persons are reported to have been killed and sixty injured when an express train running from Strasbourg to Lyons was derailed tonight near this city while running at the rate of fifty miles an hour.

BILLIONS CHANGE HANDS DAILY IN MOSCOW MARKET

30 Cents for Dozen Eggs to 65 Cents for Sugar.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By the Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, Sept. 9.—Billions in paper rubles change hands daily at Moscow's several food markets, where gather peasants, officials, speculators, and the unclassed bourgeois to exchange the things they have for the things they have not and to effect a living by the transactions.

The markets usually are located in open squares, where the sellers, with their wares, range themselves in rows, either squatting on the ground behind their goods or displaying them on wooden tables, while purchasers or other peddlers stream past, inspecting the proffered articles either by pinch or smell, sampling by taste being tabooed.

Here Are Some Prices.

The Petrovka market is a typical Russian peasant market in Moscow. Looking at the meats, for all the meat stalls are arranged side by side, the single word "Skolko"—meaning how much—will elicit prices running high into the thousands, but actually low when considered in the western exchange. Some of the prices for staples encountered on an inspection of the market today by a TRIBUNE correspondent, are given herewith.

Meat is sold by the funt, which is nine-tenths of a pound, and 40,000 rubles are worth about one American dollar. It must be remembered, however, that wages paid in soviet Russia range around $10 to $15 a month.

Salt pork sells for from 28,000 to 30,000 rubles per funt, or 70 to 84 cents a pound. Roast pork and ham is more expensive, it costing 98 cents a pound. Lamb chops and beef cost 25 cents a pound. A broiler, weighing a pound and a half, costs 55 cents, while an older chicken, weighing three pounds, or a four pound duck could be bought for $1 apiece.

The prices are practically fixed and they do not vary, although there might be a slight difference in prices between markets. The law of supply and demand has fixed the prices—pork being scarcer than lamb or beef, it sells for double the price of the former, for there is little fresh pork on sale.

Butter sells for from 72 to 78 cents a pound—a very high price in Russia, which, before the war and blockade, not only supplied itself with butter at 12½ cents a pound but exported great quantities to other countries. Cheese sells from 65 to 70 cents a pound. Skimmed milk sells for 3,000 rubles a krushka, a little less than a pint. At this rate, milk sells for 20 cents a quart. Eggs are the least expensive of all the dairy products, selling for 10,000 rubles for ten—in Russia eggs are sold by the tens and not by the dozens.

Fish Main Diet.

The Russians eat more fish than either meat or eggs. At the fish stalls herrings appear to be the most important article of food, they selling from 4½ cents for small ones to 17 cents for the larger ones, the average being 10 cents. Smoked salmon and sturgeon average about 55 cents a pound.

Since the new harvest bread is abundant in Moscow, for Moscow province escaped the drought which brought famine and death to the Volga district. As a result the price of bread had dropped during the last two months from 4,000 rubles to 2,800 rubles per funt for black bread or to about 8 cents a pound. Bread which is nearly white costs 18 cents a pound, while white bread with raisins costs 23 cents a pound.

Flour 25 Cents a Pound.

Buns and small cakes range from 5 to 8 cents each. The prices of cereals and grains are high since the lack of grain makes for high priced bread. Rye flour averages 11 cents a pound. White flour sells as high as 25 cents a pound. Barley is 18 cents a pound, and rice 19 to 25 cents a pound. Farina sells for 28 cents; oatmeal for 18 cents, and beans, probably because there are more of them, sell for the cheap price of 5 cents a pound.

Sugar is another important necessity in Russia today, and sometimes it cannot be found on the market at any price. At present the little there is sells at 61 to 65 cents a pound for granulated and 83 cents a pound for lump. It is a pitiful sight to see the occasional stalls in which venders exhibit on trays a few lonesome pieces of sugar that are more valuable than jewels.

To make up for the shortage of sugar a poor quality of saccharine is being sold in small packages for 2½ cents. Imported luxuries, such as cocoa, coffee and tea, are very scarce. Cocoa is seen occasionally for 98 cents a pound. Instead of real coffee, a substitute is used which sells for 54 cents a pound. The Russians also are using a synthetic tea, costing 39 cents a pound.

Soap is a vital necessity and what there is of it, though very poor sells at about 18 cents a cake.

Vegetables are found in larger quantities than any other food and they are correspondingly cheap, cabbage costing 4½ cents a pound. Carrots, beets, and onions bring the same price. String beans sell at 8½ cents a pound, tomatoes at 10 cents a pound, turnips 5½ cents a pound, potatoes 2 cents a pound and mushrooms at 4½ cents a pound. The finest mushrooms grow in the wildest abundance in Russia.

Fruits, while not abundant, are cheap. At present grapes, pears, melons, apples, and plums are in season. Grapes sell from 23 cents to 28 cents a pound, pears 2½ cents a pound, and plums 19 cents a pound; casaba melons sell for $1 apiece. Cherries in season sold for as low as 8½ cents a pound.

MYSTERY BLAST WRECKS U-BOAT DEUTSCHLAND

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Three youths, all under 18, were killed and three men were seriously injured when an explosion occurred aboard the former German submarine Deutschland at Birkenhead today.

The submarine, which crossed from Germany to America during the war, is being dismantled in the shipyards of Clover, Clayton & Co. It was while the engine room was being taken apart that the explosion took place. Twelve men who were working in the room were hurled several yards, three of the workers being killed. All the buildings in the locality were shaken. It is believed that there may be more victims in the débris of the wrecked engine room. The injured were taken to a hospital.

The rest of the ship was not damaged, and the management is not able to explain the accident.

BROOKFIELD PLAN PROMOTERS HELD TO GRAND JURY

John Minnec, president, and W. S. Cole, sales manager of the Ideal Home Construction company, were held to the grand jury on bonds of $2,000 each by Judge Cook in the South Clark street court yesterday on charges of conspiracy to obtain money by means of a confidence game.

Nearly a hundred inhabitants of the "tented city" in Brookfield Manor, where Minnec and Cole are alleged to have promised to build scores of homes, for which they accepted part payments in advance, were present in court.

Minnec and Cole told the court that the high cost of labor and material had caused them to delay construction work at Brookfield.

KNICKERS GIVEN GIRLS' O. K. FOR SOCIAL AFFAIRS

Club Plans Dance to Aid Service Men.

BY MARTHA.

Martha, Martha, thou hast troubled thyself about many things.

The world moves on. The long haired cave man found it necessary to clip his locks. The Roman senator discarded his toga in spite of the conventions of those days and eventually the present day garb of man became the accepted thing for the Beau Brummel of Main street.

And yesterday it was firmly established that the woman of tomorrow, not copying man, but appreciating the intelligence he displays in the matter of clothes, will garb herself in knickers.

Forty-three new members pledged themselves at the meeting held in the rose and gold room of the Hotel Sherman to join the Knickerbocker club and not only wear their knickers to work but also to dancing parties and social functions.

Party for Service Men.

The first subject that came before the club was to do something for charity. Plans were perfected for a dancing party at Dreamland, where all the hundreds of club members are to be garbed in knickers. The ballroom and music have been donated by the management for the evening of Sept. 20, and the proceeds of the party will be given to aid the Ex-Service Men's Relief association.

Temporary President Miss Sally Waldman, 2459 North Albany avenue; Mrs. H. W. Batcher, 4913 Winthrop avenue, temporary secretary; Miss Ruth Baumann, 1953 South St. Louis avenue, and Miss Edna Heilman, 4006 Kenmore avenue, were only four of the scores of girls who appeared at the clubrooms garbed in knickers. Mrs. Batcher appeared in nurse's knickerbocker uniform.

For the benefit of many of the girls present who complained of the high cost of knickers, Miss Hertha Joan Nisle, 4446 North Racine avenue, gave the secret of her suit which had attracted much attention.

How to Cut Cost.

"Get a 25 cent knicker pattern and utilize the skirt of any tailored suit or jersey suit," said Miss Nisle, "and the result will be a tailored suit of knickerbockers at a minimum cost."

Next Thursday between 12 and 1 o'clock Husk O'Hara's band will give a concert at the edge of Grant park at Madison street to aid the "Knickerbocker Knights." All of the club members who can get there will wear their knickers.

Youths Charge They Are "Stool Pigeon" Victims

New complaints in the investigation of charges that the police are using "stool pigeons" to lure innocent men into crimes that they may be captured to the glory of the police, were made yesterday to the state's attorney. Alexander Schwaren, 2321 South Leavitt street George Randon, 3451 West 25th street, and Oscar Goodalis, 2314 South Hoyne avenue, all 19 years old, declare they were invited to assist in a liquor robbery and fell into the hands of Acting Chief of Detectives John W. Norton and a squad. Norton denied the charges and Chief Fitzmorris said he would welcome an investigation.

20 AUTOS RACE IN TRAFFIC JAM TO CATCH YOUTHS

Twenty motorists, shrieking their horns, plowed through the traffic jam on Sheridan road near Wilson avenue yesterday and, after a chase, helped the police catch two boys alleged to have stolen an automobile. Incidentally, they helped L. A. Buck of Escanaba, Mich., recover his Buick roadster, which had been stolen from Grant park two hours earlier.

The youths, Walter Boyce, 18, 6244 Sangamon street, and Miles Bateman, 16, 5930 Emerald avenue, drove the car to Sheridan road and Ainslie street, where they are said to have attempted to snatch a girl's purse. Her screams brought Sergt. Hugh McCarthy of the Summerdale station. The boys ran to the roadster and dashed down Sheridan road. McCarthy commandeered a passing machine and gave chase. One by one twenty cars joined in. Their horns made bedlam.

Policeman George Geiser and H. M. Strom fired a dozen shots. At Clark street and Broadway Boyce and Bateman surrendered. Police say they confessed to stealing the car.

YANK FORMS UNIT TO HELP SPAIN BATTLE MOORS

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—John Sicardo, 25, an American citizen, who won the croix de guerre while serving in France, arrived in New York today at the head of nearly 100 warlike citizens of Mexico, Cuba, Colombia, Venezuela, and other Latin American countries. They are en route to Morocco via Spain to join in the fighting against the rebellious Moors.

Sicardo is said to be a son of the Duke of Osuna in Spain and a nephew of the commander of the Spanish forces in Morocco, Gen. José de Sicardo. He plans to recruit 400 New York Spaniards and adventurous Americans before Monday and to sail in command of a force of about 500 men.

Sicardo reported 700 Argentinians, 500 Brazilians, and 1,500 Cubans have formed fighting legions and will go direct to Spain shortly aboard the steamer Alphonse XIII., sailing from Havana.

SCOTT DURANDS JAIL FOSTER SON AS LIQUOR THIEF

Charge He Looted Cellar of Wines and Whisky.

Waukegan, Ill., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Charged with having stolen $1,500 worth of whisky and wines from his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Durand of Crabtree farm, Lake Bluff, Jack Durand occupies a cell in Lake county jail, having been bound over to the grand jury in bonds of $5,000, in default of which he was obliged to go to jail.

Durand, who about fifteen years ago was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Durand, came from southern Illinois. His name was Wade Foster. He was three years old and an orphan. Adoption created considerable interest in north shore society because of the prominence of the Durands. For years he was the idol of Lake Forest society and his escapades created keen interest.

Attorney Seeks Bond.

As young Durand sits in the county jail, his attorney, A. K. Stearns of Lake Bluff, is endeavoring to get him out. He is encountering difficulty, in view of the fact that Durand, while being estranged from his foster parents, cut all connections with north shore residents.

Mr. Stearns said he will try to have Durand released by Sunday night.

Recently a $1,000 diamond ring was reported lost from the Durand home, Mrs. Durand asking the north shore police to help find it. Two young men named Nemry and Emerson were arrested and placed under bonds on suspicion they knew something about the ring. Mrs. Durand also caused the arrest of Jack on the same charge, but he was later released.

In June Jack Durand was living at home and with some friends was charged with taking two bottles of liquor and going on a joy ride. When the servants at the Durand home discovered the liquor it is said they also began helping themselves and that shortly thereafter a big quantity had disappeared.

Ordered From Home.

However, according to young Durand, his foster mother blamed him for the disappearance of the whisky and ordered him from their place. He moved into Lake Forest, where he has been living since. However, on his birthday his foster mother asked him to come home and spend the day. Young Durand went back and then arranged with her whereby he might continue working on the farm. He remained there until Friday, when Mrs. Durand swore out a warrant charging him with theft of the liquor and his hearing was set for 9 o'clock this morning before Justice James Vickerman of Lake Forest.

Friends of the youth heard of his predicament and with his consent obtained Attorney Stearns to represent him. When Mr. Stearns arrived at Justice Vickerman's office in Lake Forest he found the hearing had started at 7:30, that young Durand was not represented by counsel, the justice had bound him over to the grand jury, and he then was on his way to the county jail.

The action in the case against Durand was made under the name of Wade Foster. When the Durands adopted him he gave up this name and assumed that of Jack Durand.

"Too Expensive to Buy."

"What did you do with the booze?" Undersheriff Elvin J. Griffin asked Jack while the latter was waiting in the sheriff's office for friends to bail him out, who failed to arrive.

"Drank most of it," he replied. "A fellow wants a nip nowadays. Can't afford to buy it at 75 cents a shot. The wine sure was great, tasted nice and oily. The old lady always liked to have some wine around the house; she is fond of wine."

Efforts were made to keep the arrest secret by the Lake Forest and Waukegan authorities, as several other arrests are expected in connection with the disappearance of the Durand stock of liquor, it was said.

Teller Finds Certified Check; Can't Find Owner

He is still waiting for a worried owner to come and claim it. The check is for $1,500. It is on a Milwaukee bank, signed by Mary Greenley. Children Learn to Play With Expression

Now your child can make music. Now its practice hours become a pleasure. Children of five reveal love for tone qualities. Children formerly could not reach the pedal. A piano without a pedal is practically useless. Yet this was all your child had to practice on. Its five-finger exercises strengthened the hand, but had nothing to do with tone production. Its feet would not reach the pedal.

Now This Is All Changed

The thoughtful parents will look first to see that the piano they buy is equipped with the Junior Unfolding 2-level Pedals. A child can reach this Pedal. It can control the tone the same as a grown-up. In six weeks your child can give an artistic rendition of Schumann's "Joyous Farmer." It would use the left hand and the right foot, the same as the great teacher, Godowsky, does.

Children Now Learn Expression

Best of all, the next generation will get real music out of the piano. They will learn to pedal. A child who has been taught the piano for years without the pedal can seldom learn to pedal properly. It is like doing anything else wrong for five years. Afterwards you are correcting a big mistake. You are not doing the thing in the right manner naturally. The greatest authorities are an absolute unit in this matter. They all say, teach your child to pedal while learning to play the piano. Without the pedal is just like learning to play the violin without a bow.

Forget the Financial Side

Never mind the financial side. In fact, there is no extra charge for Junior Pedals. Lyon & Healy have six world-wide patents, but they put the Junior Pedal on all Lyon & Healy pianos—uprights, Apartment Grands, player pianos and reproducing pianos—without extra charge. Think only of the artistic side. Think how pleasant to hear Nevins' "Love Song" played by an eight-year-old. What an improvement over years of five-finger exercises.

Write today for program showing what children can do. Teachers are startled. Little children in three months can give a recital that delights the ablest musicians. With their program we will send you an illustrated circular of the Pedal and a catalog of the Lyon & Healy pianos. Come for a demonstration.

Showing the new Junior Unfolding 2-level Pedal in use.

Bring your children to our store and see the delight of the little ones. Howard Wells, the famous pedagogue, says a child that can pedal will practice twice as long with pleasure as one that cannot reach the pedals.

The musical taste of the child is given full scope; even little children make little tone pictures. The child at five imitates a song with the left hand and the singing of a bird with the right hand. All these delightful things are utterly impossible with the ordinary piano.

You Can Use the Coupon

Write your name on the coupon. Mail it today. Do not hold up your child's education for five years. And then find that it is too late. Nothing is more hopeless than a pianist who does not understand expression.

Lyon & Healy,
66-95 Jackson Blvd.

As the Junior Pedal is endorsed by Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Godowsky, Bauer, Ganz Grainger, Schmitz and other world-authorities, I am genuinely interested and would be glad to receive a descriptive catalog.

HUGHES UPHOLDS U. S. RIGHTS.

Secretary of State Hughes is making a fight for the recognition of American rights in mandated territories assigned to other nations. It is reported that he is making headway and that the allies will change their attitude.

When the United States refused to sign the treaty of Versailles and to enter the league of nations, France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, etc., took the position that the rejection eliminated America from further arrangements, destroying American equities, making it possible to discriminate against the United States and depriving it of rights which it won in the war.

Mr. Hughes, with the incoming of the new administration, undertook at once with vigorous notes to clear up this misconception. It is not the understanding of the United States that, as a result of its participation in European battles, it lost the right to fair dealings and that it necessarily subjected itself to discrimination against its rightful interests.

The position the American people took with regard to the league of nations did not expunge their record of service to the allied cause against Germany. The United States refused to undertake new obligations which it regarded as contrary to its traditions and dangerous to its future. It did not thereby concede that it had been of no service in the war.

Mr. Hughes has been making it plain that the United States believes that it won on the battlefield the rights which it now asserts. These rights are simple: That there shall not be set up discriminatory restrictions against the United States in new territories taken from Germany, Turkey, and their allies, under mandates and otherwise, for exploitation by other nations.

This is a protest which Americans will regard as sacred. We know there is a disposition now in Europe to regard as negligible the American aid which in 1918 was regarded as the only hope and that there is an even less gracious disposition to think that the American dead were too few to be considered and that the United States should be gratified if only its apologies for tardiness and slacking were accepted.

We cannot protest effectively against European sentiment, but the department of state can protest effectively against programs which ignore American participation in the war. In Mesopotamia, in African colonies, and elsewhere new territories with new resources have been turned over to the allies. The struggle for these resources is a part, a basic part, of the struggle for supremacy.

The policy of a nation obtaining possession, under any form, is one of exclusion. Treaties have failed to stop the execution of this policy. Agreements are made and broken. In some fashion it generally is found that the nation given a toe hold has intrenched itself and that a wall is built up.

This is recently true in Shantung, where the Japanese, entering by the treaty of Versailles, are able to announce now that their economic control is established and that it would be useless for other nations to attempt entrance. It is against this denial of equitable rights in territories which the war took, not only from our enemies, but, as in the case of China, from our friends, that Mr. Hughes is contending.

The United States did not ask for any territory and is not asking for any, but it does insist that it shall not be barred out of territory obtained in the war. The policy of exclusion is a war making policy.

TO AMERICANIZE OUR ALIENS.

The bill introduced in congress by Representative Johnson of Washington, chairman of the committee on immigration, at the request of Secretary of Labor Davis, to have aliens coming into this country register with the government within thirty days of their arrival and annually thereafter, paying at the time of registration a fee which will be used for their education and Americanization, appears to be worthy of general support.

The absorption and Americanization of immigrants now is one of the great problems in the development and unity of the United States. We may resent but we can hardly refute certain foreign reflections on the mixture of bloods which make up our population. We can overcome and even make an asset of this mixture if we succeed in developing a unity of purpose, ideals, and national thought. That can be done only by education.

At present, as consistently throughout the history of this country, we make no concerted national effort to turn our alien population into an American population. We allow immigrants to find their own position in American life, according to their economic necessities and natural intelligence, ambition, and abilities. The result is that they gather in colonies in our cities or in certain rural neighborhoods, the adults retaining their own national ideals and sympathies, and errors, to the great disadvantage of national unity. The children, to be sure, have the advantages of American public schools, and in a generation or two their Americanization may become complete, but even this process is restricted by the backwardness of their elders.

A registration system such as is suggested by Mr. Davis would be able to give the government accurate information on the progress of immigrants, economically, educationally, and intellectually. It would provide a chart for the direction of improvement and would provide funds for the instruction necessary to bring about improvement. It would ferret out those immigrants who come to this country merely to make money to take to Europe, and would encourage and assist those who come here to become Americans and to aid in making the prosperity of this country one with their own prosperity.

As a nation we have failed lamentably, particularly of late years, in assimilating immigration. Any method which will help overcome that failure will be good for the nation. The method of Mr. Davis appears to be the first definite suggestion along this line and therefore merits support.

THE KEEPING OF ENGLISH.

Prof. Davis, head of the English department of the Kansas State Agricultural college, made some interesting and unprofessorial remarks at the recent convention of the National Education association. In an address on "Intolerance in the Teaching of English" he said:

"The English language always has refused to be mollycoddled and doubtless always will. When it wants to break a law or turn over in bed it generally does so without asking the permission of our aching heads. Anyhow, a new force has arisen that is competent to preserve standards. Newspaper, magazine and book editors will take care of whatever standards need professional nursing.

"With the great number of newspapers and magazines now before the eyes of the American people every day, it is foolish to expect anything other than a steady drift of our language to the standards of newspaper and magazine English. Newspapers we have with us always, the English teacher we have not.

"If English teachers conceive it their duty to control the standards of language, protect its purity, and save it from the ravages of those who are using it most, they should resign and work in or upon the editorial offices of American newspapers and magazines. There they can exert a quiet, natural influence upon the standards."

The speaker named a number of publications which he said "control our language," including three newspapers—THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the Boston Transcript and the New York Times.

Prof. Davis speaks of language in terms of effectiveness. Newspaper writers have the same viewpoint. Language for language's sake does not appeal to them. For them language is not a matter of rules but a matter of use, and in its use it is perfected. Theories of propriety are subjected to the rough usage of experience and the test is effect, not some academic formula drawn from models of past practice.

Language is life and grows with the processes of life. Newspaper style, like life, is full of experimentation. It is full of excrescences like a forest. It offends the closest critic as life offends, with violences and confusions, but it is always alive and growing. It keeps alive by serving ends with vigor. Its chief fault is in the failure to discriminate in the use of terms, which is the result of haste imposed by conditions of newspaper service. This is a serious fault, but not so serious as the purist thinks it is, for, in misapplying, it creates new applications, and escapes the waste of one word by giving a new significance to another. This is not economical, but it is life. Creative energy is the essential in the preservation and evolution of a living language, and Prof. Davis touches a fundamental when he emphasizes the test of practical effectiveness and declares "we need have no fear that business English, advertising English or newspaper English is going to corrupt the pure English of Addison and Steele and college freshmen."

HAZARDS IN AMERICAN AVIATION.

One requisite in American aviation is greater security, and we believe it would be a good thing to have an investigation to determine why there are accidents so frequently; whether the fault is in the construction or the management of the planes, or in both.

We are certain that the British and French records do not contain such percentages of accidents and fatalities. Both French and British have had much more experience. They got it in the war, and they get it in commercial aviation now. The British had the great disaster with the ZR-2, but they and the French have eliminated from the operation of planes a great many hazards with which Americans are still contending.

In consequence of this greater mastery of flying, Europeans accept it as an almost normal method of travel, convenient and time saving. They are bound to go ahead in aviation more rapidly than Americans in such circumstances.

Until more encouragement is given American aviation it may be impossible for American flying to find conditions as favorable as conditions in Europe, but if our airmen are subjected to avoidable dangers it would be a good thing to find it out. There could be a correction if the men are improperly selected or trained, or if the planes are faultily designed or constructed.

THE SAGE OF OKLAHOMA.

[Peoria Transcript.]

"Miss Alice" Robertson, lone congresswoman and chief philosopher of the popular branch of our national legislature, finds difficulty in absorbing honors which are heaped upon her by friends and critics. This time she is honored in the censure of several national women's organizations which have rebuked her for failing adequately to represent her sex and the great cause of its emancipation from the thralldom of man.

Miss Robertson's specific offense consists in making the remark that she does not represent in congress the women of America but the people of the Second district of Oklahoma, which comprises both sexes. This statement raises the question, "Whom does a representative in congress represent?" "Miss Alice" has been treated by her congressional brethren with profound respect. She has been honored with the courtesy of presiding for a few moments over the house. Her published interviews have been timely, sapient, and chock-full of understandable philosophy.

If "Miss Alice" has not been thrilled with elation over her sex, the defect is temperamental and may be charged to the parochial habits of the people she represents. A woman who recognizes the limitations of her sex, as well as its opportunities and potentialities, is best fitted to speak for it. "Miss Alice" has no delusions and is not given to sex hysteria. Because she is a woman she does not assume to represent all the women in America or exclusively the women of her own district.

Her modesty may irritate the high blown pride of professional feminists who are prevented from using her as a sex billboard, but in the long run her influence will make it easier a year hence to elect women to congress. The election of Miss Jeanette Rankin, "the lady from Montana," to the war congress was not a legislative success, although Miss Rankin did not hesitate to represent the women of America.

THE MELTING POT.

When brave Ulysses left his native isle
To sail the shining main, to seek new shores
And unknown countries, bursting golden doors
To fair new realms that basked in summer's smile,
He saw no stranger sights than we today
In these our city streets, where earth has poured
From every farthest land her human horde:
Proud Nipponese, sojourners from Cathay,
Shrewd Greeks, and Turks, and roving Syrians;
Gay Spanish dons and dour Scotch peasantry,
High-hearted French, dark rogues from Barbary;
No race or breed is barred by selfish bans.
Here, where the dream of liberty had birth,
God dreams His dream, democracy for earth.

[From the Millard County, Utah, Chronicle.]

Oh, we forgot; we didn't mention the dance Friday night. It was some hummer. The girls nestled against large corporations, or were tucked under an arm beside one where a straight-on was obviously impossible, and spent the next three dances giggling and comparing notes, and more giggling. Some told that a dent would remain in three times around the hall, and competition was rife to find which one retained the impact. Sly jabs and punches and even direct hits were resorted to, so great is curiosity.

IN passing, as F. W. H. did at the Lincoln Park Natural History Museum, it might be well to set forth that the placard on the exhibit of redheaded woodpeckers informs one: "The group is represented near Glencoe, Ill., overlooking the golph grounds."

THE JESTER'S SONG.

(From Songs of Chivalry, by Ursus.)

The queen is plump and jelly-fat,
She eateth day and night;
The king is old and has no wit;
Thus is my life made bright.

Because I'm humped and spavin-knocked,
I dare to flay with jest.
The king doth grin, the queen doth laugh,
And I am at my best.

These soldiers, guards, are cowards all.
To them I thumb my nose;
Secrets I learn from chatt'ring maids,
With every wind that blows.

Yet most I say is honest, truth;
The court is used to lies.
So jesters have from ages old
In truth been bold and wise.

We wish these country orchestras
Could hear the Six Brown Brothers.

Out here on the pier, we are engulfed
In the stillness of the night water;
Except when a musky jumps, or a timid doe
Comes down to drink.
A few drops of rain strike—
We move up toward the lodge.
The orchestra across the lake
Is rendering "All by Myself."

Coming in the door we get
The tail end of that story
About the traveling salesman
As told by the ex-pugilist.

Upstairs we transfer our jeweled

There are the Spoony Couples who drive along oblivious of the Passing World, unconscious, unseeing, absolutely deaf to the signals of the horn in the Car Behind, and who continue to drive s-o s-l-o-w.

Then there are the Flivving Farmers, who raise more dust than a Street-Sweeper, and who have so many rattles in their cars they CAN'T hear anything else, who drive on serenely In The Middle Of The Road with a self-satisfied smirk on their faces, evidently bolstering up their self-esteem by repeating over and over again: "There! I'll show them they can't go past me, by Heck!"

Let us Not Forget the boys Driving Dad's b-i-g car. They are the Chumps of the Road. They drive slowly along the side of the road until someone Attempts To Pass and then smother the Pretentious Worm in a cloud of dust for Endeavoring to Belittle Dad's Car.

Of prehistoric day, thou rul'dst by dread
And sought by might to avert extinction's doom.

REAL STUDY AT HOME.

MISS GERTRUDE JACOB of the Jamaica High school, after teaching physical training for a number of years, became a teacher of hygiene. In High Points for April, 1921, she tells of her success in teaching her pupils.

Instead of using all of her time and that of her pupils in covering a certain number of pages in a textbook she took her lessons from the habits of her pupils as they related to dress, eating, personal hygiene in general, and the sanitation of their surroundings.

The instruction related to such matters as bed making, taking temperatures, lining garbage pails with paper, adding oil to the rinse water in washing woolens, and using kerosene in cleaning sinks and bath tubs. In personal hygiene the instruction was on such subjects as showes, corsets, weight and texture of clothes, exercise, foods, and eating.

At the end of a course in January, 1920, the girls (for this course was given to girls) were asked to write what they had been most helped by, as well as interested in, during the course. Three hundred and fifty-four replied; 182 had been most helped by Tilden's rules for combating disease, thirty had helped in nursing sick people, thirty had followed a routine for study, twenty-two had observed the rules of health, nineteen had formed the habit of retiring early, fifteen had got up early and studied before going to school in the morning, fourteen had taken more outdoor recreation, nine cured chronic constipation, twenty-seven had interested other people.

In January, 1921, 419 girls answered and the answers were grouped as follows:

Following the daily routine advised	147
Caring for hair properly	134
Giving up corsets	125
Better care of teeth	110
Rising earlier	90
Going to bed earlier	145
Learning to dress more quickly	88
Taking daily cold bath	81
Following rules for combating disease	76
Adding fruit to diet	70
More sensible shoes	103
More outdoor exercise	49
Better use of wraps	47
Eating less cake and candy	41
Clothing suspended from shoulders	60
Helping mother	40
Making superior cold cream	22

The Tilden rules for health which she teaches are:

1. Never eat unless comfortable in mind and body since the previous meal.

2. Never eat without a desire for the plainest and simplest kinds of food.

3. Avoid overeating by (a) observing rule 4; (b) leaving the table while still slightly hungry; (c) not eating between meals; (d) not having too great variety of food; (e) not washing food down with milk, water, tea, or coffee.

4. Thoroughly masticate your food.

The rules for combating disease which she teaches are as follows: 1. Stop eating. 2. Take a laxative or enema. 3. Drink a glass of hot water whenever the stomach feels uncomfortable. 4. When in discomfort take a hot bath. 5. Have the room thoroughly ventilated. 6. Stay in bed and keep warm. 7. When the fever has gone and the other bad symptoms have disappeared eat oranges or grape fruit for one or two days.

Miss Jacobs' rules were planned by her for people who are taking cold or feel some other acute illness developing.

ABOUT TAKING MEDICINES.

Anxious writes: "Can you recommend any vegetable compound, tonic, or anything that would strengthen the cardiac organs?"

REPLY.

Digitalis, the master key in heart troubles, is a vegetable and meets your requirements in that particular. But it is only to be used in appropriate cases and then properly. When so used it acts magically. When improperly used it may do harm. This is true of all powerful and effective remedies. The medicines which are taken by anybody any time for any purpose are entertaining, but neither helpful nor harmful.

HOW TO FEED BABY.

Mrs. E. C. writes: "1. What is the proper food for a baby 14 months old? 2. Would it be advisable to change her milk from Eagle brand to fluid milk, and how would you change it, by mixing the two, or by giving it alternately? 3. Where could I get a book on the feeding of babies from one year on?"

REPLY.

1. Breakfast—Cereal, toast, fruit sauce, eight ounces boiled milk. Lunch—Potato or rice, vegetable, toast, soup. Supper—Cereal, toast, fruit sauce, eight ounces boiled milk. Among the well cooked, finely mashed vegetables which can be used are spinach, other greens, carrots, peas, beans, potato, asparagus, cauliflower.

2. Use either milk.

3. Children's bureau, department of labor, Washington, D. C., or your state health department.

EAT BRAN AND FRUIT.

M. F. writes: "Can a person who is constipated eat potatoes or drink coffee?"

REPLY.

Yes, but they must also eat wheat bran by the pound and fruit and vegetables by the peck.

YES, IF HEAD IS HOLLOW.

J. P. K. writes: "I would like to know if it is possible for a young man to make smoke come out of his ears."

REPLY.

Just as well as a woman, but no better.

SEND FOR BOOKLET.

E. L. B. writes: "Is there anything that can be done to alleviate the suffering caused by 'hot flashes' while passing through the 'change'?

"I am 54 years old and until the last few months have been perfectly regular in my periods, but since that time have been nearly driven distracted with the 'hot flashes.' Almost in the flash of an eye I will be drenched with perspiration, and this occurs ten or fifteen times during the day. As I am a public stenographer and have to work every day this is certainly very annoying. Have you any suggestions to make as to my mode of living or anything I can do to help this condition?"

REPLY.

A FARMER'S VIEWPOINT.

Fort Dodge, Ia., Sept. 3.—In following your paper and others, too, I find your Mr. Arthur Evans makes the same mistake most of the city thinkers make on the farm situation. Your idea of the vast profits realized by the farmers the last few years is erroneous. While the good farmer made money his profits were not to be compared with the same capital invested even at pre-war values of land, as enjoyed in other lines of business. It's a popular citation of the city thinker to reason that the farmer got from $1.75 to $2 per bushel for his corn. If you care to inform yourself, go to the Board of Trade and see the number of cars of corn arriving in the primary markets and compare it with the size of the crop. Cars couldn't be had. We offered to bribe train crews for $100 a car to furnish us with cars, but got none. Then a strange thing happened. Freight rates went to their present ruinous height and the railroads, without buying a single car, were able to furnish all the cars needed. But in the meantime corn had gone far below the cost of production. Naturally the farmer hated to sell corn for sixty cents that cost him ninety cents to raise, especially when no other basic industry was offering their output at even production cost, they still exacted their profits.

Then the Federal Reserve bank put the clamp on the farmer. The farmer was forced to try and defy all economic laws and sell for less than production cost. Can any one really blame the farmers for not buying? What had he to buy with? Especially when those selling commodities held fast and demanded their war profits. I read that one company had $7,500,000 in finished farm machinery that they couldn't move. The reason is simple. They demanded their war profits, not liquidation loss as the farmer took it.

Another mistake is the costly automobiles the farmer is buying. I doubt very much if there are twenty cars selling at $2,000 or over in this county owned by farmers. And again, land speculation by farmers. If this section is a fair criterion, not one farmer in twenty speculated in land. A few bought land for homes. Most of them were afraid.

If this year's crop returns based on present year labor and material costs and pre-war land costs pay even one-half of one per cent we are lucky. And no eight hour day either.

STOP THE PRIVATE MANUFACTURE OF REVOLVERS.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—It is pleasing to note that the Hon. John M. O'Connor, justice of the Illinois Appellate court, is awake to the evil of revolver carrying and recommends the abolition of the practice. Recently John R. Thompson dealt a blow at this public menace. He urged that the manufacture of revolvers be prohibited, that all persons now having revolvers should be required to turn them over to the police or to destroy them, and, finally, that it be made a felony, punishable by imprisonment at hard labor, to have a pistol or revolver in one's possession. Mr. Thompson struck at the root of the evil.

The papers are filled daily with crimes resulting from revolver toting. State laws and ordinances, making it a misdemeanor to carry a concealed weapon, have utterly failed. Why not aid the peace authorities in their work by preventing the manufacture of revolvers and by gathering up as far as possible all of those now in existence? Probably no single thing would save more lives and prevent more suffering than stopping the manufacture of revolvers and pistols.

TO IMPROVE FARM TENANTRY.

River Forest, Ill., Sept. 1.—Hardships such as described in Mr. Evans' article in the Sept. 1 issue of the THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE are not confined to corn farmers or to tenant farmers in 1921. Farmers who rent on the common tenant basis usually are crop farmers exclusively rather than diversified farmers. It is natural that they should not have an interest in building up the soil fertility. They are anxious to get as much out of the soil as possible. The owner also wants to get as much out of the land and spend as little as possible for improvements. As a result, both owner and tenant get less than is possible.

In Canton, S. D., a practicing physician, Dr. C. L. Wendt, has perfected what he calls a partnership basis. Instead of landlord and tenant, the parties become land owner and land worker. A regular contract provides that the land owner shall make all improvements, provide shelter for stock, build fences, feeding floors and other improvements; that the land worker shall do all the work and provide the work animals and equipment; and that other costs and all the profits be divided on a fifty-fifty basis.

A lien clause in the contract permits using the land owner's borrowing facilities for the purchase of stock without having a specific mortgage on each particular head of stock. This stimulates stock raising which in turn results in a profitable outlet for roughage used as feed, provides manure for fertilizing purposes and generally increases the farm's productive capacity.

So well has this partnership basis worked that some of Dr. Wendt's "partners" now are starting their tenth year with him, compared with the usual one or two year basis of most tenant farmers. Under this condition the land worker wants the increased productivity made possible by stock raising and the land owner seeks to have his land improved. Dr. Wendt, as an owner with years of "partnership" experience, states that he considers each building improvement a 100 per cent investment. This is substantiated by other owners who have been operating on a similar basis.

FOR AMATEUR SPORTS.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—The big gallery that followed the golf match at Jackson park Labor day reminded me of the editorial I read in THE TRIBUNE a week or so ago.

This big gallery that followed this golf match did not pay one cent for admission and they were out in the fresh air and had a lot of the right kind of exercise walking around.

If some space were devoted to such events many people would be glad to take in these matches in preference to sitting in the hot sun and watching ball games which can be fixed.

Your idea of encouraging amateur sports is a move in the right direction, and if you will give these amateur events one-half the space you have given baseball it would not be long before the gamblers will lay off baseball and find something else or go to work.

TRIBUNE WALL TO SHOW BIRTH OF FREE PRESS

Mural Will Depict Famous Trial of Zenger.

Within a month work will begin in the ateliers of the Art institute on designs for the heroic paintings which are to embellish the huge wall spaces of the city room in the new Tribune Plant.

The most suitable of these designs will win for some painter in America the prize of $5,000 offered by The Tribune, as well as compensation for the (estimated) two years' work which will be required in the execution of them.

The premier panel of the twelve which are to go on The Tribune walls will fill a space approximately 40x15 feet. That space superbly commands the big city room and it has been designated as the one to picture a superb episode in the early annals of American journalism.

That episode, every detail of which is known to good lawyers to this day, and treasured by independent journalists, was the trial of John Peter Zenger, printer and publisher, for libel, and his triumphant acquittal despite powerful influences that would have welcomed a verdict of guilty. Indeed, they commanded such a verdict. But a brave jury would not be commanded, and the people rejoiced. From Boston to Charleston they rejoiced, and in New York City, the scene of the trial, they flew their flags, fired cannon, and made heroes of the acquitted publisher and his venerable lawyer.

The ceremonial figures of the provincial court, with glimpses of the public rejoicing outside, the salvos, the banners, the cheering people of that memorable day of 1735, all will be pictured, and it is hoped to infuse the painting with that high spiritual note which Bancroft epitomized on a resplendent page of his great history when he called the Zenger verdict "the morning star of the American revolution."

Herewith The Tribune gives a chronicle of the celebrated case of the Crown vs. Zenger.

THE ZENGER TRIAL

THE trial in 1735 of John Peter Zenger was perhaps the most striking incident in the struggle of the people of the American colonies against the encroachments and exploitation of agents of the king. In fact, the patriot statesman, Gouverneur Morris, expressed its importance in our political history when he said: "The trial of Zenger was the germ of American freedom, the morning star of that liberty which subsequently revolutionized America."

New York, or New Amsterdam as it was called by the Dutch, was occupied by the British in 1664 and during the succeeding reigns, not only of the Stuarts but of Anne, William and the Georges, was oppressed by royal exactions and exploitation of royal agents sent to represent the king.

Starts a Free Newspaper.

The Zenger trial was the ultimate result of a struggle of the people of New York against Gov. William Cosby, who during his incumbency, 1732 to 1736, rode rough shod over public law and private rights for the benefit of his own pocket. Under the system prevailing there was no accounting required of the governor for the expenditure of taxes laid upon the colony, and the means of challenging any acts of the governor were virtually prohibited to individuals, for it was necessary to sue in England, and few colonists could bear the expense.

In a controversy with Rip Van Dam, his successor in office, a New Yorker of high reputation in the community, Cosby, by his influence over the court, was able to refuse an accounting and deny justice. Lewis Morris, the chief justice, resigned rather than be a party to Cosby's oppression, and an adherent of the governor was put in his place. The colonial assembly protested, and a party of popular right adopted the only effectual means to meet this situation, by resorting to the press. The existing newspaper was under the shadow of the governor, so it was decided to start a new journal. An obscure printer, John Peter Zenger, was selected to publish the organ of popular rights, which was issued as "The New York Weekly Journal."

A Libel Suit.

Zenger was a poor man without much education or special talent, but it is evident from his career that he had both courage and fidelity.

The articles were contributed by James Alexander, Lewis Morris, and others, and they attacked vigorously the oppressive and unlawful acts of Cosby and his creatures. Although less frank and detailed than political writing in our day is able to be, their meaning was well understood by the public of New York and popular opinion rapidly crystallized under their impact.

The governor and his party becoming alarmed, resolved to destroy the Journal and, after failing to induce a grand jury to indict its publishers, brought, by information, the charge of false and seditious libel against its publisher, Zenger, who was arrested and placed incomunicado.

Zenger Publishes Facts.

The Monday following his arrest the Journal did not appear, but a week later it was published. It contained this statement by Zenger:

"To all Subscribers and Benefactors who take my weekly Journall. Gentlemen Ladies and Others:

"As you last week were Disappointed of my Journall, I think it Incumbent upon me, to publish my Apoligy which is this. On the Lord's Day, the 17th of this Instant, I was Arrested, taken and Imprisoned in the common gaol of this City, by Virtue of a Warrant from the Governor, and the Honorable Francis Harrison, Esq; and others in Council of which (God willing) Yo'l have a Coppy whereupon I was put under such Restraint that I had not the Liberty of Pen, Ink, or Paper, or to see, or speak with People, till upon my complaint to the Honorable, the Chief Justice, at my appearing before him upon my Habias Corpus on the Wednesday following. Who discountenanced that Proceeding, and therefore I have had since that time the Liberty of speaking through the Hole of the Door, to my Wife and Servants by which I doubt not yo'l think me sufficiently Excused for not sending my last weeks Journall, and I hope for the future by the Liberty of Speaking to my Servants thro' the Hole of the Door of the Prison, to entertain you with my Journall as formerly. And am your obliged Humble Servant."

His Attorneys Disbarred.

On habeas corpus Zenger's bail was fixed at such a sum as could not be or at any rate was not raised, so that he remained in prison pending the trial of his case, editing the paper by aid of his wife, who got her instructions through the Hole of the Door.

Zenger's counsel were two leaders of the bar, James Alexander and William Smith, yet when they presented exceptions to the proceedings against their client they were rebuked by the chief justice, De Lancey, who charged them with hoping to gain "a great deal of applause and popularity," and excluded them from practice at the bar. This is said to be the only instance in legal history of such an order being issued for such a reason.

Alexander and Smith made a stinging protest in the colonial assembly, but this could not avail to remove their disbarment, and, a young and inexperienced lawyer having been appointed by the court to defend Zenger, it became necessary to find a more competent counsel.

Zenger had been in prison since Nov. 17, 1734, and trial was finally set for Aug. 4, 1735. It was held in the city hall, at the corner of Nassau and Wall Streets.

The American newspaper fraternity might well place on this spot a tablet or other mark of commemoration of this great victory for free expression.

Trial Crowds Courtroom.

On the day of the trial the courtroom was packed and excitement ran high in the city. Alexander and Smith were there, though not at the bar; Chambers, the young attorney appointed by the court to act for the prisoner; and the Attorney General for the Prosecution. On the bench were the governor's creatures, De Lancey and Philipse, and a jury headed by Thomas Hunter was in the box.

But most conspicuous of all was a venerable man of 80, whose appearance at the side of Zenger sent a shock of surprise and concern among the adherents of the governor.

It was Andrew Hamilton, at that time the leading lawyer of the colonies, who had come all the way from Philadelphia—and it was a long way in those days—despite his age and infirmities, to defend the cause of liberty in a neighbor colony. For, as he said in the memorable speech he was about to make on behalf of Zenger: "It is an old and wise caution that when our neighbor's house is on fire we ought to take care of our own. For, though blessed be God, I live in a government where liberty is well understood and freely enjoyed, yet experience has shown us all (I'm sure it has to me) that a bad precedent in our government is soon set up for an authority in another; and therefore I cannot but think it mine, and every honest man's duty that (while we pay all due obedience to men in authority) we ought at the same time to be upon our guard against power, wherever we apprehend that it may affect ourselves or our fellow subjects."

Applaud "Not Guilty" Verdict.

The Attorney General offered witnesses to prove the publication by Zenger of the alleged libel, and took the position that the jury had no other question to pass upon, it being exclusively the province of the court to determine whether the publication was libelous. He laid it down as the law also that the truth of the publication could not be shown in defense, under the rule maintained in England, that in criminal actions the greater the truth the greater the libel, inasmuch as publishing the truth was more likely to cause public disturbance and breach of peace than publishing a falsehood.

On these points Hamilton took issue, and although the court ruled against him, made so adroit and telling an appeal to the jury that a verdict of Not Guilty was promptly rendered, amid the cheers of the crowd in the courtroom.

When the court rebuked the crowd, Capt. Norris, son-in-law of Lewis Morris, boldly replied that "Cheers were customary on such occasions."

That night Hamilton was given a banquet by leading citizens of New York and the next day took ship for home amid the cheers of the people and the salvos of cannon. Later the Assembly voted him the Freedom of the City and the resolution, inclosed in a gold case, was taken to Philadelphia by one of the aldermen and presented to the hero of this historic victory for a free press.

Story of Trial Stirs England.

Zenger resumed editorship of the Journal and died in 1746. He was succeeded in the editorship by his plucky and able wife, who thus became probably the first woman editor in America. Later his son succeeded to the chair, but the Journal went out of existence in 1751. Zenger is said to have been buried in Trinity Churchyard, but his grave is not known.

The report of the trial meantime had gone broadcast, arousing great interest, not only throughout the colonies, but in England. It established in American law principles essential to our freedom, for, as great men have repeatedly declared, the freedom of the press is an essential to the freedom of the people.

Hamilton had declared and the jury by their verdict had approved the principle that what was law in England was not necessarily law in America. He had affirmed and succeeded in inducing a jury to accept despite the opinion and influence of the presiding judges that in charges of libel, as in other crimes, the jury was to determine both the law and the fact. This was an advance toward freeing men from the oppression of judges appointed by the government and subject to the influence of intrenched power.

The moral effect of the victory furthermore was to stimulate the spirit of the people throughout the colonies to combat oppression and exploitation. It developed colonial solidarity and a determination to be free from monarchial rule, which forty years later was expressed in the Declaration of Independence, the war of independence, and the establishment of the republic.

Here is Chicago's entry in the cake baking contest at the Cook county fair.

Mrs. George C. Ray, 6740 Lafayette avenue, has accepted the defi of Mrs. G. H. Arpst of Palatine for a cake baking contest at the Cook county fair at Palatine Sept. 13-18. Mrs. Ray says she is not afraid to bake cake with any women in the world. And she doesn't care what kind of a cake it is.

"Cake making is not difficult," Mrs. Ray says, "if you get a reliable recipe, follow it closely, and use common sense. The success of the cake depends one-third on the mixing and two-thirds on the baking."

NAVAL ACADEMY TO GET AMERICA, OLD CUP WINNER

Boston, Mass., Sept. 10.—The schooner yacht America set out on its last voyage today. The boat, which went to England seventy years ago and brought back the cup that has since become the classic trophy of yachting competition the world over, is bound for Annapolis, to be turned over to the government for preservation at the naval academy.

A naval subchaser, which picked it up at the shipyards where it has been fitted out, will tow it on the trip, the itinerary of which includes stops at many ports between here and Annapolis in the next twenty days.

Arrived at Annapolis, the America will be delivered to Secretary Denby by Charles Francis Adams II., skipper of the Resolute in the latest defense of America's cup against Shamrock IV. a year ago. Mr. Adams, as chairman of the America restoration committee, acting in behalf of S. H. W. Foster, who made the gift through the Eastern Yacht club, will receive in return $1, the government's nominal purchase price.

JAP EXCLUSION TO BE TESTED IN HIGH COURT

Case from Hawaii Is Key to Citizenship.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Attorney General Daugherty has been petitioned by a number of patriotic organizations to institute proceedings to cancel the naturalization of Japanese under the war legislation of 1918, particularly those Japanese who are still serving in the United States navy or are enrolled in the reserve forces of either the army or navy and therefore subject to call to active service.

The general question of the right of Japanese to naturalization as American citizens is scheduled to be passed upon by the Supreme court at the forthcoming term.

In this case, the hearing of which has been postponed several times for diplomatic reasons, a Japanese living in Hawaii contends he is entitled to naturalization on the ground that the Japanese are in reality a white race and therefore not excludable from acquirement of American citizenship under the act limiting the privileges of naturalization to white persons and those of African nativity or descent.

Wickersham Attorney for Jap.

The argument in behalf of the Japanese appellant is to be presented to the court by George W. Wickersham, former attorney general, and the appeal will be opposed by James M. Beck, the solicitor general.

Under the act of May 29, 1918, authorizing immediate naturalization of aliens serving in the armed forces of the United States, 218 Japanese have been made American citizens by federal courts, although the act provided that the only aliens other than Caucasians and Africans entitled to such naturalization were Filipinos.

The department of labor under the Wilson administration appears to have been responsible for this disregard of the act of 1918 by holding that Japanese who served in the armed forces were entitled to naturalization. Secretary of Labor Wilson, however, eventually perceived the error and reversed the ruling.

Harding's Attitude.

The attitude of the Harding administration was stated in the following letter on June 6 last to E. J. Henning, assistant secretary of labor:

"You are informed that the administration view of this department on that question is in harmony with that entertained by the preceding administration—to-wit: That congress has made no provision for the naturalization of other than free white persons and persons of African nativity and descent, with the exception of Filipinos, referred to in the seventh subdivision of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906, as amended by the act of May 9, 1918, and that Japanese are not included within any of the admissible classes referred to. Steps were initiated by the preceding administration, and are now being carried out by this department, to have a test case involving the above issue brought before the Supreme court of the United States.

"The number of Japanese who have been admitted since March 1, 1921, has not been tabulated, but it may be safely stated that few, if any, Japanese have been naturalized since the date named."

Daugherty's Views.

Attorney General Daugherty stated his policy in a letter of June 14, which follows:

"With regard to naturalization matters generally, this department works in close coördination with the department of labor. Where evidence is presented that any person has for any reason been naturalized illegally, the usual procedure is to transmit the papers in such case to the proper United States attorney in order that the statutory machinery for the cancellation of the naturaliaztion certificate may be put into operation.

No Reason for Exceptions.

"This is, and has been, the general course of the department, and it finds no sufficient reason to make an exception of any special class or classes, either by exempting them from the provisions of the law or by exercise of special diligence against them. It has not issued instructions to the United States attorneys concerning any special class.

"The foregoing statements may be applied to the cases of Japanese naturalized, or seeking naturalization, under the act of 1918."

John D. Files Appeal from Income Tax Order

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller today filed in the federal District court papers in an appeal from the decision recently rendered requiring him to pay income taxes totaling $292,000. The taxes were assessed on difference between the market value of the stocks of the Prairie Oil and Gas company and the Ohio Oil company, which, in the form of a dividend, were exchanged for shares of the Prairie Pipe Line company and the Illinois Pipe Line company when the former corporations were ordered severed from the pipe lines.

Next Move in Small Case Postponed Until Sept. 16

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 10.—Conferences between State's Attorney Mortimer and counsel for Gov. Small over the question of selecting another county in which to try the Small embezzlement case probably will not be held before Sept. 16, James M. Graham, one of the governor's counsel, said today. Mr. Graham's statement was made following a conference between C. C. Leforgoe and George B. Gillespie, both of counsel for Gov. Small, at Chicago yesterday.

The allied powers will reply to the state department's last note immediately, assuring the United States of equal rights with the members of the league of nations in all mandated territory and adopting Washington's suggestions regarding the terms of the mandates. The council of the league has acquiesced to the allied view and it will send a note to Washington covering the matter.

Mr. A. J. Balfour of Great Britain assured the assembly this morning that a new agreement had been reached and the mandate problem will be rapidly solved.

The blame for competitive and excessive armament was placed on the United States by Mr. Balfour, who stated frankly that his government and the other great powers would do nothing to limit or reduce armaments unless the United States participated in the scheme.

So long as the big American munition works, which were developed early in the war in time to supply shells and other materials to the allies, are allowed to operate freely Mr. Balfour claims the same right for the British arms makers, arsenals and naval shipyards, regardless of the fact that the league to which the government has adhered, was founded on diametrically opposed principles.

"How can the nations within the league set to work on the question of disarmament until they are sure their example is going to be followed or accompanied precisely by a similar policy on the part of the nations outside the league?" he said.

STORM CLOUDS FORM AGAIN IN HARDIN COUNTY

Miners and the Populace Renew Feud.

Rosiclare, Ill., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Affairs in the Hardin county situation took a decided turn for the worse today.

From Harrisburg came the ultimatum of the union men that they proposed to hold a public meeting in Elizabethtown Sunday afternoon. Edward Carbine, general organizer for the union, was to be the chief speaker, the notice stated.

The Hardin county people promptly retaliated by sending out word that no person not a resident of Elizabethtown would be permitted to pass into the town through the line of 250 special deputies.

Carbine, meanwhile, in a wire to Adj. Gen. Dickson, asked that his testimony before Gov. Small's commission be taken at Harrisburg instead of in Springfield.

Dickson Issues Warning.

Adj. Gen. Dickson and the two members of Gov. Small's cabinet, Directors Arnold and Medill, promptly acted in an effort to stop the two belligerent moves. Director Medill served notice on the union men that they should not attempt to hold a public meeting in view of the tenseness of local feeling.

He also sent word to Carbine to desist from the advertised undertaking.

Adjt. Gen. Dickson advised Sheriff Cox that any instructions, official or unofficial, authorizing deputies to stop and search strangers should be withdrawn. The adjutant general explained that the three commissioners are here for the purpose of hearing all evidence it is possible to obtain, and that any courts that would tend to stop prospective witnesses would act to break down the purpose of the investigation.

Look for Trouble Today.

The two developments have joined today in increasing the bad feeling between the two factions, and the crux of the situation, so far as real trouble is concerned, is believed to be due tomorrow. If there is any attempt made by Carbine and his allies to hold a roundup in Elizabethtown real fighting rapidly would ensue, in the judgment of well informed men on both sides. Whether the orders from Gov. Small's representatives will restrain the advancing union men remains to be determined by tomorrow's actions.

Adjt. Gen. Dickson and the two directors came to Rosiclare this morning to take the statements of men and women here.

Several wives of union men who claim to have been deported from Elizabethtown by force told their stories. The investigation in Elizabethtown continued until after midnight, and will last through Sunday and Monday.

Hear More Testimony.

Elizabethtown, Ill., Sept. 10.—Reports that women and children were driven out of Rosiclare last week by mine guards and private detectives were denied today by the women themselves, testifying before the special commission sent there by Gov. Len Small to investigate disorders in the fluor spar mining district.

Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson, chairman of the commission, announced tonight, after hearing several union miners and their wives, that there was "absolutely no truth in these reports."

Colorado Board Reverses Cut in Pay of Miners

Walsenburg, Colo., Sept. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Colorado state industrial commission today set aside a wage reduction at two coal mines of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company in Huerfano and Las Animas counties and placed the old wage scale in effect, pending further investigation.

MUST CUT WAGES TO CUT FARE, SAY SURFACE LINES

Charge Report Distortion to Show Big Profits.

Williston Fish, general manager of the Chicago Surface Lines, issued a statement yesterday in answer to recent assertions that the "profits" of the street car companies during the first seven months of 1921 were so large that a return at least in the general direction of the "5 cent fare" is to be expected.

Described briefly, Mr. Fish's statement was a declaration that the proponents of an immediate reduction in fares have taken an entirely wrong set of figures for the "profits" of the ines. He said the figures used were those derived from subtracting operating expenses from receipts. From these, he said, must be deducted the city's share of the receipts, interest on indebtedness, payments to sinking funds, corporate expenses, and federal taxes.

Return of 6½ per Cent.

He placed the actual profits of the companies—the amount available for the stockholders—at $1,141,262.91. This, he said, indicates a probable return of about 6½ per cent for the current year.

Mr. Fish further said that a 5 cent fare would not pay operating expenses and would constitute confiscation of the companies' properties under present conditions. He also said that a 6 cent fare would not cover operating expenses and that even a 7 cent fare, i fthe companies are to meet their outstanding obligations, would mean a reduction in wages.

Conclusions Are Erroneous.

The statement follows:

"There is no desire on the part of the Chicago Surface Lines to try the fare case in the newspapers. At the same time it cannot refrain from protesting against the erroneous and misleading comments on its revenue, particularly with references to its socalled 'profits.'

"Figures have been taken from the reports of the companies filed with the Illinois commerce commission, but the conclusions drawn have failed to take into consideration other facts which have an important bearing on the actua lprofits of the companies. The socalled net receipts of the companies for seven months, as shown by the figures filed with the commission, aggregate $8,237,948.28, but from this total there must be deducted many millions of dollars before the profits of the companies are ascertained. Expressed in tabular form the figures are as follows:

Amount for the seven months in question of earnings, after deducting operating expenses	$8,237,948.28
From this must be deducted: Amount due to the city of Chicago for the seven months in question, under the ordinances (55% of the net dividends divisible receipts)	1,970,996.53
Leaving a net return to the companies of	$6,266,951.75

From this $6,266,951.75 there must be deducted the following items:

[1] Amount due for the seven months in question for interest on bonded indebtedness and loans of the companies held by the public	$4,809,158.55
[2] Amount due for the seven months in question, pursuant to sinking fund requirements under mortgages given by the companies for the benefit of the bondholders	207,083.31
[3] Amount due for the seven months in question for corporate expenses and federal corporation taxes	109,446.98	$5,125,688.84
Leaving net for the stockholders		$1,141,262.91

Traffic on Decline.

"The said net of $6,266,951.75 shows a return at the rate of 6.73 per cent per year on the capital or purchase price of the properties of the companies as fixed by the ordinances, which purchase price is in substantial accord with the valuation of said properties fixed by the public utilities commission by its order of Nov. 5, 1920.

"In view of the fact that traffic has been steadily declining for several months past, the management believes that the annual rate of return for the entire year ending Jan. 31, 1922, will not be in excess of 6½ per cent, which is no more than the companies received during the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1917, when the fare was 5 cents but operating expenses were low."

BEG YOUR PARDON

In telling of the death of Rensselaer W. Cox Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Cox of 1539 Astor street, an article in THE TRIBUNE Saturday mentioned him as Ranch W. Cox Jr., of 1539 Archer street.

Bernard J. Mullaney of the Peoples Gaslight and Coke company says the gas in the house of John Fitel, 506 West 39th street, has not been cut off, as THE TRIBUNE stated last Thursday, in telling of Fitel's starving wife and children.

Miss Dutton of the Ontra cafeteria, 125 North Wabash avenue, protests that "Martha," on Aug. 15, said a banana cost 10 cents, when the price was 5 cents.

It was stated in THE TRIBUNE yesterday that Mrs. Mary Brown, 65 years old, had been drowned in a bath tub in her home at 12 South Kostner avenue. The report, obtained from the police, was erroneous. Mrs. Brown was not drowned. She died from a paralytic stroke induced by a cerebral hemorrhage. The correct address is 14 South Kostner avenue.

Prisoner's Death Is Laid to Wood Alcohol

Merle Lathrop, 2867 Jackson boulevard, 27 years old, arrested after he had driven his motorcycle against the automobile of Mrs. W. H. Gilbert, 2043 Warren avenue, at Roosevelt road and Ashland avenue, was found unconscious in his cell at the Maxwell street police station late Friday night by Tom Galey, lockup keeper. He died at the county hospital yesterday, supposedly from wood alcohol poisoning.

PERSHING SAILS SOON TO CONFER MEDAL ON POILU

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—John J. Pershing, general of the armies of the United States and chief of staff, is going to France to confer the congressional medal of honor upon the French unknown soldier dead.

Secretary of War Weeks announced that President Harding had instructed Gen. Pershing to proceed abroad on this mission. The general will sail Sept. 14 and probably will be gone until the middle of October.

The medal of honor was specially voted by congress recently as the tribute of the nation to the French unknown hero dead. Gen. Pershing will confer the medal at appropriate military ceremonies planned by the French government, "as another evidence of the historic relations which have always prevailed between the two republics," Mr. Weeks said.

M'CORMICK SEES KU KLUX KLAN AS REAL MENACE

More than 8,000 Negroes gathered in convention stood up and cheered in the Eighth regiment armory last night when Senator Medill McCormick told of his bill now in the senate to do away with lynching and then made an attack on the Ku Klux Klan.

"If there is any people in all America who exemplify faith, hope and charity, it is the American Negro," said Senator McCormick. "He has faith to struggle and charity to forgive those who have wronged him.

"I have introduced in the United States senate a bill empowering the President to appoint a commission on lynching, and I shall not let up until it becomes a law."

Directing his attention to the Ku Klux Klan, Senator McCormick said:

"The members of the Ku Klux Klan make up a lawless mob and their activities have reached the stage where they will take the lives of both whites and blacks, men and women alike."

A Chinese Causeway

Chinese Furniture and Decoration has had a strong influence on the Western World since the 18th century. Some of Chippendale's best work was done in the Chinese manner. Lacquered Furniture is the best known Chinese work to-day.

FREE ICE SEASON ENDS; 1,000 TONS GIVEN TO POOR

Donations to Tribune Fund Total Nearly $5,000.

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

More than 1,000 tons of free ice was distributed to poor mothers and children of Chicago through THE TRIBUNE free ice fund this summer.

Yesterday marked the close of the general distribution of ice under the fund after three months of constant delivery throughout the city and suburbs.

According to the report of the free ice department of the United Charities of Chicago, under supervision of Miss Gertrude Birkhoff, more than 1,000 tons was distributed by fifty Jewish, Protestant and Roman Catholic, and nonsectarian hospitals, day nurseries, settlement houses, community centers and other organizations, as well as by the ten districts of the United Charities located in Chicago.

Some of the Agencies' Work.

The largest single agency distributing free ice coupons was the Juvenile court pensions to mothers' department, which made use of coupons calling for more than 500,000 pounds. The Jewish Home Finding society, Social Service bureau, and Consumptives' Relief society distributed a quarter of a million pounds. Another like amount was placed through the Catholic settlements and day nurseries of the city, and Protestant and non-sectarian organizations disposed of the balance.

The municipal tuberculosis sanitarium distributed more than 100,000 pounds through its seven dispensaries.

Only One Complaint.

With so many different agencies calling for the delivery of free ice through a period of three months, it is remarkable that but one complaint was received. It was from a day nursery regarding the nondelivery of ice, and that complaint was promptly attended to.

It is to Miss Birkhoff that the United Charities gives the greatest credit for managing such a large business venture without friction. Much assistance was rendered by Stephen A. Malatesta, in charge of delivery of ice through the Consumers' company.

But the great debt of gratitude is owed to the thousands of TRIBUNE readers, children and grownups, who contributed nearly $5,000 this summer for the purchase of free ice.

SCHOLARS' COURT TO METE JUSTICE OUT TO "CULPRITS"

DR. ERNEST A. SMITH. [J. D. Toloff Photo.]

An experiment in democracy will be inaugurated in the first six grades of the schools in district 75, North Evanston, when they open tomorrow.

Supt. Ernest A. Smith announced yesterday, a new course in character building for the civics, morals, and personal conduct classes.

"Every class in every grade will elect a president, secretary and three members, who will form a council," he said. "Their terms will last six weeks. Each school will be self-governing.

"If a boy says a naughty word in a football game, he'll be brought to trial before his class council, which will meet every Friday. If a girl loses her temper, or irritates her neighbors by whispering, they will also be tried by their classmates."

Dr. Smith will give buttons to all pupils tomorrow with the inscription, "I Serve." When culprits are found guilty of misconduct their buttons will be taken away to be won back by good behavior.

GEN. WOOD PLANS ARMY OF DEFENSE FOR PHILIPPINES

"Common Sense Shows Need," He Says.

BY WALTER WILGUS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MANILA, Sept. 10.—Active steps to build up a defensive force in the Philippines, probably by the reorganization of the Philippines national guard, are indicated as among the first measures which will be put through by Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, if his appointment is confirmed by the senate. In a statement to a local newspaper today Gen. Wood said:

"Common sense tells us that we need here a force adequate for our protection. We have now nothing but constabulary, which is insufficient for national defense purposes. I am going to work for the establishment and maintenance of the needed force, or at least for a basis of it."

Serio-Comic Guard.

The national guard formed during the war has had a serio-comic existence. Nominally, when it was organized, it was a division on a war footing, but it never has functioned as a division. The commander in chief was former Gov. Francis Burton Harrison, whose principal connection therewith was to be photographed in a major general's uniform, including spurs. Educated Filipinos rushed to get commissions, but the recruiting of privates and noncommisioned officers languished by comparison.

Since the war it has consisted principally of Brig. Gen. Ralph Jones, a constablary officer who was Gov. Harrison's aid de camp. Recently the legislature decided to convert it into the Philippine air service, but the plan fell through on account of the financial stringency.

Await Disarm Meeting.

What is indicated now is that Gen. Wood will form a nucleus of reserve troops to be expanded as circumstances dictate. The result of the disarmament and far eastern conference at Washington is expected to have a bearing on the plans.

Properly trained and officered, such a force would be, in the opinion of military authorities here, a valuable adjunct to the regular army forces in the islands. At present the only native organization, except for a few regiments of Philippine scouts, is the constabulary, which is occupied with its duties of patrolling the provinces. available for the development of the country. The paper points out that if armament competition continues the advantage will accrue to Germany, as it is freed from the crushing burden of an army and navy and thus is able to devote its resources to the recovery of its trade.

"Drys" Fight Proposal to O. K. 2.75% Beer for Tax

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—Proposals to put a billion dollars in the federal treasury by legalizing and placing a heavy tax on 2.75 per cent beer will be fought by the Anti-Saloon league.

"The American people wil spend a billion dollars if necessary to defend the constituton, but they will never be bribed by any amount of money, no matter how large, to nullify the constitution," Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, said in attacking the plan of Senator Calder, New York, to put a tax of $5 a barrel on 2.75 per cent beer.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

Big Portions: You never get a mere dab of food here. Our portions are big—often ample for two. We purposely make them large so they may be shared by two, further reducing dining costs. And unlike other good restaurants, there is no extra charge for portions shared by two.

More People Dine Here Daily Than in Any Other High Class Chicago Restaurant

Breakfast—Try It

If you want to really enjoy a breakfast, try one here. Our ventilating system keeps the air fresh and cool, and you can have breakfast, smoke your cigar and read your paper in real comfort! A few selections:

Half Cantaloupe, the biggest cantaloupe we can get	20c
2 fried eggs, 4 strips of bacon (the eggs are fresh and fried in butter	30c
Calves Liver and Bacon	35c
Honey Waffle, with three strips of bacon, butter, pure maple sap or honey	25c
Fresh Toast and Butter	5c
2-cup Pot of Coffee	10c
Certified Milk, bottle	15c

The North American is the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since the days of "Rector's:"

Whole Baby Lobster, hot or cold, with melted butter or chili sauce	65c
One dozen Shrimps with Cocktail Sauce	30c
Soft shell Crabs	60c
Fried Frogs Legs with Tartar sauce	50c
Broiled Halibut with peas or you may have	35c
Breast of Chicken with Bacon	65c
Fried Chicken (dark meat) with Bacon	55c
Vegetable Dinner with Corn on the Cob	35c
Pork Tenderloin	35c

And that fact tells the story from A to Z. It tells the story of the quality of our food, the size of portions, and our low prices better than mere words.

When a theatre must hang out the "Standing Room Only" sign it is the biggest possible advertisement they can have. It means their performance is well liked. It means it is popular. And it could not be popular if it was not good.

It is equally true that if our food and prices were not right; and if this were not a convenient and comfortable place to dine; we would not be feeding more people than any other high class restaurant in Chicago.

But in spite of the large number of people who dine here every day, and all during the day—from breakfast to midnight—our capacity is such that there is always a table for you. When you have selected your food, there is always a table ready.

The number of people who daily dine here means something else to you. The restaurant business is just like any other. The more business, the better the food, and the bigger the portions it can give at low prices. And so, no other good restaurant or hotel can meet our food qualities, portions and prices, until they reach our volume. And as our business grows bigger our portions will do likewise and our prices will go down even further.

The North American Restaurant is today the one big outstanding success among good dining places. Not in Chicago—or in any other City—is there a restaurant just like it. If you haven't tried it it will pay you to do so.

BATTLE SCARRED HERO MUST HAVE JOB—OR EVICTION

Despite Wounds He Can Do a Real Man's Work.

BY CAPT. T. J. BONNIWELL.

Here is a real man. He's the type of American to be proud of. He's just recovered from a flock of war wounds, and his landlady said yesterday: "Out you go with your wife and babies if you don't pay the rent."

But H. is out of a job. He's broke. He wants steady work and hard work. Can you help him?

H. was born in St. Louis of German parentage. At the outbreak of the war he shipped in a cattle boat to England and enlisted with the "Tommies" under a Swedish name. While fighting the German forces he received a bad bayonet wound, March 10, 1915.

Gassed and Shot Twice.

Twenty days later the enemy flung out one of their first gas clouds and he was a victim. Then he was sent back to the fray again. On Sept. 25, 1915, a bullet hit him directly under his right eye. Going over the top on April 10, 1916, a shell fragment bit off a part of his left foot. Dec. 9, 1916, he was gassed again.

But in spite of his wounds there's life in the old trench fighter yet. He can do a good, honest day's work—and wants to. He spent all his life railroading, but that rifle ball affected the vision in his right eye. Phone the American Legion for him.

1,000 Are Seeking Places.

Do you want an accountant? A technical expert? A hustling, grinning, unsweating salesman? Skilled or unskilled labor? The Legion can supply you, Mr. Employer, with the man you're looking for. There are nearly 1,000 jobless ex-service men waiting day after day in the Legion's offices for news from you.

LEGION MEETING TO START AID FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

Rehabilitation of the ex-service man and woman, whose earning capacity has been lessened as the result of the war, will be one of the subjects discussed at the third annual convention of the Illinois department, American Legion, Oct. 10 and 11.

Commander William R. McCauley will take up the problem from every angle in his report to the 900 delegates who will attend. While Illinois has made greater progress than any other state in the nation, there is still much to be done. As the first step in refitting Illinois service men and women to civilian life, the Legion has conducted a survey throughout the state. Col. Charles R. Forbes, head of all the government soldier bureaus, on his recent visit to Chicago, said he thought highly of the plan that he had adopted it as the model for every district in the country.

Invitations have been sent to both Vice President Coolidge and Gen. Pershing to attend the convention.

WIFE FAILS TO APPEAR.

When Mrs. Lettie Corderey, 41 years old, [illegible] West Washington boulevard, and Lester Payne, 34 years old, 524 North Troy street, appeared in the Desplaines street court yesterday, charges of disorderly conduct were dismissed because Payne's wife did not appear.

GRAND JURY TO SIFT 'GRAVEYARD' OF 'STOLEN' CARS

Crowe Calls Owners of Autos Found.

Forthwith subpœnas for the twenty-one owners of scuttled automobiles dug out of the "auto graveyard" near Summit, Ill., were issued yesterday by Ben Newmark, chief investigator for State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe.

The summons call for the appearance of the men Monday morning at the Criminal court building, where they will be questioned in connection with charges that the cars were buried by a gang which disposed of machines for persons seeking to collect insurance. The value of the machines thus far found is set at between $50,000 and $100,000.

Will Ask for Indictments.

Following the questioning of the men Mr. Newmark announced he would immediately go before the grand jury and ask for indictments on conspiracy charges. Witnesses from several Chicago insurance companies will testify.

First evidence of an automobile gang having for its purpose the disposal of stolen machines was found early in August. At that time boys playing near an abandoned quarry on the Des Plaines river near the Santa Fé railroad at Summit noticed a car. Police investigated and with the aid of a diver the machines were recovered.

List of Cars Found.

Members of the automobile squad under Newmark have been investigating for the last two weeks. Cars found and their owners follow:

P. Chavis, 1648 West Roosevelt road, a Paige seven passenger car.

Raymond Powers, 937 West 54th place, a Packard two passenger.

Frank King, 2054 North Laramie avenue, Elgin five passenger.

Sam Pincus, 1507 South Turner avenue, a Mercer five passenger.

Charles E. Sawyer, 2144 Jackson boulevard, a Chandler seven passenger car.

T. J. Sullivan, 5356 South Halsted street, an Oakland five passenger.

L. Grodzinas, 6108 Vernon avenue, Ford.

William Whitehead, 6117 Calumet avenue, a Chalmers five passenger.

B. Ronsky, 1633 West 12th street, a Dodge taxi.

Harry Young, 2846 39th place, a Studebaker five passenger.

Fred Davis, 1431 South Sawyer avenue, a Crow Elkhart car.

Stanley Maciek, 3315 Auburn avenue, a Packard.

Dave Raff, 1344 South Clifton Park avenue, a Stutz five.

George Novak, 7320 Oglesby avenue, a Stevens Knight four passenger.

H. Click, 1724 Taylor street, a Dodge taxi.

Thomas Fahey, 7940 May street, a five passenger Paige.

William Thornbugh, River Forest, a Paige sport car.

Rose Salvatore, 1509 Taylor street, an Oakland five passenger.

C. D. Gun, a Reo Checker cab.

Also a Ford car, owner not yet identified.

The National Fire Insurance company, the Chicago Motor Club Insurance company, and the C. D. Green Insurance company are three of the complaining companies.

Threatens Wealthy Woman for Vocal Study Funds

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—William M. Gibson, 25, of Black Water, Mo., was held in $500 bail today for examination on a charge of having sought to frighten wealthy persons into paying for furtherance of his vocal training. The police say Gibson wrote threatening letters to his prospective victims, who included Mrs. E. H. Harriman and others, demanding loans and warning them that unless they were forthcoming he would turn bandit and prey on wealthy women.

Gibson had sung in several musical shows in western cities and came to New York some time ago to embark upon a career.

FALL FROM WAGON FATAL.

An unidentified man, 50 years old, died yesterday in Alexian Brothers hospital of a fractured skull, sustained when he was thrown from a city garbage wagon he was driving. The body is at 3037 Lincoln avenue.

EVANSTON'S 6TH J. P. REFUSES TO BE 'BAMBOOZLED'

Samuel Harrison, justice of the peace in Evanston for twenty-five years, announced last night that he would "spring a sensation some time this week that'll knock the hats off the five upstarts," who, he says, are trying to "shanghai" him out of office.

Justice Harrison continued to perform marriages and other services for Evanstonians after it was announced last June that he came down the homestretch sixth in an election for five J. P.'s.

Assistant State's Attorney Michael W. Cagney notified him on Aug. 29 that he had no legal right to act as a justice. Mr. Harrison merely shrugged his shoulders and went on holding court.

"I'm the only authorized justice of the peace in Evanston, sir," he said last night. "They can't bamboozle me. Just wait until I blow off the roof with my sensation. I'll show the community, in which I've lived fifty years, that my five rivals are serving illegally and should be ousted."

"WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF YOU HAD $15,000,000?"

John T. McCutcheon

YOUNG HARRY BACON'S only bid to fame was a reputation acquired in college and army camp as an amateur boxer. Then, unexpectedly and irrevocably, he became the possessor of $15,000,000. He wondered if Muriel Lannard would still refuse to marry him. Harry would like to tell the coldly polite woman he aimed to make his mother-in-law all about his money. But he controlled this natural desire and decided to keep his good fortune secret for a while.

SUCH is the start of "An Heir At Large," the new cartoon-serial written by John T. McCutcheon, which starts tomorrow morning in The Tribune. You remember with what breathless interest you followed "The Restless Age," McCutcheon's last cartoon-serial. This new one is a thrilling tale of love, money and adventure. It will be followed eagerly by half a million readers of The Daily Tribune.

THE cartoon-serial is a new form of illustrated literature devised by McCutcheon. Many readers remember well some of his earlier serials, including "Congressman Pumphrey, the People's Friend," and "Dawson, '11, Fortune Hunter." McCutcheon has made this form of cartoon a Monday morning institution to such an extent that no hero in fiction is so widely talked about in everyday conversation as those created by this masterly cartoonist and humorist. You'll regret missing a single installment of this weekly serial.

OPEN MONDAY EVENING

FOUR WEDDINGS IN ONE DAY DRAW SOCIETY'S NOTICE

Miss Hobart Is Bride of Leonard Prince.

The wedding of Miss Hannah Neil Hobart and Leonard Morton Prince took place yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at St. Andrew's chapel, St. James Episcopal church. The service was read by the Rev. Frank Meyers, assistant rector. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Walter Scott Hobart of San Mateo, Cal. Miss Sarah de Witt Coffin of Rose Valley, Cal., was the bride's only attendant, and Spencer H. Logan of Chicago served as best man for Mr. Prince. After the wedding there was a supper at the Drake.

Only immediate relatives were present, including the bride's mother, Mrs. Charles Wheeler Jr. of Bryn Mawr, Pa.; the bride's sister and brother, Miss Ruth Mary Hobart, and Walter Scott Hobart Jr., and the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Halleck Taylor of Chicago. Mr. Prince and his bride will reside temporarily, after returning from a wedding journey, with Mr. and Mrs. Taylor at 59 East Division street.

Rain Prevents Garden Service.

The rain yesterday morning necessitated a change of plans for the marriage of Miss Mary Dennehy and Hempstead Washburne, which took place at 11 o'clock at the Winnetka residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy of 1549 Astor street. The service was to have been read in the garden and the wedding breakfast was to have been served there, but instead both the ceremony and the breakfast took place in the house.

Mgr. Fitzsimmons of the Holy Name cathedral officiated. The bridegroom is a son of Mrs. Hempstead Washburne of 1235 Astor street. About 250 persons witnessed the ceremony which made Miss Dennehy the wife of her childhood playmate. Both young persons are popular members of society's younger set.

In Mother's Wedding Gown.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of white satin with trimmings of Spanish lace and a veil of tulle held with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried white valley lilies.

The maid of honor, Miss Virginia Dennehy, and the bridesmaids, Miss Annette Washburne, Miss Isabel Watkins, Miss Catherine Rehm and Miss Dorothy Palms of Detroit, wore frocks of lavendar and blue chiffon, with hats to match, and carried bouquets of lavendar orchids.

Gratiot Washburne was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Clarke Washburne, another brother, Farwell Winston, Richard D. Stevenson, Thomas C. Dennehy Jr., Boardman Conover, Alexander H. Revell Jr., Vaughan Spalding and Dwight Douglas of Detroit. After a wedding trip in the east Mr. and Mrs. Washburne will live at the Horton apartments, Dearborn parkway and Burton place.

North Side Ceremonies.

Two other interesting weddings on the north shore yesterday were those of Miss Dorothy Taylor and Walter B. Gerould, which took place in the Kenilworth Episcopal church at 8:30 o'clock in the evening, and of Miss Kathryn Stevens and Webster Stafford at the same hour at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Stevens, in Highland Park.

Mrs. Gerould is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Taylor Jr. of Kenilworth and Mr. Gerould is the son of Mrs. Frank Wheelock Gerould of Evanston. The bride wore a gown of white satin and beaded chiffon with a satin train. Her veil of tulle was held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley. The Rev. Herbert C. Edwards of Lake Forest read the service.

Miss Stevens wore a gown of D'Alencon lace with a train and veil of the same. Mr. Stafford is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Stafford of Glencoe. The Rev. Dr. Cornell of Glencoe performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Margaret Martin, 3700 Pine Grove avenue, announces the marriage of her daughter, Nora, to Thomas D. Frahler at St. Mary's of the Lake church, last Tuesday evening. The Rev. John Dennison performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Frahler will be at home after Nov. 1 at 7642 Eastlake terrace, Rogers Park.

WORLD IN MORAL DROP, BUT PARTICULARLY U.S., METHODISTS ARE TOLD

LONDON, Sept. 10.—[By the Associated Press.—That the world has fallen into a moral slump, that there has been a universal recrudescence of sin, particularly in America, and that physical force rather than the moral law has been given supremacy, were among the declarations made here today by the Rev. Ezra Squier Tipply of Madison, N. J., in an address before the Methodist ecumenical conference.

In his address on the subject, "Christ the World's Greatest Need," he attacked modern civilization generally, declaring that ideals have undergone amazing changes and that conceptions of primary principles have been distorted. Truth has been perverted, Christian virtues have lost their divine luster, and the sense of sin has been dulled, he declared.

"There is a growing vulgarity and recklessness in dress and behavior," he continued, "and an increasing disregard for the sanctity of the home. The world is groaning under industrial coercion, oppression, antagonism, race riots, ignorance, and illiteracy. The world wants to be rid of poverty, ignorance, lust, greed, violence, ill will, social injustice and hatred of war.

"What help is there for this broken world? Naturally we look to the church, but we find it full of imposing ceremonies, thundering moralities, rigid decencies, the clatter of rules, platitudes, venerable traditions, infinite cog wheels of organizations—everything except the spirit of the Galilean peasant who came to plant in the garden of the world the seed of the love of the Almighty."

TWO DIE IN WRECK.

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 10.—Two persons were killed, three seriously hurt, and many others slightly injured in an accident to a car in the Rubin and Cherry carnival train over the New York, New Haven and Hartford raiload at Noroton this afternoon.

PASTOR RESIGNS AFTER WOMAN MAKES CHARGES

Norwalk, Conn., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Dr. De Witt Talmadge Van Doren, for twenty-five years pastor of the First Baptist church of Norwalk, and recognized as one of the most eminent metaphysicians in the country, has resigned as pastor of the church as a result of charges preferred against him by Mrs. Justin Gruell, sister-in-law of Johnny Gruell, cartoonist.

Mrs. Gruell alleged that on her second visit to the pastor for treatments he insulted her and acted in a way unbecoming a gentleman. Dr. Van Doren denied the charges and no action was taken.

Although no other action was taken, the matter has disrupted the church. Twenty-five members have resigned, and as many more are staying in, they say, merely to be able to have a voice in further consideration of the case. Last Sunday there were but fourteen in the congregation.

TRIO CONFESS TO THEFT OF $15,000 LIBERTY BONDS

Last Thursday three young men got $15,000 in Liberty bonds from the brokerage firm of C. F. Childs & Co., 208 South La Salle street, through a forged trust letter.

Thursday night Lieut. James E. Doherty and the "flivver squad" of the Austin station—Sergeants James Hays, John Tolen, and L. C. Young—arrested one of the trio. Friday night they arrested the second. Yesterday they arrested the third man and reported that all the bonds have been recovered. The men have confessed.

The prisoners are Wilfred John Hynes, 5059 Park avenue, 22 years old; John Ford, 330 South Lombard avenue, Oak Park, 20 years old, and George L. O'Hara, 5413 Washington boulevard, employed by a loop broker.

Hynes tried to cash one of the bonds at the Century Trust and Savings bank.

$30 MURDERS DESCRIBED IN CONFESSION

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Twenty Camorra murders in the United States were cleared up by full confessions obtained today by Detective Sergeant Michael Fiaschetti of the Italian police division and Assistant District Attorney P. Francis Morro, they announced tonight.

Today's confessions are supplemental to those of Barloe Fontaino, a barber, who said 200 murders in New York and probably 100 more in other parts of the country were the work of murder bands.

Joseph Ales, alias Joe Napoli, brought here from Detroit, and Carlos Barhar, arrested in New York, were the authors of the new confessions. Ales is said to have admitted being a professional killer employed by Camorra groups, and his regular fee was $30.

Ales has been held for further hearing Wednesday in charges to answer on which he was brought to New York.

MADELYNN PINS HOPE OF LIBERTY ON EX-HUSBAND

Puts Her Whole Fight in His Hands.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 10.—[United Press.]—Madelynn Obenchain today announced she had cast aside every one except her divorced husband in her fight against the charge of murdering J. Belton Kennedy, wealthy broker.

THOMAS L. WOOLWINE.

Ralph Obenchain, her former husband, is now regarded by Madelynn as "Steady Ralph, the man in a million," she said in an interview.

He is a lawyer and will defend her in court. She has discharged Paul Schenck, noted criminal lawyer. Furthermore, she stated she would refuse to go to trial jointly with Arthur Burch, indicted with her for the murder. It is understood that while District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine prefers to try them together he will make no strenuous objection to separate trials.

"Burch had no more to do with the death of Kennedy than I had," Madelynn said.

She reiterated her story that Kennedy dropped dead at her side on the steps of his Beverly Glen bungalow following a shot from the dark.

"Burch and I have no defense in common. He will have to paddle his own canoe. But he will be acquitted," she said.

"I know Burch did not like Kennedy, but I know that he did not kill him. I am afraid I have harmed Burch by my silence. This has led to an impression that I was shielding him. This is untrue."

Application for bail was filed today by counsel for Madelynn. The application states that she has been in a state of physical collapse since her incarceration in jail.

MRS. STONE SAYS EX-CONGRESSMAN STOLE DAUGHTER

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Claude U. Stone, divorced wife of the former congressman and one time postmaster here, today declared her belief that the child's father is the abductor of Shieliegh Stone, their 7 year old daughter, who yesterday was kidnaped from her mother's yard.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Stone appeared at the police station and said her neighbors told her a man resembling Stone had taken the girl from the back yard and had driven away with her in an automobile.

Mrs. Stone was divorced July 7, 1917. Stone's lawyers assert if he is the kidnaper he has a legal right to do so, "as Stone obtained his divorce on the ground of desertion."

In a recent decision of the court, the lawyer said, Stone was given the custody of the child.

Police have decided the case is a matter for the courts.

RECOVER $10,000 STOLEN RING.

A ruby ring set in a circle of twenty small diamonds, valued at $10,000, was recovered yesterday by Chicago detectives on information furnished by Denver police. The ring was stolen in a Denver club by a Negro porter, sold to a Pullman porter, who disposed of it for $125 to a woman coming to Chicago. Names were withheld by the police.

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

The Bedspring Disease

Many people doctor for ill health when all they need is a scientific bedspring—the Rome De Luxe.

The ordinary woven wire, coil or national Spring often causes backache, listlessness, headache and grave functional disorders—because they fail to support the "in" curves of the body, and press too severely on prominent parts. This distorts the spine, causing nerve pressure, the source of many diseases.

The Rome Quality De Luxe Bedspring is scientifically designed to fit the body. It molds itself to every contour, allowing the spine to remain straight and the muscles relaxed. A unique feature of the Rome De Luxe Bedspring is the special construction which prevents sagging and permits a grown-up and a child to lie side by side, each on his own level, in perfect comfort.

Examine the Rome De Luxe at your dealer's. The more carefully you compare the Rome De Luxe with any bedspring at any price, the more certainly you will recognize its superior luxurious comfort. It is always finished in Rome Gray enamel, and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade Mark, which identifies all Rome Products. Look for it—it is your guarantee. The De Luxe is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds.

Would Rouse Public to Issues.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—An intensive campaign will be launched by the American Federation of Labor to arouse public opinion throughout the country in support of the purposes underlying the international conference for the limitation of armament.

Announcement to this effect was made here today at the federation headquarters. It will be the aim of the federation, according to the official announcement, to unite under its leadership the whole American sentiment in favor of limitation of armament.

The plans are being put into operation by Samuel Gompers by authority of the executive council in conformity with the established position of the federation in favor of disarmament, a position taken first by the federation in convention in 1887.

Parades and Meetings.

The central labor unions throughout the country are asked to take the lead in each city or community in bringing together the disarmament sentiment in great mass demonstrations to take the form of parades and mass meetings.

The federation gives as its reason for taking this initiative its organization extending into every community, its continuous and consistent record in favor of disarmament, and its willingness to serve the nation.

Armistice Day Celebration.

One of the paramount features of the program is an adequate and enthusiastic celebration of Armistice day.

Speakers are being gathered together, and the federation expects to be able to assist materially in so distributing speakers that every city and community will be supplied.

VETERAN STATESMEN TO GUIDE AMERICA IN DISARM PARLIAMENT

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[United Press.]—America's delegates on the disarmament conference are all "old timers." Their average age is 66 years.

At 76 former Secretary of State Elihu Root is the oldest and Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, who is 59, is the youngest. He is less than a month younger than Secretary of State Hughes, who heads the delegation. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts is 71 years of age. All are lawyers.

Senator Borah of Idaho, who led the disarmament fight in congress, issued a statement in part as follows:

"It is a very able delegation. It is now up to the people of this country to make their wishes known and opinions felt. It should be constantly in mind that without the mobilized moral forces of those upon whom these crushing burdens are now falling there is little hope that the load will be lifted. There can be no relief from taxes, no relief from expenditures and no relief from war except through disarmament."

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking Democratic member of the foreign relations committee, gave out a statement to the effect that Hughes, Root, Lodge, and Underwood constitute "a strong committee," but he added:

"Some of us would have been glad to see upon the committee men of more advanced views on disarmament."

AUSTRALIA FOR ITS OWN ENVOYS TO WASHINGTON

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SYDNEY, Sept. 10.—There is increasing discussion in the Australian press regarding the forthcoming disarmament conference at Washington.

The Sydney Herald supports the suggestion that if dominion representatives are not included in the British delegation, Australia should send to Washington some one on whom the delegates could rely for first hand information on Australian interests.

The Sun states that the Australian share of the naval and military defense is £10,000,000 (about $40,000,000) annually and this only could be saved by the complete success of President Harding's conference.

START SCHOOL FOR U. S. SLEUTHS IN NEW YORK

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—Establishment of a training school for government sleuths in New York was announced tonight by Attorney General Daugherty as a part of the reorganization of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice now being effected. All agents now in the service and all to be appointed, he said, will be sent to the school for instructions.

The course will include various phases of investigation work, together with a presentation of the rights of American citizens and residents of the United States, the law of arrest, and rudiments of evidence and the proper methods to be followed in preparing cases for prosecution.

Five Hundred Thousand Gallons Increase in Our Ice Cream Sales This Year

MAY we thank you, the people of Chicago, in behalf of our Fifteen Hundred Agencies and ourselves, for the favor of this enormous, unprecedented increase which you have given us this year.

WE have tried to merit that favor in the two ways most important to you. We have given to you, at a great expense to ourselves only, the latest scientific process in the making of ice cream. We refer to the Carbonating Process, by which the dangerous multiplication of bacteria is absolutely prevented.

We have also given you in our ice creams the full measure of butterfats and food values which our high standard calls for. We have done this faithfully even during the hottest part of the summer when the commonest "trick of the trade" is to skimp such food values.

We have kept foremost in our minds that Ice Cream is first of all a food by which the weakest loved one in a hospital is made strong and the sturdiest little rascal at home is kept strong. And if we were to skimp these food values by even a single ounce we would feel in no different class from the old time grocer who weighed his thumb with the sugar—and sometimes his fist.

Ice Cream is not only so good, but so good for you, if you get what you pay for. Because ice cream is one of the fundamental foods, equal in food value to porterhouse steak.

For this week-end Please try Our

Private Brand Brick HOSTESS Ice Cream 50c a brick

A combination of our own rare New York Ice Cream with chopped Nuts added. One of the most delicious private brands we have ever created. Be sure and get a brick tonight or tomorrow.

Insist on Hydrox or Guernsey. If you'd walk a mile for the taste of your favorite cigarette, surely you'd walk or drive a couple of blocks for the health of your wife and kiddies.

Smokeless Boilers are made of STEEL

"Saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung." That hits the man who puts up a fine building and skimps on the heating boiler. Every time that mistake is made the chickens come home to roost.

It's anything but economy. As a matter of fact it's waste. You are bound to waste more than you can save and a visit to any first-class heating engineer will confirm the statement.

If you want to be safe, put in a boiler that will last as long as the building and pay dividends not only in long life but in the economical consumption of fuel. And that will bring you to the Kewanee Smokeless All-steel boiler.

Many of the finest buildings in this country owe a lot of their profit to the Kewanee Boiler because it will burn any kind of fuel without smoke and is absolute protection against "corners in coal." Moreover it is a foil to the busy eyes of the Smoke Inspector and will not polute the neighborhood.

Bear in mind the fact that a poor boiler will use more coal and require higher priced coal. So start your building right. Install a Kewanee and know in your heart at the beginning that it will add renting and selling value to your structure.

OWANS WED WAR BRIDES TILL DEBT DID THEM PART!

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Three main causes of the financial plight of the corn belt are lugged out by bankers and business men, and the observant agriculturists themselves when the question is sprung, "Where did all that easy dough of war times disappear to?" They are:

1. The drop of farm products prices to pre-war levels while other commodities are still up.

2. Promotive stocks. One leading banking authority here estimates that in three years, when money was pouring in, Iowa farmers poured out at least $200,000,000 for stocks of various sorts. They were paid for largely by notes, the farmer generally paying down 25 per cent cash and taking on obligations for the rest. Then when income began to dry up the meeting of the notes cramped the wheels.

Deflation Is Costly, Painful.

3. Land speculation. The skyrocketing of acre values to the $500 mark and above, in some sections by land speculators, meant somebody was stung. Purchasers on whom the land was unloaded at inflated prices contracted debts on the basis of $2 corn; now they are facing the deferred payments with corn selling for 40 or 42 cents. It naturally put a crimp in the bank roll and then some.

Credit was coming too easy for the corn belt a year or so ago—before the drop. The great mass of farmers, it appears, fancied the day of $2 corn were never to end. They plunged in up to the eyebrows, grabbed all the credit they wanted—apparently there was an unlimited amount of credit.

They went in for improvements, to a certain extent; they bought new automobiles and signed notes for the overhanging balance; they took on an additional 80 acres or 160 at fancy prices.

The Sudden Sickening Thud.

Then, between the execution of the notes and the maturing of the notes the scoop shovel opened and the bottom dropped out of prices. Just as it was in industrial lines and in commercial, when spending was going a jazz-time pace. As Gov. Kendall remarked today:

"We were going on the theory that dollars were only withered leaves and Iowa had unlimited forests."

He reflected sentiment one uncovers everywhere, in the small cities and the large.

It was easy pickings for the promoters. Oil well stocks found a fat market. Money gushed into Iowa and gushed right out again. Some of the far sighted and thrifty salted theirs away in tax exempt securities, but the mass of the farmers took the other tack.

"Where did all the dough go—didn't some of it stick to the farms?"

When one asks that question he generally gets an eight cylinder reply with the muffler cut out.

"It was occult money, much of it," said one farm authority today. "Many farmers actually were not making the money the world thought they were. The majority of our farmers are feeders. They'd buy feeders at Omaha when prices were high. Then they paid high prices for feed, and even if meat prices to the consumers were high, the man who did the feeding came off with small profits. When a farmer got credit in order to feed $1.80 corn to $18 hogs, and sold on the basis of 60 cent corn and $8 hogs, what's the answer? These fellows all got pinched."

The northwest part of the state was hardest hit by the land speculation. In the northwest part lands did not skyrocket so much and there was less speculation in lands and in stocks, likewise there is more dairying and the farmer has more of a monthly income.

Banks Reduce Their Loans.

The volume of credits has been greatly reduced. At one time last year the credits were more than double the base set by the federal reserve bank, but the deflation process has let out most of this gas. The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports that Iowa banks have reduced their loans with the reserve establishment from $98,636,000 on Dec. 11, 1920, to $59,593,000 on Sept. 1. At the same time a large number of country banks are reported to be loaded down with slow moving notes.

They are secured by the land which, of course, is not as liquid a security as crops, which can be disposed of in sixty to ninety days, but the credits are solid as Gibraltar.

"Iowa is the richest little state in the world," said one leading farmer. "We have great resources. The estate is tremendously solvent, but in somewhat stringent circumstances which it will simply take time to work out. The farmer is pinched, but do you think he is discouraged? Say, look at the way he tucked in when depression came and produced all the harder. Witness the big crops when he knew that bigger production would tend to lower instead of boost prices.

"What we need is for other industry to take up some of its own slack and bring prices to a more stabilized level. Meanwhile the farmer is simply not buying any more than he has to."

A FABLE—THINK IT OVER

Down in Virginia a farmer had an ox and a mule that he hitched together to a plow. One night, after several days of continuous plowing, and after the ox and mule had been stabled and provendered for the night, the ox said to the mule: "We've been working pretty hard; let's play off sick tomorrow and lie here in the stalls all day."

"You can if you want to," returned the mule, "but I'll go to work."

So the next morning when the farmer came out the ox pretended that he was sick. The farmer bedded him down with clean straw, gave him fresh hay, a bucket of oats and bran mixed, left him for the day and went out with the mule to plow.

That night when the mule came in the ox asked him how they got along plowing alone all day. "Well," said the mule, "it was hard and we didn't get much done, and——"

"Did the old man have anything to say about me?" asked the ox.

"No," replied the mule.

"Well, then," went on the ox, "I believe I'll play off again tomorrow; it was certainly fine lying here all day and resting."

"That's up to you," said the mule, "but I'll go out and plow."

So the next day the ox played off again, was bedded down with clean straw, provendered with hay, bran and oats, and lay all day nodding, blinking, chewing his cud and gently swishing his tail.

When the mule came in at night the ox asked him again how they made out.

"About the same as yesterday," replied the mule coldly.

"Did the old man have anything to say to you about me?" again inquired the ox.

"No," replied the mule, "not to me, but he did have a long, long talk with the butcher on the way home."

Lexington

MINUTE MAN SIX

Wins at Pike's Peak Again!

BETTERING his last year's time by almost three minutes, when he won the Pike's Peak Championship with a Lexington special, Otto Loesche won a notable victory again last Labor Day.

He drove a Lexington special, with the famous Ansted Engine, and made the 12 steep miles, around 142 hazardous turns, faster than all others in his event and class, that of cars with 184 to 300 cubic inch piston displacement.

Wonderful as is this demonstration of engine efficiency, reserve power and endurance, it is not an exceptional "stunt." It is but another link in a long chain of hill-climbing, speed, and economy records which Lexington stock cars with the Ansted Engine have been making all over the entire country.

We would not dim the glory of our car's performance this year up the steep incline of Pike's Peak, because we know it to be truly wonderful.

But the significance to the public lies in the fact that this victory does not stand as a lone performance in a non-stock car event, but is supported and paralleled by a consistency of numerous similar performances of Lexington stock cars with the same Ansted Engine.

This famous engine of only 224 cubic inch piston displacement, but developing twice the power of conventional engines of similar size, has over a period of two years made a brilliant and unexcelled record in the hands of owners, consistently out-performing larger, higher-priced cars.

This record includes every phase of motor car performance—quick acceleration, almost unbelievable power, smooth and vibrationless operation, remarkable ease of control and exceptional economy.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Ansted Engine almost totally eclipses previous standards of engine efficiency.

The value of such demonstrations as at Pike's Peak to the public is that you get the same Ansted Engine, size and dimensions, in the Lexington you buy. This engine was designed by Lexington engineers for Lexington cars and is built in our own engine factory.

It is an undeniable source of satisfaction to any car owner to sit in a Lexington behind the Ansted Engine—he knows that under the hood of his Lexington is the ability and reliability, capable of similar performances such as at Pike's Peak and numerous other Lexington victories.

The list of these achievements is amazing, attracting unparalleled attention and admiration for this car. It provides what the purchaser of today demands—proof, Proof, PROOF!

Times have changed. The public now demands unquestionable proof of a car's intrinsic value. A good past reputation cannot substitute for present performance.

Lexington builders are able to surpass former standards because of the vast manufacturing advantages and savings that develop from their many allied factories.

Why not drive a winner? You get the same Ansted Engine, the same unusual range of performance, the same lightning acceleration, the same quiet, vibrationless efficiency, and the same dependability that won up Pike's Peak, in the Lexington's smart, new sport car—the Lark.

Each Lexington is a Winner—each Lexington is a Champion—and each Lexington owner knows exactly what to expect, he need never fear a rival.

The Lark

The Lark, new sport car with Ansted Engine, comes to you with everything complete: bumpers, windshield wings, motometer, an extra wire wheel and cord tire on each running board, rear trunk and rack. Several optional color schemes enable you to get a car that looks custom-built to your special order.

The most talked-about and sensational feature of the new Lexington car is this engine, with its unusual "volumetric efficiency"—Lexington achieves this great success by opening the valves further—increasing the "lift," as it is called.

And equally remarkable, Lexington achieves high lift power with economy and unusual quiet, due to another exclusive Lexington feature, the "rocking-chair" rocker arm.

What has impressed the public so forcefully is the fact that the new Lexington, in every part and detail of its mechanical excellence, is as advanced and perfected as its marvelous engine.

Many of Lexington's advantages are exclusive.

Paramount among these features are the Moore Multiple Exhaust System and the Lexi-gasifier.

These two exclusive Lexington devices are linked together in such a way as to produce maximum power with minimum fuel consumption.

The Moore Multiple Exhaust System prevents the overlapping of the exhaust by leading each alternate discharge into separate exhaust lines.

Engineers have long recognized that the ordinary six-cylinder engine was inefficient because the advantage of the overlapping power stroke was largely counteracted by the overlap in the exhaust, resulting in back pressure and other difficulties.

The Lexi-gasifier consists of a small grid over which the incoming gas stream passes. It is heated by the outgoing exhaust streams, which pass immediately beneath it. In passing over this hot grid, the inflowing gas stream deposits thereon any liquid fuel which has resisted the vaporizing action of the carburetor. This grid is a miniature distillation plant and as soon as this liquid fuel has been "fried" into vapor it passes on into the combustion chambers in condition to do useful, economical work.

Let us show you how Lexington, better than any other car, regardless of price, combines all the essentials for efficiency, safety and economy today.

Some of the captains were rated among the best in the middle west last season and unless the added n of the captaincy affects their they should perform in stronger n this year. In a number of plays were built around them, their defensive qualifications beyond criticism.

Myers Ohio Leader.

io State, 1920 conference champion, have for its leader Cyril ("Truck") s, a clever end. PLAY SPORTS AS YOU TREAT NEWS, SAYS N.Y. EDITOR

Space Determined Largely on Merits of Story.

BY FRANK SMITH.

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—"Play sports as one would news."

MLT
INTERVIEWS WITH EDITORS

That is the nub of an interview we were fortunate enough to get from William McGeehan, managing editor of the New York Tribune, regarding the curtailment of news on commercialized baseball.

Mr. McGeehan is particularly well qualified to speak from a sport and news standpoint, having at one time been sporting editor of the newspaper of which he now is managing editor.

With both New York teams making a fight for the pennant in their respective leagues, the New York Tribune believes that two-thirds of a column of space for recounting the efforts of each team is sufficient to appease the fans.

No Complaint from Fans.

The paper seems to be justified in its stand from the fact that it receives no complaints about the brevity of the stories. About a half a column is devoted to games played by the Brooklyn team.

"It is the aim of our paper," Mr. McGeehan said, "to play sport news purely on its merits. If it is real news, it is taken from the sporting section and placed on the first page of the paper. Professional sports in a great many instances are overplayed. This applies particularly to baseball, boxing, and racing. Probably the great sport story from a news standpoint is a fight for the heavyweight championship of the world. Appropriate space is given to that story. The world's series baseball games come next, then perhaps a football game between two great colleges.

"Pro Ball Overplayed."

"Commercialized baseball is overplayed to a great extent by some newspapers here in New York as well as other parts of the country. Known as our national pastime, it has been hurt most by the men on the inner circle.

"Greed for money on the part of magnates and players alike has taken a great part of the sporting element from the game. The recent world series scandal didn't do the game any good, although from current reports there is a big attendance at some of the games.

"I find that amateur sport is gaining in popularity every day. If you will glance over our sporting section, you will find the greater part of the space is given to amateur sports. At the same time we do not neglect professional sport, but we try to avoid giving it any more space than it requires as a news item.

Praise Tribune Stand.

"The announcement by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE that it would curtail space on big league baseball, startled, but gratified me. It looks as if it were a step in the right direction and I shall be an attentive spectator watching its results."

The managing editor of another morning paper here, who requested his name to be omitted, declared that the step taken by THE TRIBUNE was one he had long contemplated, but that the close race in the two leagues in which the New York teams are greatly interested made it impossible to curtail space used at present. He conveyed the impression that there might be a change when spring came around.

Not Entirely in Accord.

Mr. M. C. Crist, managing editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, could not agree that the stand taken by THE TRIBUNE was a step in the right direction, but did admit that commercialized baseball was overplayed in a great many instances by some newspapers.

John N. Wheeler, president of the Bell Syndicate, one of the largest purveyors of feature stories on professional as well as amateur sports, was brief and to the point when asked for some comment.

"Let me express my aproval of the attitude you have taken toward commercialized baseball. I am so sick of seeing these alleged magnates who are in charge of the game get away with 'murder' that I certainly congratulate you on your stand."

RAY RUNS MILE IN TIME OF 4:15 AT TORONTO MEET

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 10.—In the one mile open handicap, a feature of the meet here today, Joie Ray of Chicago finished in 4:15 flat, knocking 5¾ seconds from the Canadian record of 4:20¾ for the event. The race was won by Ralph Barnes of Hamilton. Barnes' time, with handicap, was 4:09 3-5.

Normal General of Brantford, Ont., won the 12 mile Canadian national exhibition marathon in 1 hour 9 minutes and 32 2-5 seconds. James Moorekoff, Gladstone A. C., Toronto, was second, and Frank Wendling of Toronto third.

BIG TEN FOOTBALL.

OFFICIAL practice for Big Ten football elevens will open Thursday with only one change from last season in the personnel of coaches who impart gridiron lore to the leading teams of the middle west. William Deitz, known as Lone Star when at Carlisle, is in charge at Purdue as successor to Arthur (Butch) Scanlon.

The fixity of tutors, however, is in direct contrast to changes in schedule. severances and renewals of old relations and the taking on of new rivals shows a wider variation than in recent years.

To make room for Princeton Chicago temporarily (we hope) forgot its time-honored rivalry with Michigan, while Iowa gave place to a newcomer, University of Colorado.

Michigan filled the accustomed Chicago date at Wisconsin, reviving a rivalry dormant since 1905, when the Wolverines won, 12 to 0. Ohio State, which Michigan at one time regarded as good practice only, will dedicate the new stadium at Ann Arbor Oct. 22.

Illinois' deviation is a schedule lighter by one hard game, Minensota being absent. Zuppke found he was asking his charges to perform the impossible with six conference games on his card.

Wisconsin's principal change is the acquisition of Michigan in place of Ohio State, following an acrimonious dispute between coaches as to where a Badger-Buckeye game should be played. Ohio State, on the other hand, entertains Minnesota at Columbus in the first grid contest ever played between the two institutions.

Advance reports indicate that all Big Ten elevens will contain better material than usual. It looks like the biggest year of the middle western football.

Poker Series—No. VI.

RELATIVITY AND POKER.

I read in the press where great scholars are weary
From attempting to solve Dr. Einstein's pet theory.
When the subject is viewed in its proper relation,
The old game of draw is a fine illustration.
For instance, you win with but one little pair,
(Though I'll always contend such action's unfair).
Again three big Jacks are invalid and nil,
When some lucky saphead happens to fill.
Now, opposed to a pair, the big J boys would cop,
But a bird with a flush these same hooks would top,
And he in his turn must bow to the dub
Who filled when he drew to a spade and a club.
I feel I've explained so a person most dense
Can see things should be judged in their relative sense.
It's as plain to my mind, as the mark on a card—
Doc, the next time you call slip us something that's hard.

CUBS TO TACKLE SOX TEAM AGAIN FOR CITY HONORS

For the first time since 1916 there will be a city series this fall between the White Sox and Cubs. President Veeck of the north side team telephoned President Comiskey of the south siders yesterday to inform him that a challenge for a post-season series was in the mail. It is tradionally up to the losing team to issue the challenge and the Cubs lost the city series of 1916.

President Comiskey tentatively accepted the challenge and the formalities will exchanged in due time.

The series will be played at the close of the regular season, probably on the same dates as the world's contest, and will be conducted under the rules promulgated by Commissioner Landis for the government of the big event.

Several players of both teams had made plans to go hunting or barnstorming directly after the close of the regular season on Oct. 2, but agreed yesterday to cancel their engagements at the request of the club owners so as to insure a complete roster for both teams. The city series will be determined by the winner of five out of nine games, if that many are necessary. The last Chicago series was played when it required only four out of seven games to decide the victor.

DOBLER FIFTH IN MARATHON RACE; E. JOHNSON WINS

Detriot, Mich., Sept. 10.—R. Earl Johnson of the Braddock, Pa., Athletic club today won the Masonic marathon here, running the twenty-two and one-half miles in two hours, seventeen minutes and one-fifth seconds. Saylor, Minnick, B. Biddle, and Rube Seord, all of Detroit, were second, third and fourth respectively, while Henry Dobler of the Ilinois A. C. of Chicago was fifth. Johnson took an early lead, which he held throughout.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

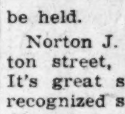
The Question.

Would you like to see the Big Ten conference colleges take up rowing as a varsity sport?

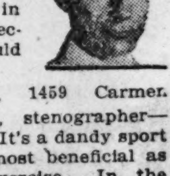
Where Asked.

Wabash avenue and Washington street.

Answers.

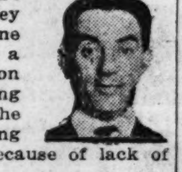


T. Reynolds, 661 East 61st street, elevator starter—Certainly, but it calls for a tremendous outlay of money and would not be self supporting. Besides, many of the schools are not accessible to a body of water where practice could be held.



Norton J. Nelson, 58 East Washington street, manager—It's great stuff and a recognized sport in the Olympic games and eastern colleges. With it properly developed in the Big Ten, intersectional regattas could be arranged.

Kathlyn Gannon, 1459 Carmen street, stenographer—Yes. It's a dandy sport and most beneficial as an exercise. In the eastern colleges, it occupies a big niche in their athletic life. Why not in the Big Ten?



Harry Stern, 3145 Douglas boulevard, manager—I sure would and believe they should. Wisconsin, one of the Big Ten, took a step in that direction last spring by putting a varsity eight on the water after having dropped the sport because of lack of competition.

Ruth Schwabauer, 4163 Elston avenue, stenographer—Most assuredly. I think it is one of the prettiest and most thrilling sights to watch two or three eight oared shells cutting the water with the oarsmen pulling in perfect unison.

BUNTING TAKES RICH FUTURITY AT BELMONT PK.

New York, Sept. 10.—Scampering through the thirty-second running of the classic Futurity at Belmont park today, Harry Payne Whitney's entry, Bunting, came up from the rear on the home stretch and won by a scant head. The race was worth $50,000.

Galantman, owned by L. Waterbury, romping into the lead at the start, held the premier position almost to the end of the six furlongs and then, nosed out by Bunting, finished second. E. B. McLean's Dream of Allah captured third place. The time was 1:11 2-5.

It was a pretty race, this dash of the two year olds. The thousands who flocked out onto Long Island on an Indian summer day had their thrills from start to finish. A field of twenty-two lined up. Lyke, straddling Gallantman, jumped ahead and led the field at the start, with Bunting, carrying F. Coltiletti, in fifth place, Dream of Allah had J. Butwell up. Bunting hung back until almost the end. Then the Whitney horse galloped ahead into a driving finish.

JOHNSON DOWNS DAVIS CUP STAR IN BITTER MATCH

Hayes Is Vanquished by Vincent Richards.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 10.—The defeat of Watson M. Washburn of New York, a member of the Davis cup team, by Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia, in the second round of the singles championship tournament of the United States Lawn Tennis association, was the outstanding feature of the day at Germantown Cricket club here. Washburn's unexpected downfall came after a bitter battle, 6—3, 5—7, 2—6, 5—3, 6—3. Washburn had been generally selected as a semi-finalist in the upper half of the draw.

WATSON WASHBURN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

As an exhibition of thrilling tennis from the gallery standpoint, the match lacked much, but from the angle of tactical strategic tennis and perfect timing of strokes, it reached a plane seldom seen on American courts. Every stroke was carefully and accurately planned and delivered.

Picked as Semi-Finalist.

As a result of his victory, Johnson appears likely to be R. Norris Williams' opponent in the semi-final round, which position Johnson has held several times in past titular tournaments. His tennis today was well-nigh perfect, which, combined with strong physical powers, places Johnson in the light of an impressive candidate for championship honors.

Willis Davis of San Francisco was forced to the five set limit to defeat Clarence Todd of the Australasian Davis cup team, 4—6, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3. Todd won the first two sets in rather impressive fashion, but when Davis steadied his game and came to the net the Californian's driving, smashing, and placements won. Physical endurance also counted on the side of the victor.

Richards Puts Out Hayes.

Vincent Richards won his way into the third round by defeating Walter T. Hayes of Chicago, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4. The youthful eastern player and the veteran middle western titleholder were given the place of honor on the grandstand courts in the first matches. Richards immediately began forcing the play, and despite Hayes' excellent physical and tactical game slowly but surely forged to the front.

Faster afoot and in stroking, he carried his game to the net at every opportunity, where his placement smashes and side line passing kept Hayes on the defensive most of the time. There were some brilliant moments of racket work and volleying, especially in the final set, but the pace set by Richards forced Hayes into errors which, combined with his opponent's clean passing shots, proved the winning factor.

The summary of matches:

Hagen, in Title Play, Goes 31 for First Nine Holes

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 10.—In winning the Michigan open golf championship at the Lochmoor club here yesterday, Walter Hagen, western open champion, established a rare mark in championship play by covering the first nine holes of the afternoon round in 31, five strokes under par. Hagen played four of the holes in par and turned in birdies for the other five. Long putts featured his play.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Detroit won its penultimate game of the year from the White Sox at Comiskey park yesterday, but had to drill through ten innings to do it by a score of 8 to 4.

Boss Gleason pulled John Thompson out of his list of slab recruits and sent him against the Tygers, with the result that the rookie would have come across in regulation time if he had been given genuine support. Thompson held the visitors to three runs in nine rounds, and one of them was donated by Yaryan's wild chuck trying to stop a thief at third.

Score Five in Tenth.

All the White Sox could get off Cole in the meantime was a trio of tallies, and that left the score knotted at the end of nine innings. In the tenth Thompson wilted and the Tygers whaled his stuff all over the place, earning five runs on a pass and six solid swats. Only four of the tallies were scored while Thompson reigned, for he retired with only one out and a visitor on third base. Connally, who came to his rescue, retired the side after a single had scored the invader from third.

Young started the fatal tenth with a pass and was sacrificed ahead by Jones. Cobb, who had been quiescent in previous spasms, tore off a double to center on which Young enjoyed a ride home. Then the dam broke. Veach, Heilman, Blue, and Merritt ripped off singles in rapid succession and three more runs came over the plate.

Connally Enters Game.

Connally took charge of the mound work and fanned Woodall, but Cole tagged his new antagonist for a single on which Blue scored the final tally.

The White Sox tried to respond in their half. Sheely led off with a double and scored on Falk's single, after which a double play put a crimp into the rally.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 10.—New York pounded Hasty, Keefe, and Freeman for twenty-four hits and a 19 to 3 victory over Philadelphia here today. In the ninth inning the American league leaders hammered Keefe and Freeman for nine hits, which netted nine runs. C. Walker of the Athletics made his twenty-first home run of the season. Score:

SUZANNE DISPLAYS HER SKILL

French Tennis Champion Stars in Exhibition Doubles Match at Orange, N. J.

SUZANNE AND PARTNER WIN IN TENNIS MATCH

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, who is gradually recovering from the illness which has besieged her since her arrival in America, played in an exhibition doubles match on the courts of the Orange Lawn Tennis club today. With her partner, Mrs. David C. Mills, she scored a closely contested but clearly earned victory over Miss Leslie Bancroft and Miss Martha Bayard. The scores were 7—5 and 9—7.

While the temperamental French girl was the star of the afternoon's play, she found it no simple matter to carry off the honors. Miss Bancroft, the southpaw flash from Boston, kept the gallery of 1,200 fans applauding throughout the contest.

Mlle. Lenglen has not yet recovered completely from the trouble with her throat, however, and it will still be some time before she is in a condition to undertake a severe contest, especially at singles, where the demand on her strength and endurance would be greater. At one time in the second set today she had an attack of coughing and was forced to discontinue play for several minutes. She was applauded when she resumed play.

The receipts of today's match went to the American committee for devastated France, as will the receipts of a mixed doubles exhibition match at the Crescent A. C. in Brooklyn Sunday. In this match Mlle. Lenglen will have as her partner Walter Merrill Hall, and they will be opposed by Miss Bancroft and Harold Throckmorton.

EAST TO MEET WEST FOR NET TITLE HERE

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Chicago will be the scene of the annual east-west tennis team championship matches this month, and local followers will get the opportunity to observe Big Bill Tilden, Little Bill Johnson, Norris Williams, Vincent Richards, and a corps of others who rank highest in the sport in this country. The matches will be played at the South Side Tennis club Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Sept. 23-25. Six will compose each team.

Following is the way the sectional teams will line up:

EAST.

William Tilden, Philadelphia.
Vincent Richards, New York.
R. Lindley Murray, Niagara Falls.
S. Howard Voshell, Brooklyn.
Frank Anderson, New York.
Watson Washburn, New York; R. Norris Williams, Boston, or Sam Hardy, New York.

WEST.

William Johnston, San Francisco.
Robert Kinsey, San Francisco.
Willis Davis, San Francisco.
Howard Kinsey, San Francisco.
Phillip Neer, Portland, Ore.
James Davies, Palo Alto, Cal.

Arrangements for the event, which is one of the annual features of the national tennis season, and the biggest team event of the year, were completed yesterday upon receipt of telegrams from the eastern stars assuring J. C. Stewart of their coming. Mr. Stewart is secretary of the Western Lawn Tennis association, which will conduct the events.

Tilden and Johnston probably will meet in one of their famous singles duels on the last day of the event. Tilden is expected to have Richards for his doubles partner.

PIRATES CRUSH ALECK AND CUBS IN 8 TO 0 CLASH

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Prof. Gibson's pennant-seeking Pirates were in wrathful mood today and all pitchers looked alike to them. Stung by the unexpected mauling accorded them by the Cubs yesterday, the Forbes field terrors turned on Grover Cleveland Alevander and blasted him from the firing line in just five and one-third innings, while taking the final of the abbreviated series from Killefer's proteges, 8 to 0.

Twelve swats, including two triples, were unloaded at Aleck's expense, while the north siders were powerless in the hands of Johnny Morrison, late of Birmingham.

Pirates Score in First.

The Pirates scored twice in the first round. Bigbee opened with a triple to center and Carey scored him with a single. Maranville forced Carey, then Barnhart strolled. Tierney singled off Kelleher's mitt and Maranville scored.

Singles by Carey, Maranville and Robertson yielded another marker in the third. In the fifth, with one down, Carey singled, Maranville sacrificed and Barnhart singled for another run.

Aleck Driven to Shower.

Taps blew for Alexander in the sixth. Tierney singled and Grimm tripled, Tierney scoring. Gooch singled and Grimm scored. Morrison sacrified and Alex faded from the scene, making way for York, who retired the side after two more had scored.

The Cubs left tonight for Chicago to play the Cardinals there tomorrow. Grimes was out of the lineup today, owing to an affected ear and Kelleher played first.

Killefer signed a young outfielder entitled Arthur Rooney, captain of the Pittsburgh collegians. He bats both ways, throws right handed and learned baseball at Indiana Normal and Georgetown university. Score:

Found by Columbus

Way back in fourteen-ninety-two
Columbus found a thing or two.
Of course they said it wouldn't pay
To look for lands so far away,
But Isabella, Queen of Spain,
Had visions of a Spanish main,
And pledged her jewels for the trip
So Christopher could man his ship.
Of all the things he found, they say
Fair Porto Rico stands today
A greater jewel in renown
Than any in that Spanish Crown.
For crops of rare tobacco mean
A fitting tribute to a queen,
And Porto Rico gives her best
In payment for Columbus' quest.
And if you doubt this simple claim
Just try
"PORTINA"—
That's the name.

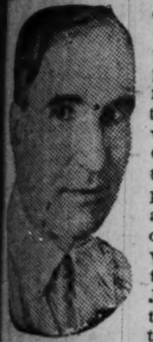
KILBANE LURED INTO TITLE BOUT WITH DAN FRUSH

BY RAY PEARSON.



RAY PEARSON.

Another fistic champion is going to take a chance of being knocked over and losing his crown next Saturday, and there will be a lot of people watching for the returns of this combat, which will be staged in Cleveland, because they would find pleasure in event a new world's champion featherweight ascends the throne. Johnny Kilbane is the boy who will take the chance, while Danny Frush, a young man from Baltimore, is the fellow who is loaded with championship aspirations.

A few years ago Johnny Kilbane, one of the most popular champions that ever crawled through the hemp for battle, has changed from a popular gangster to an unpopular one. The reason is that Kilbane adopted tactics which cannot be employed by boxers who hope to hold public esteem. Others, more intimately associated with the sport, made him the target for criticism so "heavily loaded" that it is taken for granted that they are warranted in their attitude.

Kilbane "Safety First" Boxer.

Johnny, however, never has been piked when his fistic ability has been the subject for discussion. His wonderful achievements in the days when he was the idol of fistic followers cannot be overlooked. He is [perhaps we'd better say was] one of the greatest featherweights, but there were a few others who ranked a bit higher in the scale of classy feathers, for we can't forget George Dixon, Abe Attel, and Young Corbett.

The "safety first" and commercializing tactics of Kilbane have been responsible for the attitude in which Kilbane has placed the fans. Kilbane has held the title for more than eight years, or since he beat Attel in a decision bout of twenty rounds on the coast. For the greater part of the last three years he has sat on the crown instead of wearing it on his head, from which it might be knocked if a better man came along.

Kilbane to Get $60,000.

Kilbane found that by demanding a huge amount of money to match up with aspiring feathers he could play the safety first game to the king's taste. He was so exorbitant in his demands for coin that it was impossible for promoters to meet them, with the result Johnny was able to attend to his tire business in Cleveland without any danger of receiving more than a panning for his failure to do what all champions are expected to do—fight. This time, however, he found a promoter nervy enough to come across, and whether he possesses the title or not it next Saturday he will be $60,-000 richer in purse, for that is the amount of dough that must be shelled out to Kilbane for his services.

Hard to Pick Winner.

Danny Frush, the young man who meets the champion, doesn't get big money. About all he gets is the chance to win the title. He can be expected to do his best, but whether his best is good enough to upset Kilbane is a tough problem for the dopesters. If Frush were as good a few years ago as he is today and Kilbane was as good as he was then, we'd say "lay it in" on Kilbane.

However, Kilbane's long layoff is the one thing that makes it almost next to impossible to pick a winner with any assurance of success. Kilbane surely must have lost much of his scrapping speed by his layoff, but whether he has lost enough to pull himself down to even terms with a fellow of Frush's caliber is a question that can't be answered until they settle their little argument in the ring. No one who watches the champion in his training is permitted a "tipoff," so this contest forces a little guessing contest.

Frush Has Good Chance.

Frush is a good boy, but good boys couldn't beat the "popular Kilbane," but there is a chance that the Baltimore kid may find in the "unpopular Kilbane" a champion he can upset. But it appears to be one of those outside chances, at that.

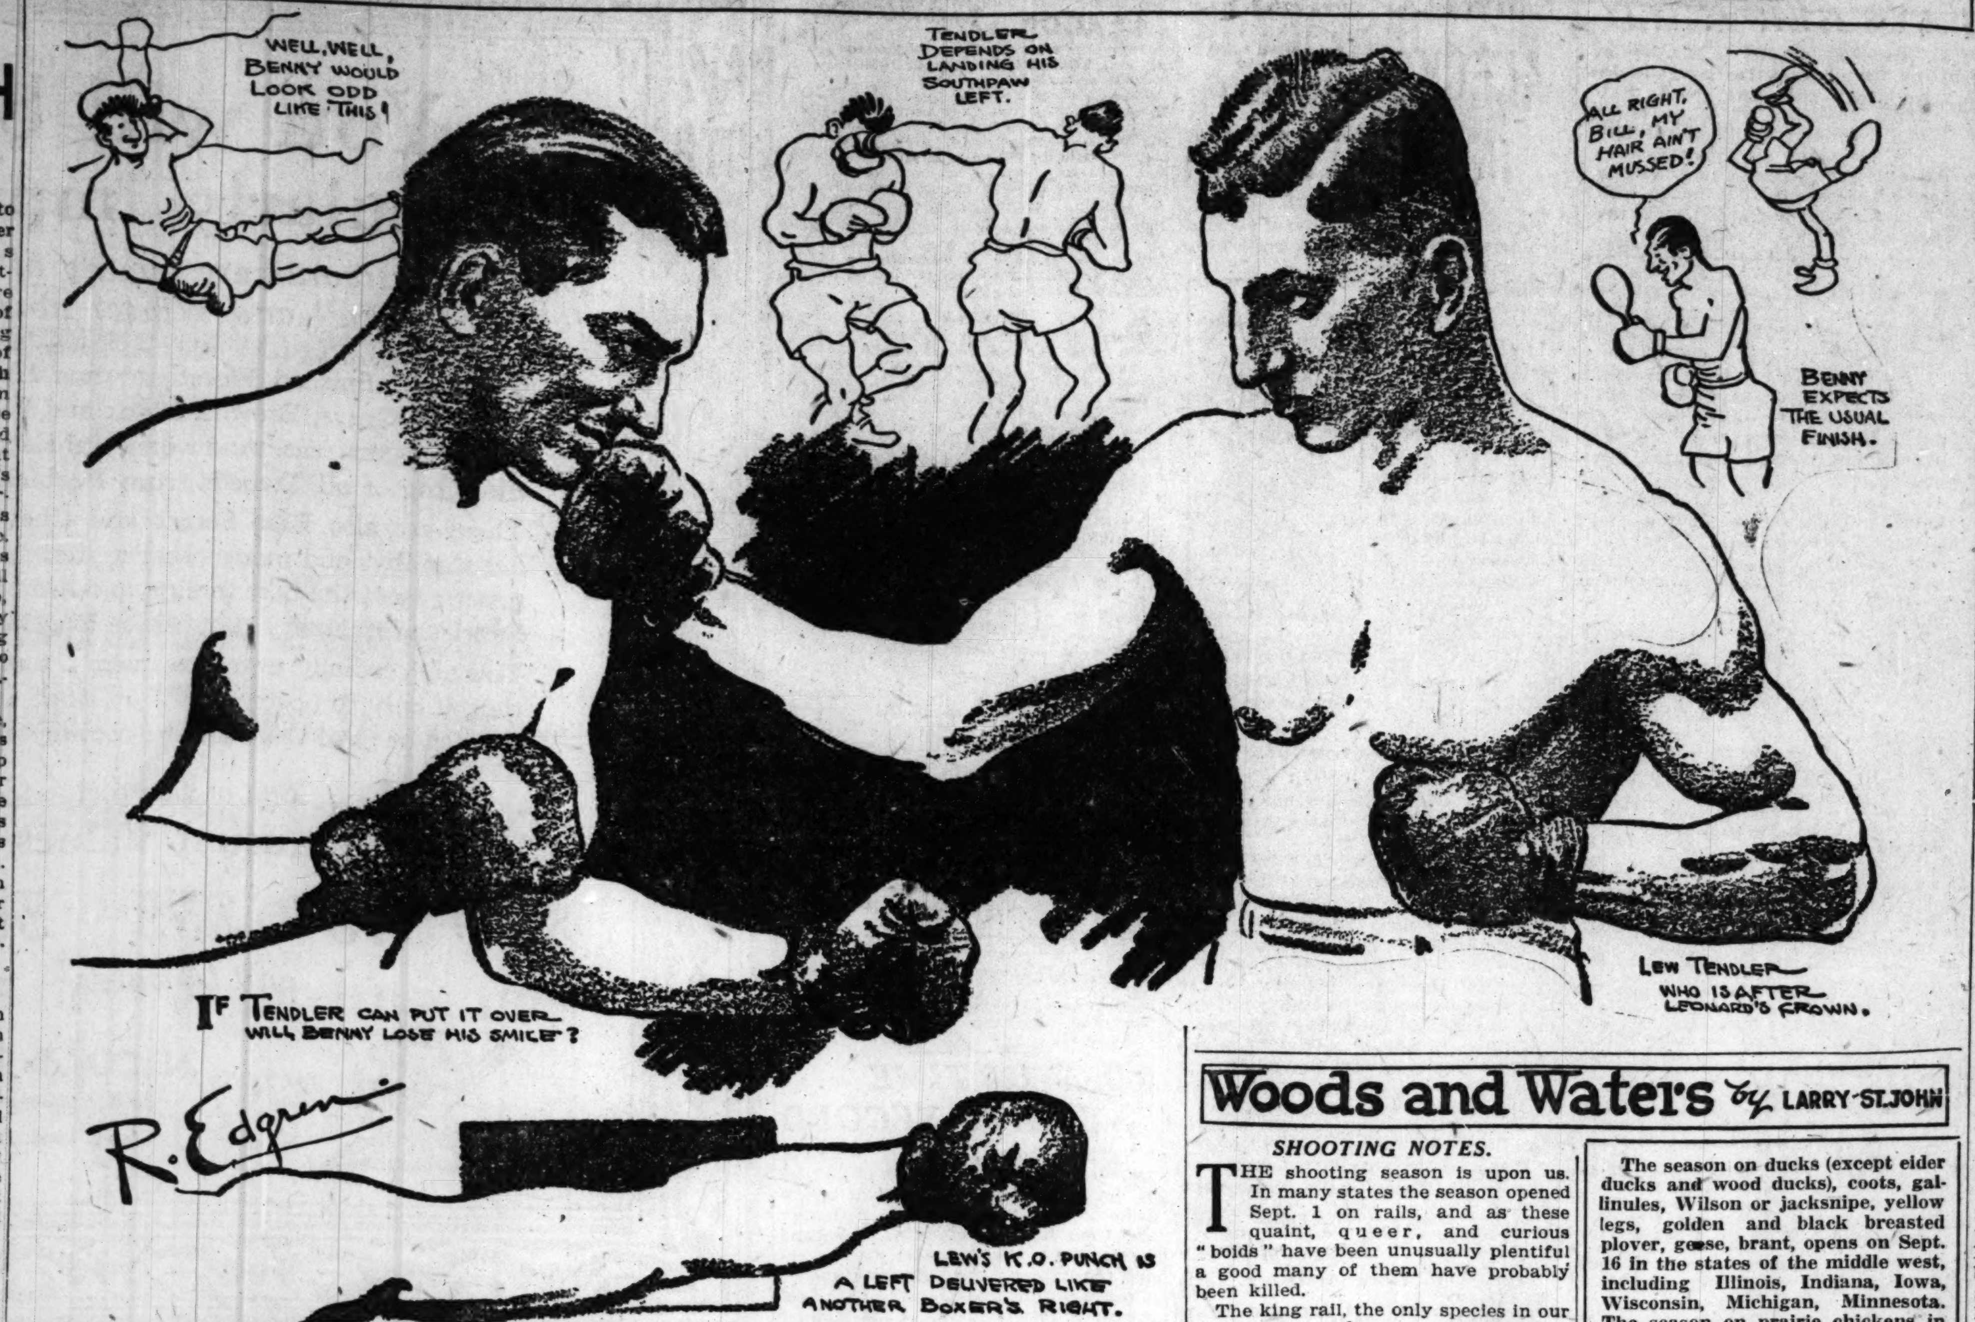
LEONARD-TENDLER BOUT WILL END WORD BATTLE



WELL, WELL, BENNY WOULD LOOK ODD LIKE THIS!
ALL RIGHT, BILL, MY HAIR AIN'T MUSSED!
BENNY EXPECTS THE USUAL FINISH.
IF TENDLER CAN PUT IT OVER WILL BENNY LOSE HIS SMILE?
LEW TENDLER WHO IS AFTER LEONARD'S CROWN.
R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

BENNY LEONARD and Lew Tendler have been a long time getting together. For the last few years Philadelphians — Tendler being a favorite son—have been telling the rest of the world how Benny Leonard was dodging Lew, and Benny's friends have been chucking in the story right back, with Tendler on the dodging end. Periodically, Leonard has "offered" Tendler generous terms or Tendler has "offered" Leonard fat guarantees, all of which has resulted in wrangling and much advertising, but no fight.

Finally Billy Gibson, who manages Leonard, said that Tendler was off his books for life. Gibson averred that Tendler and his manager were not in earnest, were looking for advertising, didn't want a Leonard match, were using Benny's name to boost business and that anyway Tendler's challenges were not couched in the fine courteous strain any one should use in addressing a champion. This, of course, automatically barred Tendler from Benny's social set.

Tendler's Comeback.

Tendler retorted that Leonard was a welterweight, or worse; that in another year he'll be in the "Fattie" Meehan class, and then Tendler would need only to claim the championship and take it.

Mention taking that championship and you touch Leonard on a sore spot. He doesn't care anymore for it than he does for his life. He fired right back with a statement given out to all the papers, that Tendler couldn't make the weight himself, and that the Philadelphian was a poor fish if he thought he'd have the slightest chance in a championship match any way. Promoters began to make large offers. Even Tex Rickard began to talk in figures running well over $100,000. But for some reason the challenging died out and the public forgot all about it.

The Real Facts.

Now these are the real facts of the matter:

First, Benny can make the lightweight limit now recognized—which is 135 pounds — but it's hard, and he doesn't like to do it too often. He is haunted by a recollection of what making low weights did to Joe Gans. He could take on a lot of others at catchweights, or without making 135, any way, and he knew he'd have to make the weight for Tendler if they ever fought—Tendler and his backers would demand the lightweight limit and make an awful howl about the title if Benny failed to weigh in.

Second, Tendler's reason for not having fought Leonard before has been purely financial. Tendler and his manager, Phil Glassman, are business men. Tendler has been making a great deal of money without fighting Leonard. He is near enough to Leonard's class to have little real trouble with other "contenders." There's a possibility that Leonard might knock him out. A K. O. by Leonard would stop all the talk about Leonard's dodging him, which is one of his chief business assets at present. It would drop him back from the "contender" class—which would cut his drawing power and his purses down at least 70 per cent.

Both Tendler and Leonard were going along nicely, outboxing Dundee, Jackson, and the rest of the scene shifters. It was a case of let well enough alone until the public grew weary of all the combinations either Tendler or Leonard could arrange without fussing with each other.

It looked as if all the trouble was over when Benny and Lew were at last matched to fight in Philadelphia, for the biggest purse ever offered lightweights. Then Benny knocked his thumb out of place, had his hand put in a cast, and asked for a postponement. Benny and Gibson had bought the moving picture rights of the fight and had paid out about $8,000. They could only lose money by having the match called off or set back. There was little doubt Leonard's hand was out of commission for any fight, and, according to ring custom, forfeits are never taken where the postponement is forced by an injury to either man. However, Leonard's forfeit was collected from the stakeholder, Bob Maxwell, who had no alternative but to turn over the $5,000 on Tendler's demand.

Costly Postponement.

Grabbing Benny's forfeit money that way made Billy Gibson almost blow up. The match was in the air again. Glassman explained that he'd return the forfeit if Leonard was in shape to go on by Oct. 12, and talked about what the postponement had cost him. Gibson called in the financial experts and estimated that it had cost Benny about $260,000, not counting picture profits.

When the fight finally goes on it will be a great relief to the public, which can take the cotton out of its ears and enjoy life again. And it's likely to be one of the best lightweight bouts in years. Tendler looks the hardest proposition Leonard has tackled since winning the title.

WALKER O'LEARY SENDS OUT DEFI

Dan O'Leary, the 81-year-old hiker, has challenged the pedestrian world to a sweepstakes square heel and toe match at 500 miles, to take place in Chicago, New York, or Boston next April. The only stipulation is that contestants be over 60 years old. Dan has put up $100 as a guaranty of good faith. His challenge is framed especially at Edward Payson Weston, Highland, N. Y.; John Ennis, Stamford, Conn., and Henry Schmehl, Chicago, although his desire is to obtain a considerable field if possible.

Conference Football Men Await Call for Practice

teams. Walquist's knowledge of the game and his all around ability may influence Coach Zuppke to shift him to quarter back, which is a natural position for this sterling player.

Devine at Iowa Helm.

After the most disastrous season in Minnesota football history, Lawrence Teeberg, an excellent tackle, is expected to lead a stronger eleven on the field this year. The Gopher played hard, consistent football last season, and with better support will rank well with the leading forwards at the close of the season.

Aubrey Devine, Iowa's all western quarter back, will lead the Hawkeyes on the battle field. Devine was one of the most feared players on the conference gridiron last year. In his triple rôle of kicking, passing, or running he was a great offensive asset. He is fast and elusive and knows when to make a forward pass and when to run with the oval. He has a thorough knowledge of the game and should make an ideal leader.

Jack Hathaway, a dependable center, will lead Northwestern in its hard schedule, which calls for important battles early in the season. Hathaway is the type of pivot player who makes certain of his pass before paying attention to opponents or teammates. On several occasions last year he saved his team the loss of the ball or a penalty by not passing the oval when the receivers were not in the proper positions. On defense he moved to the dangerous points quickly, and it was a frequent occurrence to see him tackle on the flanks.

John Kyle, one of the best full backs developed at Indiana in recent years, will captain the Hoosier eleven. This player is strong, fairly fast, and a clever interferer. He is the type of plunger who generally can make a yard when it is needed for first down. He is equally strong on the defense and should be a tower of strength to his team this year.

Purdue's eleven will be captained by Zeb Carman, a tackle of no mean ability. This player was a factor in all the Boilermakers' games last season and he should be even better this season. He is strong and fairly fast. On defense he has aided his end materially by smashing interference in such a clean way that the runner was turned out in the open for a clean tackle by a teammate.

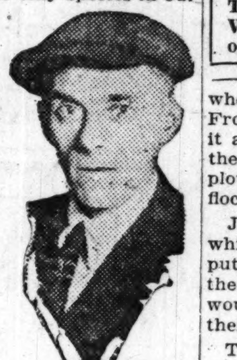
SHOOTING NOTES.

The season on ducks (except eider ducks and wood ducks), coots, gallinules, Wilson or jacksnipe, yellow legs, golden and black breasted plover, geese, brant, opens on Sept. 16 in the states of the middle west, including Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota. The season on prairie chickens in Wisconsin and doves in Minnesota opens the same day.

THE shooting season is upon us. In many states the season opened Sept. 1 on rails, and as these quaint, queer, and curious "boids" have been unusually plentiful a good many of them have probably been killed.



LARRY ST. JOHN.

The king rail, the only species in our territory worthy of attention, is a handsomely marked bird, a study in rich brown, black and gray, but as a game bird he is a frost.

In some regions, notably the North Atlantic states, plover shooting is a legitimate sport. The hunter puts up a blind, sets out decoys, and "whistles in" the birds. Such shooting adds variety to a beach fishing trip and takes the place of duck shooting, which is quite expensive in some places.

Plovers are highly sociable and sympathetic. Any man who can whistle can easily learn to call plovers. One can call in a flock, empty a pump gun into them and then call in the same flock, so trusting and unsuspicious are they.

I trust that any one will agree that such shooting is not much sport compared with hunting the wily mallard or canny pin tail.

Some years ago there lived in Chicago a market hunter known as Italian Joe, who specialized in plover shooting. From all accounts he was a shark at it and it is said that he could imitate the call of a wounded or distressed plover so well that he could recall a flock as many times as he pleased.

Joe was a product of the time in which he lived. Today he would be put in jail for market shooting and the eating places that patronized him would be fined for having plover in their possession.

The writer knows the methods of the market hunter from first-hand knowledge, for some twenty years ago he also shot for the market. Even in those not remote days it was customary to rank a man or boy by the amount of game he shot.

About this time George Shields (Coquina) was editor of Recreation and he was publishing his famous game hog and fish hog pictures. They brought me up short and I know that they had a similar effect on thousands of others. Shields made many enemies, some of them powerful and influential; they got him in the end and ruined him financially, but you cannot kill an idea by putting its owner in the bankruptcy courts.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR STRONG GRID TEAM AT CHICAGO

When Amos Alonzo Stagg, coach of the University of Chicago football team, the "grand old man" of the Midway, gets out his little tin whistle and his 1921 vocabulary of caustic adjectives Thursday for the inaugural practice session of the year, it will be the thirtieth consecutive season that he has coached Maroon football elevens. Stagg began at the Midway the year the university opened, in 1892, and his record since that date establishes him as the dean of gridiron tacticians in the length of service.

A. A. STAGG.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

In thirty years of football coaching, the "old man" has won his share of championships, and some of them have been in years that started with dismal prospects, while in some seasons, such as last year, with a brilliant early outlook, the season has been disastrous. Thirty years of coaching have made him cautious in making statements concerning his prospects.

Prospects are Bright.

But it is no secret that the veteran mentor considers his prospects this year better than average, in spite of the loss of over half of his last season's team. There are many gaps to be plugged, and in the early games several important posts must be trusted to green men, but the Maroon may be counted as a "Big Ten" conference championship contender.

Of the twenty-one letter men of last year, about half will be back. Eight men have gaduated: Capt. Jackson, tackle, Baird, center, Reber, center, Hanisch, fullback, Hutchinson, halfback, Barker, guard, Rouse, halfback, and Hinkle, end. Pheney, guard, has left college, and Hartong, center, is reported to have fallen below in his grades during the summer in the law school and to be ready for the faculty ban, but he has a chance to clear himself by examinations.

Eleven Letter Men Back.

Returning are Capt. McGuire, all-conference tackle, Lewis, tackle, Redmon, guard, Crisler, end, Strohmeier, end, Halladay, end, Tatge, quarterback, Cole, quarterback, Neff, halfback, Palmer, fullback, Timme, fullback, a nucleus of eleven letter men, all of whom it is hoped will be scholastically eligible.

McMasters, Bell, Fouche, Schwab and Hermes, reserves, return to battle for regular berths, and among the new sophomore material are Romney, Updike, King, Zorn, Thomas, Leatherman, Sarpolis, Fletcher, Hurlburt and Bryson, all of whom look like varsity material men, to fill the gaps left by the ten missing "C" men.

West secured a small slam.

A heart opening would have given north and south one more trick. It would have been a bad opening, however, as were all the leads from the north hand. The spades seem least liable to do damage than either of the others. North was horrified after the first trick and only succeeded in making his ace of clubs. The whereabouts of the trump suit having been advertised, the declarer played trumps, as he would not have played them except for the doubling. East and west scored on the deal 468 points above the line, 168 below, instead of at the most 35 and 14, had north been content to let the bid of three diamonds alone.

EDGEWATER BUOY RACE IS WON BY YACHT GOSSOON

E. M. Railton's class R sloop Gossoon won the feature race consisting of the Q, R and S classes in the Chicago Yacht club's annual Edgewater Beach buoy contest, sailed yesterday. Twenty big craft and nine of the one design sloops were sent over the two courses and twenty of them finished within a time period of 11 minutes.

The Prather Farrell sloop Intrepid was victor in the 35 foot class and made the best flat time around the course. The yawl Neoga was first in the yawl and schooner class and L. J. Lambin's 21 foot raceabout cleaned up among the Seawanhaka boats. Naiad, the Dalseg-Davis craft which won the Gehrmann trophy last week was victor in the one design class.

Three Protests Filed.

Three protests were filed at the conclusion of the contest. The yacht Sari protested the winning craft Gossoon for not giving way on the port tack and also lodged a protest against Yank for grazing port quarter. In return Yank protested Sari for not giving room at an obstruction. These will be settled next week. Summaries:

RALPH HOAGLAND BEST COWBOY IN "ROUNDUP" GOLF

BY JOE DAVIS.

Ralph Hoagland, the bronzed veteran of Olympia Fields, was crowned king of the cowboy golfers at the Glen Oak Country club when he won the fifth annual Roundup tournament yesterday with a gross total of 258. He started on Friday afternoon with a score of 71, which was four strokes under par and a fine performance.

RALPH HOAGLAND.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Hoagland followed up yesterday with rounds of 79 and 78. Scores in invitation events seldom run as low the second day, probably owing to the strain of the finish.

Silver Wins Low Net.

E. Silver showed himself a sterling player by taking the low net prize in the Roundup event with a card of 71—73—76 for a total of 220.

The tournament, which drew a field of 145 players, was one of the most successful in the history of the club, and the Roundup dinner on Friday night contained novel features in the line of entertainment.

Carl Devol, another veteran of many tournaments, sought to emulate Hoagland's example yesterday afternoon, but came in with a card of 75, which enabled him to gallop away with the first flight prize, the Bridle and Saddle trophy, from C. S. Williams, 7 and 6.

The Flight Winners.

Finals in the other flights were:

In the ball sweepstakes, which was decided at match play versus par with full handicap applying, J. C. Kieley won first prize with a margin of 5 up. Other winners were Clyde L. Day, 4 up; F. M. Welsh, 3 up, and F. E. Pierce, 2 up.

FLOSSMOOR.

Two excellent matches, with A. B. Cody and A. B. McCahey on the winning end, carried these two players into the deciding contest for the Sports and Pastimes trophy. Mr. Cody defeated F. L. Horton, 1 up, while Mr. McCahey had a home green victory over C. E. Faust. Winners in the class handicap event were: A—C. F. Grimes, 76—8—76; B—R. S. Newhall, 89—12—77; C—H. H. Hadsall, 98—17—81; D—R. H. Drake, 103—26—77.

ROSS' 220 TIME BEATS RECORD

Norman Ross, swimming star of the Illinois A. C., set a mark of 2:19 1-5 in the 220 yard free style event at the Lake Forest Winter club. Although the time is three-fifths of a second faster than the present world record, the time will not officially stand as a world performance, as the club pool is only 50 feet long. Ross and Johnny Weismuller will swim in exhibition races against Harold Vernot, Canadian champion, and Leming Jeliffe of Yale, eastern intercollegiate champion, at Brighton Beach, N. Y., Sept. 24 and 25.

You will be particularly impressed with the extraordinary quality of these fresh fabrics for Fall and Winter now on display

English Unfinished Worsteds—real Huddersfields in Blues, Grays, Browns, Black and White effects and fancy patterns. And wonderful Bannockburns, the King of all Tweeds from Peebles, Scotland.

There are also Blue Serges and Cheviots—good old standbys and many other materials of unusual texture from the best foreign and American looms. Fabrics of a quality that insure long wear.

You are cordially urged to make a tour of inspection, if only to post yourself on what will be worn by men of good taste for the coming season.

R&V Knight

(FORMERLY MOLINE-KNIGHT)

$2150 for $1500

UNTIL NOVEMBER 15, 1921

As one of the country's oldest automobile manufacturers we can design, make and put together parts that comprise an automobile on a competitive basis with any other manufacturer.

Our aim is not quantity production.

We are specialists in Knight Motored Cars, both Fours and Sixes.

We believe in our product and we stand behind it. In Chicago, Cincinnati, Boston, Kansas City, Peoria and Moline we sell R&V Knight cars from our own retail stores and from them give direct service to buyers as long as they may run our cars.

This means a continuance of direct connection with the buyer to his lasting satisfaction.

Our policy to be profitable demands that we build with durability, and minimum of adjustments and replacements first and always in mind.

For the past few months many manufacturers and buyers seem to have forgotten all else except the first cost.

When price alone becomes the thought of the manufacturer, building for a profit at that price must inevitably follow.

After building four-cylinder Knight cars for years we this year brought out a new model which is the best Four we ever built.

It is designed in all particulars for the long continued use and service which the Knight motor itself makes possible if other factors stand up with it.

The fact that the public has already bought and paid for the scheduled output for the whole year of 1921 proves we have made what it wants.

We expect to make and sell this model without change of motor or other design for the next five years.

We priced this car based upon the low material and labor costs of 1921 and believe, while conditions change from time to time, the next five years will show it is fairly priced at $2150.

If, however, the automobile trade is trying to see how low cars can be sold, forgetting for the moment the real factors of economy, we will for a short time make a contribution to this thought.

Until November 15, 1921, we will for advertising purposes price our 1921-1922 Model Four-Cylinder $2150 R&V Knight Touring Car at

(F.O.B. FACTORY)

We believe of all media of advertising R&V Knight Cars, the satisfied owner is the best. We are paying the buyer of today for carrying and financing this car and giving us the advertising value until Spring, and he gets the use of his new car during this good Fall weather.

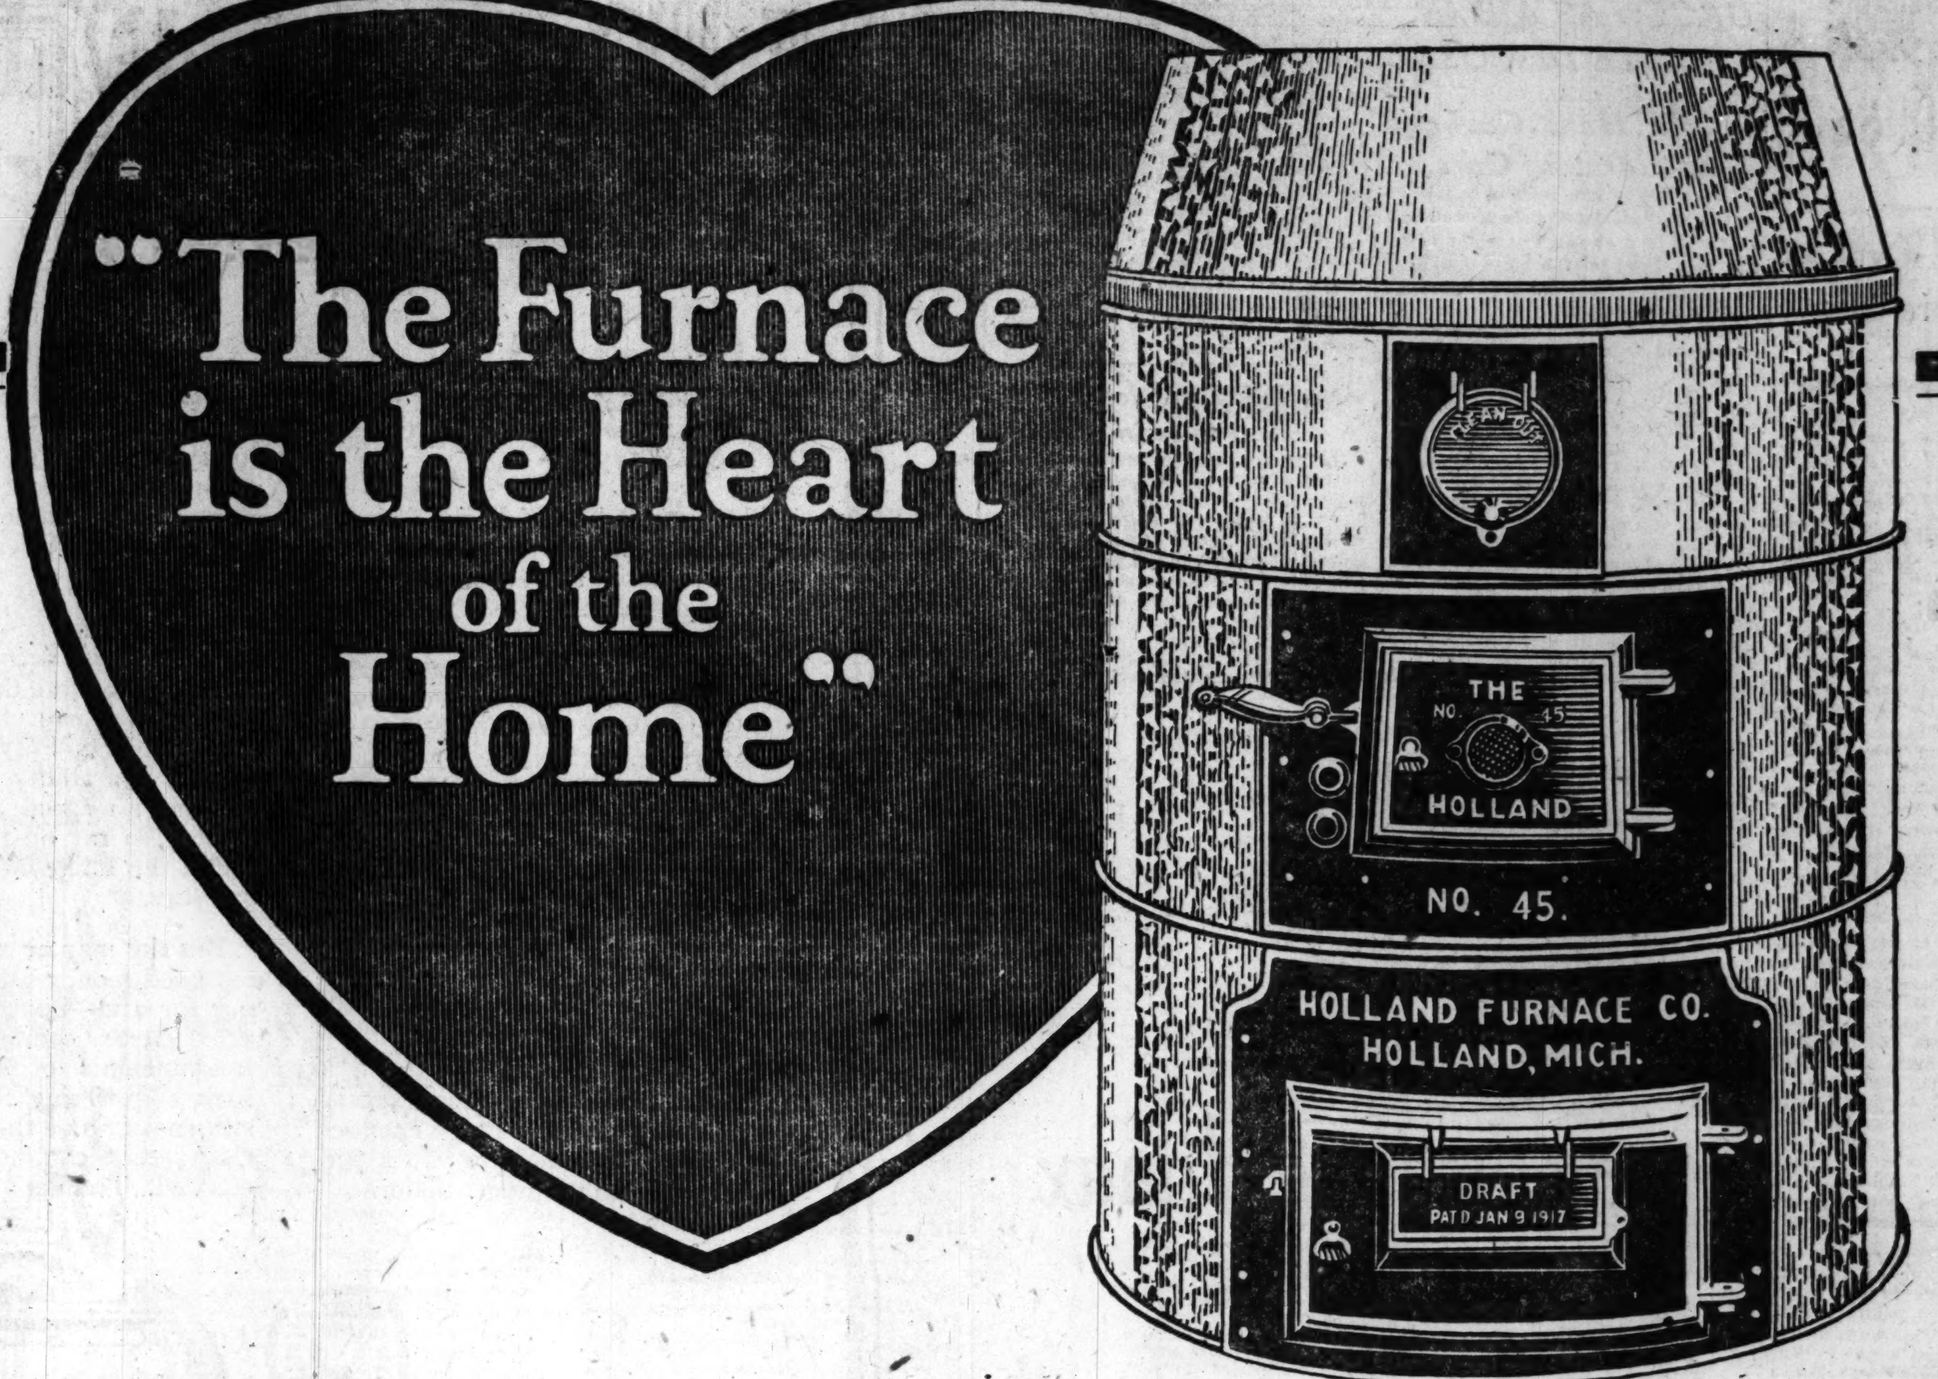
Would you drink from a stagnant pool? There is just as much reason for fresh circulating air from your heating plant as there is for fresh running water in your home.



The Importance of Air Circulation

THERE are certain elemental facts about warm-air heating that every home-owner should know for his own protection.

And of these essentials to high heating efficiency the one that is evidently least understood or appreciated is the importance of air circulation and ventilation.

Any competent heating engineer will tell you that no system of heating is advisable that does not provide for an adequate and constant renewal of air in the building to be warmed.

In other words, it is equally vital that a first-class furnace should include a complete circulating and ventilating system as well as a heating plant.

Yet this all-important factor in warm-air heating seems to be one that is ordinarily overlooked both by the buyer and by the installer of warm-air heating apparatus.

For instance, investigation shows that the average warm-air heating installation provides but one cold-air return intake, and that one usually installed in the hall at the foot of the staircase; or, worse yet, the air is sometimes taken from the basement or through a pipe from the outside of the building.

Now, a furnace, to give adequate, economical, uniform heating, must provide separate and positive means of conducting a correct proportion of cold air out of the rooms to the lower part of the furnace.

A Complete Ventilating and Circulating System

In the Holland design this is accomplished by two or three or more cold-air return intakes, depending on size of furnace, building and number of rooms. These are installed in the floors of the rooms next the outside walls, where most of the cold air is found. (Heat registers are always installed in the partitions or inside walls.)

These intakes draw the cold air off the floors, and it is replaced with the lighter warm air, thereby creating a circulation of moist, fresh, healthy, heated air throughout the entire house.

You will notice that these cold-air ducts are located as low as possible in the Holland furnace. Because the lower the air enters, the greater the pressure it exerts.

You can easily see why the heavy cold air must come from under. Its pressure lifts the lighter, expanding warm air and causes it to circulate more freely, so that the heat travels faster and more uniformly through the pipes and into the rooms.

These cold-air intakes prevent drafts on the floors, insuring the protection and comfort of warm floors for yourself and children. They prevent cold feet, hot heads and unsanitary dust circulation that result from cold air being drawn across draughty floors. They result in a more uniform, more economical and healthy distribution of heat between the floor and ceiling.

The pressure of sufficient cold air at the bottom of the furnace also drives the warm air up through the pipes instead of wasting its efficiency by heating the basement. A hot basement wastes fuel by adding one-third to the space heated.

The Necessity of Expert Design and Installation

Estimating the correct number and the proper placing of these cold-air intakes is a job only for the expert. Only a trained installer can plan and construct these cold air shafts so that they will work efficiently and without counteraction or leakage.

That is why Holland entrusts its installations only to its own trained experts under the supervision of Holland Factory Branches.

It is also the reason why Holland is able to protect its customers with a factory guarantee of complete satisfaction and service, after the job is done.

Another exclusive advantage in the Holland design is the method by which air is conducted through funnel-shaped slots at the edges of the fire-pot. The cone-shaped grate rolls the coals automatically to the edges of the fire-pot, keeping the fire hottest at the sides where the air passes through.

The result is a complete burning of the fuel and of the soot and gases, whereas, in most furnaces, you will find that the fire is hottest at the center instead of at the sides of the furnace—which means fuel waste.

This feature is the secret of Holland superiority in successfully and cleanly burning soft coal or any kind of fuel. It is an economical factor that saves many dollars' worth of coal in the course of the winter.

Holland furnaces are of extra heavy, all-cast, boltless iron construction, with longest possible smoke travel. They are leak-proof.

They are always installed with large enough fire-pots to heat without forcing, because intensive firing and forced draught are extremely wasteful.

In spite of its advantages of quality, exclusive design and factory installation, the cost is little more than that of the ordinary furnaces; and this difference is quickly overbalanced by the savings in fuel, cleanliness, health and comfort.

A telephone call will bring one of our heating experts, who will be glad to explain without obligation the advantages of our system in detail.

We make a specialty of replacing furnaces in houses already built. If you do not know where the Holland man in your neighborhood is located, see phone directory or write the main office for the address of the nearest branch.

The Holland Improved Pipeless Furnace

There is also a Holland improved Pipeless Furnace along the same lines of exclusive refinements for a better and more uniform circulation of warm air throughout the house. If your needs are suited by a pipeless furnace, the Holland man will gladly recommend it and install it for you. At any rate, call up or write today while you have the thought of home-comfort in mind. Complete information will put you under no obligation whatever. You'll find Holland men devoted to service.

CITY'S JOBLESS FIXED TOO HIGH, REITMAN SAYS

Claims Survey Shows but 170,000 Are Idle.

The number of unemployed males in Chicago has been grossly exaggerated, Dr. Ben Reitman, in a report to Health Commissioner Robertson, said yesterday. He estimated the number of Chicago jobless at from 160,000 to 170,000.

"The report that there are in the neighborhood of 350,000 men out of work in Chicago is way off," Dr. Reitman said. "There are only 600,000 males employed in Chicago and, in normal times, there are about 80,000 out of work. At present there about double that number."

Surveys Jobless Situation.

Dr. Reitman is now at work on a survey of the unemployed situation by nationalities. There are few jobless among Swedish and Bohemian workers, who have been more provident than other nationalities and still have savings accounts which are tiding them over, Dr. Reitman says.

With the Negroes, Irish, and just plain Americans the situation is worse. According to Dr. Reitman, their more happy go lucky natures prevented them from emulating the honey bee in the time of plenty and now they are hit hardest by unemployment.

Hopes to Centralize Work.

Dr. Reitman is working on a plan to centralize the handling of the unemployment problem this winter. With scores of organizations at work on the problem lack of system has permitted an increase in "panhandling" and a duplication of work, he says.

Thus far unemployment has caused no great increase in crime, Dr. Reitman asserts. There were 1,196 inmates of the Bridewell yesterday. The number has exceeded 2,500.

OLD C. A. A. EMPLOYE DIES.

George Edie, 56 years old, an employé of the Chicago Athletic association for 11 years, died yesterday morning in the Alexian Brothers hospital after being taken suddenly sick while at work.

SURFACE LINES URGED AS AID IN WASTE DISPOSAL

Would Haul Garbage on Gondola Cars.

Use of the surface lines to haul alley wastes on "gondola" cars to outlying clayholes and swamps at night is being considered by the council finance committee as a way out of the garbage and refuse dilemma.

Ald. John S. Clark, chairman of the subcommittee which has the question in hand, will open negotiations with the Chicago Surface Lines tomorrow. The plan was suggested by the 1914 waste disposal commission, but was never acted upon. If an agreement can be reached with the car companies, teams and trucks will haul the refuse to central loading stations, from which the cars will take it to the dumps.

As the use of many teams, one of the units of municipal patronage, would be done away with, union agents and city hall leaders are expected to oppose the suggestion.

Declaring that to spend $375,000 for the quarry at Grand and Campbell avenues, as recommended by administration leaders, would be "submitting to a plain holdup," Ald. Clark announced that for the present at least al consideration of this suggestion will be dropped.

"We will open negotiations at once for purchase of the quarry at 19th and Lincoln streets, the largest in the city," Ald. Clark said. "At the same time we will go into the question of using the surface lines to haul waste to parts of Hegewisch which are six feet below lake level."

The Lincoln park board will be asked to accept more refuse for use in filling in the lake, and the Illinois Central railroad is expected to use thousands of cubic yards of refuse in track elevation work.

American Abandons Effort to Swim Channel

LONDON, Sept. 10.—[United Press.]—Harry Sullivan, American distance swimmer, today abandoned his fifth attempt to swim the English channel. Within eight miles of Cape Grisnez, and after twelve and a half hours in the water, Sullivan became exhausted and was forced to take to his boat.

Sullivan set out from Dover at 5:52 yesterday afternoon.

His home is in Lowell, Mass.

AUBURN Beauty-SIX

At Least $600 Greater Value at This Reduced Price

in a really new model with 42 distinct betterments

Motor car buying today must be done with open eyes. Unquestionably, price has become a big factor. And yet, you are not out to buy a price—you are looking for a motor car. Economy is sensible—but true economy in a motor car can come only from service and satisfaction and low maintenance in the years ahead.

On August 21st we announced our new 1922 model Auburn Beauty-SIX. When we started to design this new model, the question came up: "Shall we design this car with a view to bringing our price down a few hundred dollars, or shall we work to better the car and deliver fullest value for every dollar?"

We declared with determination for upholding quality. Throughout our 21 years as motor car manufacturers, we have adhered rigidly to the policy that we would never build a cheap car in order to make a lower price.

The new 1922 Auburn Beauty-SIX, with 42 important betterments, is, without question, the finest Auburn car we have ever built. And yet, due to lower material prices today—and favorable buying conditions applying particularly to Auburn—this better car is selling for less than the Auburn Beauty-SIX of a year ago!

Auburn holds a unique position. Our financial standing—always strong—never has been stronger than it is right now. Materials from last year are cleared. The new 1922 model is being built entirely from materials bought at today's lowered market prices.

Auburn stands almost alone in coming out at this time with a 1922 model that is really a NEW model embodying distinct and important betterments.

Measured by costs of a year ago, the new 1922 Auburn Beauty-SIX would be priced at not less than $2300. The price today is $1695 f. o. b. Auburn, Indiana.

The sum total of the 42 betterments in the 1922 Auburn means Restful riding—an advance in motor car service comparable to the self-starter. For Comfort and Values Where Can You Match PAIGE Enclosed Models?

Ever since Paige entered the automobile industry more than a dozen years ago it has specialized in cars of the enclosed type.

The current line of Paige Sedans, Broughams and Limousines consequently represents an accumulated experience of special value to the motorist. Furthermore, great manufacturing facilities, volume production and the possession of exclusive power plants that have won for the Paige innumerable performance records guarantee the buyer of these new enclosed models advantages which can not be matched elsewhere at any price.

The enclosed type is now universally regarded as a year-around car, but with the advent of Fall at hand the motorist naturally thinks now in terms of enclosed cars more than at any other time of the year.

We are, therefore, holding a special exhibition of the new Paige enclosed models and we extend to you a personal invitation to inspect them.

We urge you to be our guest at any time and give these cars a close study, because never in the history of the industry has there been so remarkable an opportunity to buy cars of such extraordinary values as the current Paige line now offers.

The new Paige seven passenger 6-66 Sedan is a supreme example of what Paige has accomplished. Sedans must demonstrate their unique qualities especially in city traffic. There must be flexibility, immediate response, an ability to dart in and out and to speed away on the instant. No car on the market today excels the Paige 6-66 Sedan in these qualities.

But the man or woman who pays out good money for a Sedan is looking for and—above all else—is entitled to extra comfort. First of all the fundamentals of design, including such engineering features as spring suspension, give the Paige an ease of riding that can not be excelled or equaled. Thanks to these basic principles, to a marvelous power plant that eliminates all vibration and to the very best appointments that money can buy, the extra comfort the Paige 6-66 Sedan offers is beyond price.

Like the seven-passenger 6-66 Sedan, the new Paige five-passenger 6-44 Sedan is a remarkable combination of efficiency and comfort for year-around family service. Its splendidly performing power plant is an exclusive Paige product.

The production of beautiful yet extremely distinctive examples of the coach maker's art has always been the happy faculty of Paige designers. The current Paige enclosed models not only uphold but they enhance this reputation for unique beauty.

This distinction can be quickly observed in a casual inspection. We earnestly suggest, however, that when you visit our showrooms you arrange for a demonstration, for only a ride will reveal to you what motoring comfort can really mean.

LEGION CHOOSES BOARD TO PLANT SOLDIER TREES

10,000 to Be Placed Here on Armistice Day.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

State Adjutant William Q. Setliffe of the American Legion has chosen the committee that is to take charge of plans for the Armistice day memory tree planting along the highways. The committee will be glad to give any advice wanted, but it is to have charge of only one planting, that of the 10,000 trees which the Cook county board and the county forester, Ransome Kennicott, have donated to the American Legion and Boy Scouts of the county. The committee comprises:

RANSOM KENNICOTT, Cook county forester.

DAVID L. GOODWILLIE, chairman national forestry committee.

JOHN J. LITTLE Jr., commander Theodore Roosevelt post of the Legion.

JOHN K. MURPHY, attorney.

FATHER LONERGAN of Durand, Ill., chaplain of the forestry regiment during the later war.

ANDY ROGERS, commander Evanston post, American Legion.

DE WITT CLELAND, state committeeman of American Legion.

Fix Cost of Markers Soon.

The Legion is expecting word from the manufacturers any day of the exact price of markers. When this is announced the amount of money necessary may be sent to the committee and every one can have one of the Armistice day trees for his hero for only the price of the bronze marker. There are only 10,000 trees, and "first come first served" will of necessity be the rule.

There will be a celebration to mark the planting of the hero trees, and there will be one on the placing of the markers. Some markers will be ready by Armistice day. You can be among the first to place your hero's name on the great memory roads if you watch for the price announcement and send the name of your soldier and the price of the marker to American Legion headquarters, 111 West Washington street.

Kindly address all queries on tree planting to CHICAGO TRIBUNE Tree Editor. She will refer all questions to the tree committee.

Markers at Cost Price.

The Boy Scouts, who are to help the Legion in the actual tree planting, are asked to send in their requests for markers early, so that as many as possible may be accommodated. Marker prices will be the cost price to the Legion. Not one cent will be made on their purchase and they may not be secured except through the Legion. This will prevent profiteering by any dealer.

A request for instructions on roadside tree planting comes from John T. Keller, chief of Pennsylvania's bureau of silveculture, who has an interest in memory trees in a state which already boasts a fine organization for roadside planting.

B. F. Holscher, superintendent of schools at Arcola, Ill., and member of the Arcola Woman's club, writes for "quick information" in order that the Woman's club may organize for fall memory tree planting.

M. D. Merrick of Toledo, O., writes that he is leading a plan to form a Dixie Highway Tree Planting association to plant memory trees south through Wood county on the Dixie road for a distance of about thirty miles.

Seek Man Who Hit Tailor with Window Sash Weight

The police are seeking an unidentified man who slugged John Martine, a tailor, 60 years old, 3420 North Marshfield avenue, with a window sash weight as he was walking from the eighth to the seventh floor in the Michigan Boulevard building, 30 North Michigan avenue.

Martine was not seriously injured.

Her father suggested it himself—

SHE was just one of two dozen girls who did the routine work in a large filing department. But she had ambitions. She asked her father how she might progress. "Make filing your profession," he advised. "Learn more about it than any of the other girls. Some day they'll need a new head of the department and you'll be ready."

She took a course at the Illinois School of Filing, where every important method of filing is taught. Her diploma —recognized by business executives everywhere—won her a position at a gratifying increase in salary.

What the course has done for other girls—even without experience—and what it can do for you are described in free booklet:—"Filing as a Profession for Women." Write for your copy today, or step in and have a chat with Miss Gladys Bridges, Principal.

Day courses start twice a month; evening courses once a month.

Cold Wave!

ARE YOU READY?

1. Heating plants of all kinds should be thoroughly cleaned and grates and dampers repaired if broken; steam, water and air leaks should also be repaired.

2. Do you realize that 1/8 of an inch of soot, ashes or scale on the direct heating surface of your plant will retard your heat as much as would 1/2 inch of asbestos?

You will burn far less coal and get far more heat by keeping these heating surfaces clean.

3. Breeching, or the smoke pipe, to the chimney should be cleaned out and if badly rusted or leaky should be replaced or repaired.

Sooty smoke pipes and chimneys should be cleaned to improve draft conditions, as well as to avoid smoky houses and chimney fires.

Remember, the "defective flue" fires are often caused by the plaster having fallen off, exposing woodwork or leaving cracks in the masonry.

4. Right now is the time to clean and put your heating plant in first class condition, before your fires must burn continuously.

5. Then keep your plant clean, and with careful firing you will economize on your coal pile.

We are much more anxious to sell you heat comfort at a cost satisfactory to you, than to sell you many tons of coal at a cost that hurts.

6. Are your coal bins filled?

DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through

Autumn Opening

The entire week of September 12 to 17 will be given over to the Dort Autumn Opening at our especially decorated showrooms.

All four models of the beautiful new Dort family of cars together with a cut-out chassis and lecturer from the factory at Flint will be included in the attractions.

At the recently substantially reduced price these new Dort cars do literally and truthfully set a value standard unapproached by any other car on the market. Do not fail to visit the exhibit—it is open evenings, too.

The various models portrayed below exemplify the striking individuality and attractiveness of the new Dort body design.

There is absolutely no car in this price-class to compare with the new Dort in appearance.

And beneath this exterior beauty is the rugged, simply designed Dort chassis upon which the Dort name and fame are solidly based.

The stalwart Dort frame is formed of the finest quality pressed channel steel, 5-32 of an inch in thickness, with a width of 1-5/8 inches and a depth of 4 inches.

Inside and out, from the biggest features to the smallest details, the Dort is a wonderful car and a wonderful value.

Match it with any other car of like price and the Dort superiority will hit you squarely between the eyes.

PUTS VALUATION OF ROCK ISLAND AT $322,277,596

I. C. C. Estimate Is of June 30, 1915.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—In the first tenative valuation report covering the property of the larger railroad systems of the United States the interstate commerce commission announced today that the final value of the property, owned and leased, of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway system, as of June 30, 1915, was $322,277,596. This valuation covers the total property of the system devoted to common carried purposes.

On total property owned by the Rock Island a final value of $252,062,920 was fixed by the commission, and a value of $251,809,983 was placed on the property wholly owned and used.

Divided Into Classes.

The commission put the cost of reproduction new of the common carrier property other than land at $250,697,172 for the wholly owned and used property; for the property used, $330,436,710; and for the property owned $254,200,169.

For the property wholly owned and used the commission put the cost of reproduction less depreciation at $197,090,275; for the property used, $260,255,674, and for the property owned, $199,992,235.

The original cost to date of the property, according to the commission's report, could not be determined. It said, however, that the reported outlay was approximately $207,445,244 in cash, and an outlay in securities of a par value of $26,486,003.

Gives Fifteen Year Earnings.

The net earnings of the company from June 2, 1880, to June 30, 1915, the date of valuation, amounted to $344,764,198.01. Gross earnings in that period totaled $1,101,539,461.36, and operating expenses $756,775,263.35.

The report showed that the Rock Island's total capitalization outstanding as of June 30, 1915, was $377,395,738. SENATORS O. K. SOME OF TAX BILL FEATURES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—Several important administrative provisions of the house tax bill were approved today by the senate finance committee, which began consideration of the measure, section by section. None of the levy sections was reached, but votes on them are planned next week with the income surtax rate the first on the list.

The principal sections agreed upon today were those defining foreign traders and foreign trade corporations, providing the same treatment for personal service corporations as for other corporations and fixing the basis for determining gain or loss in accord with decision of the Supreme court.

NATIONS CLEAR OCEAN OF MINES PUT OUT IN WAR

[Chicago Tribune-Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The British admiralty today announced that Germany successfully has finished the task of clearing the Heligoland blight of the minefield.

The entire North sea and all around the British Isles is now clear of moored mines. The Mediterranean is practically cleared. Three small areas along the Albanian coast should be cleared this year. German mine sweeping flotillas are working on four small areas remaining in the Arctic.

STRENGTH—GROWTH

FACTS From Our Statement of Condition Published Yesterday

OUR statement of condition as of close of business Sept. 6, 1921, published yesterday, tells a story of vital interest to every investor and bank depositor.

Strength and growth—the two keystones of a bank's safety and success—are shown to a remarkable degree in this statement required by law of every state and national bank.

Here are some of the outstanding features:

Total resources of the Madison & Kedzie State Bank and The Investors Company, whose stockholders are the same,
OVER $9,000,000

Cash resources of the Madison & Kedzie State Bank
OVER $1,199,000

Total capital, surplus and undivided profits of Madison & Kedzie State Bank and The Investors Company,
OVER $2,000,000

Increase in deposits of Madison & Kedzie State Bank since last call (June 30, 1921,)
OVER $430,000

Increase in deposits of Madison & Kedzie State Bank since January 3, 1921,
OVER $1,414,000

Large gains were also shown in sales of investments, number of new accounts opened, and safe deposit boxes rented.

Consider what these facts mean: the healthy, consistent growth, the large cash resources and ample capital. A business to make such a showing must be exceptionally well managed and deeply entrenched in the confidence of the public.

Consider what it means to have as your bank and investment house an institution under State and Federal supervision, whose condition is regularly examined and periodically made public.

Surely for safety in your investing and banking here is the institution for you!

RAINS GAIN, BUT REAK SHARPLY N PROFIT TAKING

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Congestion of grain, mostly corn at Montreal, and embargoing of two ports on Georgian Bay touched by the Canadian Pacific road, which is moving grain to Montreal, combined with a lessened export demand, were the big factors in grains Saturday. A realizing movement of large proportions was on, which filled buyers up and checked new buying of large volume. It brought a general evening up for the week, which was to be expected, and carried prices down sharply after an early advance to new levels for the present upturn. At the last wheat was 3 to 3¾c lower, corn, ⅞c to 1½c; oats, ½c to ¾c, and rye, 1½c to 2c lower for the day.

Sentiment has favored buying of grain and with the advance in stocks and cotton the gloom in the grain market has disappeared and prices advanced 14½@19c from the low point of the previous week on wheat, 3c to nearly 4c on corn, and 2c on oats, with the close at a big reaction from the top on profit taking, with net gains of 3¾@5½c on wheat, while corn is ⅛c lower on September and ¾c higher on the deferred distant futures. Oats are up 2@2¾c, rye 2¾@4c, and barley 2c for the week. Provisions were irregular, with lard 77½@85c lower on the nearby and 12½c off on January; ribs, 10@90c lower, while pork is 50c higher than a week ago.

New Buying Boosts Prices.

A strong stock and coton market combined with the large export business of Friday brought sufficient new buying to carry prices up 1@1¾c above the close of that day in the early trading. It brought in heavy sales for profits attributed to local and leading eastern holders, who were active on the buying side early in the week. It was sufficient to check the bullish enthusiasm and although seaboard houses were good buyers, prices declined 4@5¼c, with a rally of ½@¾c in the distant futures at the last. September was up $1.34, December to $1.37¼, and May to $1.42¾, from which point the break started.

Cash houses sold December and commission houses in general, with Omaha houses were conspicuous on the selling side, particularly around top figures. An [illegible] business was on in buying December and selling May from 6c down to [illegible] difference, with the close around 5¼c. This character of trading has been a feature all week.

Export business was light and St. Louis reported London trying to resell 40,000 bu and there was 35,000 bu hard winter offered for resale at Buffalo. It looks as though foreigners were trying to resell their winter wheat and replace with Canadian at lower prices. There was no export business here and very litle milling trade. Unless there is an improvement in the milling trade stocks here are expected to pile up. The week's receipts of 1,234,000 bu. however, were [illegible] bu less than the shipment, suggesting a decrease in the stocks.

Corn Under Pressure.

Corn was under pressure from local and country holders, the latter selling cash and futures in large volume. The early bulge failed to hold, with a reaction of 1⅜ to 1⅝c, and the close around the bottom at 54⅜@54¼c for September and 59⅝@59¾c for May. The leading short bought September and sold December, and the big commission houses sold May heavily around 60c, and also bought December and sold May.

Oats had their bulge early, with September up to 38⅜c and May to 46¼c, a break of over 1c following on profit taking by the leading cash interest and by speculators. There was active buying of December and selling of May at 4½c difference.

Rye broke with other grains, and on general selling, closing at the bottom, with no new export business.

Market in Provisions.

Provision trade was slow, and yet prices held well and closed higher for the distant futures of lard and 12½c lower for October.. There was liberal selling of ribs by Wagner and a net loss of 10c. Exports of lard from New York for the week were 21,000,000 lbs, an unusual showing. Hogs were lower. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 3,091,000, an increase of 175,000 over last year. DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Cotton goods merchants hesitated again today to name new prices on account of the sharp cotton advance. Buying showed a steady broadening movement. Yarns held firm at top prices. Linens were more active. Burlaps ruled firm. Silks showed improvement. Worsted dress goods sold more freely in jobbing houses. Men's wear was quiet.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

No export sales of grain were reported at the seaboard yesterday, but sales Thursday and Friday combined were estimated at 3,000,000 bu. Chicago handlers sold 100,000 bu corn to exports for shipment via Buffalo.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 10,000 bu wheat, 55,000 bu corn, 25,000 bu oats, and 12,000 bu barley. Deliveries on September contracts were 106,000 bu wheat, 125,000 bu corn, 143,000 bu oats, 10,000 bu rye, and 1,050,000 lbs lard.

Offerings of cash wheat at Chicago were not large, but demand was rather slow and premiums on winters were easy, with No. 2 red 1@1½c and No. 2 hard ¾@1c over September. Springs were about unchanged. Receipts 46 cars.

Kansas City prices were unchanged early and 1@2c lower later, with a large carry-over. St. Louis and Omaha were off 2@4c. Minneapolis reported a good demand with premiums unchanged to 1c higher, while Winnipeg was 1c lower at the last after being off 2c at one time.

Offerings of cash corn were fair and sold readily, with prices ¾@1¼c lower, closing easy. No. 1 and No. 2 yellow and white brought 1½c and mixed 1¼c over the September. Receipts, 260 cars. Outside markets were ¼c higher to 3c lower, the latter at St. Louis.

Cash oats were unchanged at the start, but eased off with futures and closed ½c lower. The basis was somewhat easier toward the last, with No. 2 white 2@2½c over; No. 3 white ½c under to 1c over, and No. 4 white 3½@4c under the September. Receipts, 80 cars.

GRAIN RECEIPTS LIGHTER

Grain receipts at Chicago last week were 8,297,000 bu, a reduction of 1,237,000 bu from the previous week and an increase of 1,904,000 bu over last year. Corn receipts were the largest here and at primary markets in over five years, and oats the smallest. Wheat receipts at Chicago were smaller than recent years and at primary markets 5,273,000 bu larger than last year and were 84,000 bu in excess of the previous week. The movement, with the last three figures omitted, follows:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The technical situation in the grain markets early in the day favored a reaction after the sharp bulge. The news was all against an advance, and it has taken a great deal of courage for traders to work on the buying side. German marks are down to 98, the lowest on record, and Germany is one of the largest buyers of our grains. She is also buying corn in Argentina.

The trade is uneasy, owing to the embargo against shipments of American grain to Port McNicol and Aberdeen, Canadian Pacific ports on Georgian bay. Montreal is blocked and the shutting off of shipments from Georgian bay is to permit a cleanup, which will take more than a week. There was preference given to Canadian boats over American, and the only boats said to be unloaded yesterday were those having wheat, which was diverted to Quebec in preference to Montreal, where the grain can be more readily handled. The Grand Trunk railroad, which has four ports on Georgian bay—Tiffin, Godrich, Depot Harbor, Hollywood—has given no notice of an embargo, but one is feared. With the Canadian ports blockaded at the beginning of the movement of wheat from the Canadian northwest, it makes an uncomfortable position for American exporters, and is likely to necessitate diverting grain to Buffalo, which will have to go out through New York and Boston. This will mean an increased freight and handling charge of 2c a bu, as compared with Canadian ports.

At the close wheat traders who were bullish regarded the break in grains as sufficient to put the markets in better shape for a rally. A number of large operators, however, were disposed to look for a further recession before it is safe to take the buying side again.

In the last two days the country has sold 2,500,000 bu cash corn to arrive. There is also corn being applied on previous sales. The movement from the country is the largest at this time in over five years and a big demand is needed to absorb the offerings. Sentiment in the coarse grains was mixed. There has been heavy profit taking in both corn and oats for two days, and it will take considerable buying to keep prices on the up grade.

Government weekly weather forecast suggested the possibility of frost as far south as the Ohio valley and Tennessee and the lower Missouri valley early this week.

Houses with Omaha connections have been trading heavily all week, being large sellers of wheat on every bulge. Omaha has been offering wheat here in liberal quantities.

A heavy reduction in supplies on corn on farm is shown by reports of Bartlett Frazier Co. During July and August primary receipts were the largest in recent years, 51,780,000 bu, against 48,714,000 bu last year. This enormous movement, however, has been insufficient to keep pace with consumption and the visible supply during the same two months decreased 12,800,000 bu to 11,500,000 bu. Reports covering Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska indicate that recent and current heavy movement of corn is noticeably reflected by diminishing country stocks.

B. A. Eckhardt, the miller, says the flour demand has improved and the advance in grains, cotton and securities should create a better feeling all around and improve general business. He is very optimistic.

Pit Traders Get All 'Fussed Up,' but He Isn't Wallace

Former President of the Chicago Board of Trade L. F. Gates appeared on the exchange floor yesterday with two gentlemen from out of town. Somebody had heard that Secretary of Agriculture H. C. Wallace was in the city, and he immediately started a story that one of the men was Secretary Wallace. Board of Trade men are interested in the secretary of agriculture, as he will practically be boss under the Capper-Tincher bill, and they have wondered what he looks like. They did not say anything, but they all stood around and looked and acted like boobs, as a leading member put it. Then it was discovered the stranger was not Secretary Wallace, and business went on.

Now Is The Time to
MONEY

SELLING ANYTHING is simply exchanging it for something else, usually, of course, for cash. When you reverse the process by exchanging cash for an investment security—that is selling money.

In other words, when you invest your money you are really selling the use of it, or, as some say, renting the use of it—for a price, or rental, called INTEREST.

We are now printing an unusual investment circular entitled "Now Is the Time to Sell Your Money." It tells why interest yields are high today—why Safe Investments are now a Real Bargain. It shows why these bargains are unlikely to last much longer. We feel that you are bound to profit by reading this circular and will send you a copy with pleasure—without obligation.

ANNOUNCEMENT of a New Issue of 7% First Mortgage Serial Gold Bonds secured by a Finely Located Chicago Apartment Building and Ground will be made in a few days. You may purchase all of our bonds on our Systematic Saving-Investment Plan, if you wish, 10% down, 10% a month, in amounts of $100, $500 and $1,000.

Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat, and Power.

B. I. J.—The Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat and Power company recently issued $1,500,000 of 5 per cent first mortgage bonds. A like amount previously was issued of an authorized issue of $3,000,000. The bonds are due July 1, 1931. These bonds are secured by a direct first mortgage on all the company's property, valued at $4,300,000. This issue closes the mortgage. Additional coupons at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum are attached to this issue, making it pay 7½ per cent. The company enjoys franchises unlimited as to time. The net earnings for the last ten years have averaged more than two and one-quarter times the average interest charges. The company recently has been granted increased rates. The bonds cannot be redeemed at less than 110. The security is fair and the margin of safety good. This is a fair investment, but not of the highest grade.

Louisville Gas and Electric.

S. T. H.—The Louisville Gas and Electric company first and refunding mortgage 7 per cent bonds are dated June 3, 1918, and mature June 1, 1923. They are secured by a first lien on the company's entire property, subject only to $1,195,000 Louisville Lighting company first 5s, which are a first mortgage on the property formerly owned by that company. The net earnings of the properties subject to the lien of the mortgage for the year ended July 31, 1921, were $2,186,260, against $1,998,015 for the preceding year, or over twice the interest charges on outstanding bonds. The bonds are well secured and rate as a sound investment.

FINANCIAL NOTES

In the tabulation of reports of the condition of Chicago banks as of Sept. 6, printed in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, several errors were made. The Austin National bank has total deposits and savings deposits of $1,823,833 and $1,016,263, respectively, instead of $807,570 and $952,834, as printed. The State Bank of West Pullman has loans and discounts of $1,254,602 instead of $710,302, as printed. The Woodlawn Trust and Savings bank has savings deposits of $2,481,153, instead of $2,529,533, as printed.

The Producers and Refiners' corporation will change the par value of its common and preferred shares from $10 to $50 and exchange the new stock on the basis of one share for five shares of the new issue until Oct. 1. After that date no transfers of $10 shares may be made.

The directors of Phillip Morris & Co., Ltd., have declared a dividend of 20 cents a share. On Feb. 1 a quarterly dividend of 10 cents a share was declared on the stock. In May the directors voted to pass the dividend. The Crown Cork and Seal company declared its regular quarterly dividend of 5 per cent, but has deferred action on the extra dividend of 10 per cent, usually declared at this time.

The Willys-Morrow company of Elmira, N. Y., manufacturers of automobile parts, has recalled 2,000 former employés. The Templar Motors corporation has announced a reduction of $400 on all models.

There were 285 failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 346 for the preceding week and 125 for the corresponding week last year. Building permits issued last month in 145 cities showed a gain of 37.4 per cent over those of August, 1920, Bradstreet's reports. The percentage of gain was the greatest of any month this year. The value of the permits was $145,850,330.

A loss of $267,469.20 was borne by the mines of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company in Colorado during the first seven months of 1921, according to testimony given before the Colorado industrial commission by E. H. Weitzel, general manager of the company. Wages of unskilled labor have been reduced to 25 cents an hour by the Reading Iron company. The pay of machinists has been lowered in proportion.

Shareholders of the Preston Car and Coach company, Preston, Ontario, have approved arrangements whereby the Canadian Brill company, Ltd., will take over and operate its plant. The new company has behind it the entire financial, engineering and manufacturing resources of the J. G. Brill company of Philadelphia, of which the new company is a subsidiary.

The Consolidated Textile corporation announces that it will redeem all its three year 7 per cent sinking fund convertible debenture notes dated April 1, 1920, and that payment will be made at the office of the Mercantile Trust company on Oct. 1. The price will be 102½. The right to convert the notes into the common stock of the company will continue to Sept. 1.

RAILROAD NOTES

Foreclosure proceedings against the Syracuse and Suburban have been brought in the New York Supreme court by the Fidelity Trust company of Philadelphia. Sale of everything the corporation owns is demanded, the proceeds to be applied on the first mortgage indebtedness of $450,000. Interest has been in default for over two years. Appointment of a receiver is also asked for.

Denver and Rio Grande stockholders have been granted permission to appeal from the recent order of United States District Judge Robert E. Lewis, confirming sale of the railroad to the Western Pacific Railroad company for $5,000,000.

Reports compiled by the car service division of the American Railway association show that on Aug. 31 467,815 freight cars were idle on American railroads, a decrease of 23,584 cars as compared with the total on Aug. 23. There are approximately 70,000 idle grain cars in western Canada. They are being held pending an announcement of a revision of freight rates prior to the handling of this season's grain crop.

Railroads operating from Chicago and St. Louis east are somewhat more optimistic in their reports covering the past week's operations. General merchandise traffic is broadening a little. An increased movement of building material is looked for with the adjustment of labor wage difficulties at Chicago. Southern lines report a slow movement of coal compared to last year, moderate shipments of lumber, and continued heavy shipments of wheat to the gulf ports. Cotton is moving in fair volume. General merchandise is keeping up well, but total traffic is below the figures of a year ago.

The Union Pacific railroad is constructing an extension of its North Platte branch at a cost of approximately $3,500,000 to serve the irrigated land in Goshen county, Wyo., where about 17,000 acres will be opened by the United States reclamation service to entry by ex-service men. The farthest piece of land included in the opening will be only six miles away from the railroad.

A request that the governors of the New England states investigate the financial difficulties of the railroads in that section of the country, "and then find the cure and apply it," is made by Senator David I. Walsh, in a letter to Gov. Cox. of Massachusetts. He said he would not "venture to suggest a remedy."

The Cairo terminal of the Mississippi-Warrior service (federal barge line) is complete and waiting for the beginning of operations Sept. 15. It will be used for interchange of freight through agreement with the Illinois Central railroad.

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

stocks	65.98	64.94	65.56	+ .78

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—For a "week-end," with its traditions of inactive markets and absence of interesting news, today gave an unusual variety of noteworthy occurrences. One of them was the fall in the German mark below 1 cent, for the first time in German history.

The cotton market, whose wild fluctuations of price are watched with almost as absorbing interest by bankers and economists as by the textile trade and the southern planter, advanced with such violence as to carry the wholesale spot price above the previous high level of the year, last week's earlier maximum price for October delivery being also nearly reached again.

Steel Orders Shrink Further.

Along with this commotion in two great markets somewhat different conditions in another were indicated by the reported decrease of 298,398 tons during August in orders on the United States Steel corporation's books—a larger decrease than the 287,544 ton shrinkage in July.

Indicating either its response to the industrial incidents of the hour or its own participation in the speculative humor which prevails, the stock market advanced again, with the largest business done of any Saturday in more than three months. Practically all stocks moved up in price, most of them fractionally, but a considerable number with net advances of 1 to 3 points for the day. Comparing the closing prices with those at the end of the preceding week, the picture presented is more cheerful than at any time since the opening week of May, when the stock market made an enthusiastic but premature start for higher values on the first reduction of the reserve bank's rediscount rate.

Railroad Shares Also Advance.

Railway shares advanced today with the others though at a slower pace. The practically complete compilation of the July earnings reinforces all the inferences drawn from the individual reports.

The aggregate gross revenue, though the largest of any month since January, make by far the most unfavorable comparison of this year with the corresponding month in 1920. The largest previous decrease had been $33,151,000 in June, and April's gross receipts had actually increased, whereas the July results fall [illegible] short of last year's. But aggregate operating expenses were not only actually $13,000,000 less than in any other month of 1921, but were reduced by the impressive sum of $151,000,000 from July, 1920. The total net earnings of more than $69,000,000 compare with nearly $12,000,000 deficit in the previous July.

Earnings Still Insufficient.

These are encouraging comparisons, but one may judge how much more recuperation is needed to insure stability in the railway industry from the interstate commission's estimate that the July operating income as a whole represented [illegible] per cent of property valuation. In June only 3¼ per cent was earned, in May 2¾, and in February no operating surplus at all, but even the July percentage is a long distance from the 6 per cent contemplated by the railway act and weekly gross earnings as reported thus far for August have been running 13 to 15 per cent below 1920.

The United States Steel corporation reports unfilled orders on its books as of Aug. 31 last of 4,531,926 tons. This compares with 4,830,324 tons on July 31 and with 10,805,038 tons Aug. 31, 1920. This is the thirteenth successive month of decrease, but the figures are the smallest for all the months since the shrinkage began. The August report shows the lowest figures with the exception of those of May 31, 1919, in more than five years.

New York Banks Improve.

A surplus of $16,400,000 in reserves is shown by the New York clearing house banks, this corresponding to a gain in this item of $16,840,000, owing to last week's deficit. Reserve deposits at the Federal Reserve bank, meanwhile, are $17,400,000 higher, while deposits with the banks themselves are $11,200,000 higher. Loans, on the other hand, decreased again, being less by $8,400,000 and government deposits are lower by $4,700,000. The statement of actual condition, with comparison with last week's figures, follows:

FEARLESSLY GUARANTEED

The Result of Proved Mileage

The 10,000-mile guarantee that is back of every Hydro-Toron tire—on the heretofore unheard of condition that stone-bruise and rim-cut are defects in the tire and not excuses for dodging fair adjustments—has made this the sensation of the tire world.

No other tire ever won a market so quickly and surely as Hydro-Toron has won Chicago and its adjacent territory.

Dealers and users are equally enthusiastic about this tire. Dealers handle it and car owners buy it, knowing that it is more profitable to both of them.
This faith in our claims has not been violated. Tire buyers know that Hydro-Toron is all that we say it is.

They know that our Internal Hydraulic Expansion process of building tires, and the Toron (no-rot) chemical process of treating fabric, produce tires that deliver the agreed mileage and serve as safeguards against most of the vexing roadside troubles.

Are you enjoying Hydro-Toron freedom?

You pay no premium for it, although the results are worth a premium. Standard fabric prices, remember, for tires as big as cords, better than cords, made by a process that prevents defects from entering unseen into the structure of the tire, and with a chemical process of treating the fabric that assists in putting added mileage into and keeping trouble out of any tire bearing the Hydro-Toron name.

The next tire you purchase will surely be a Hydro-Toron—at any of the places listed on this page.

Big as Cords Better than Cords—at Standard Fabric Prices

THE ROAD OF HATE BY CHARLES SAXBY

ILLUSTRATIONS BY HERBERT MORTON STOOPS

It Had Been Closed for Thirty Years, But a Woman's Ruse Opened It

THE October day was drawing to its close as Walking Ann reached the gate of the Rancho de las Palomas y Mar.

Behind her the road dipped abruptly to the beach, a dusty ribbon betwixt the base of the mountains and the surf; before her it wound evenly over the shelf of bean flats upheld by the bluffs. An enticing road, smoothly metaled, fading away across the tawny bean stubble into the golden haze of the California afternoon, sapphire of sea on the one hand; on the other the peaks of the Cuyama, amber and languid with fall, between them the narrow, twenty-mile stretch of the Ranch of the Doves and the Sea, but that road was not for chance feet, for across the whole mesa ran a wicked looking barrier of mingled barbed wire and prickly-pear, broken by a five bar gate bristling with locks and chains, bearing the sign:

"Private. Keep out. Absolutely no passing across this ranch.

"By order, ELLEN GLYNDE."

"Looks like some folks' idea o' heaven," Ann murmured as she gazed. "All just like it oughter be, an' most everybody else kept outside."

She knew that gate; with its counterpart twenty miles north it was known to the whole coast from Santa Barbara to the Montaras; known even to all California, now that the county's suit to force the Glyndes to open the road was before the State Supreme Court. For nearly thirty years it had been closed, cutting off the dwellers in the mountain ranches behind it—and especially those in the Nacimiento. Ann pondered that a moment and there came a picture of a bitter mouthed woman, her eyes haggard with gazing out over the road she might never travel.

"Hm—if you wants a real quarrel you sure got to go to your own family to get it," Ann remarked to the unresponsive gate. "Well, I guess I'll rest me a bit anyhow; not even Ellen Glynde can jail a body for looking at her ranch."

An odd figure she made, a woman alone in that expanse of mountain, sky, and sea. . . . A woman probably older than she looked, since, despite her white hair and puckered, berry-brown skin, there was so much unconquerable vitality still lingering in her bony frame. In sunbonnet and decent dress of drab denim, pack and rolled blanket on her back, she sat like one surveying the world with a glance of twinkling shrewdness.

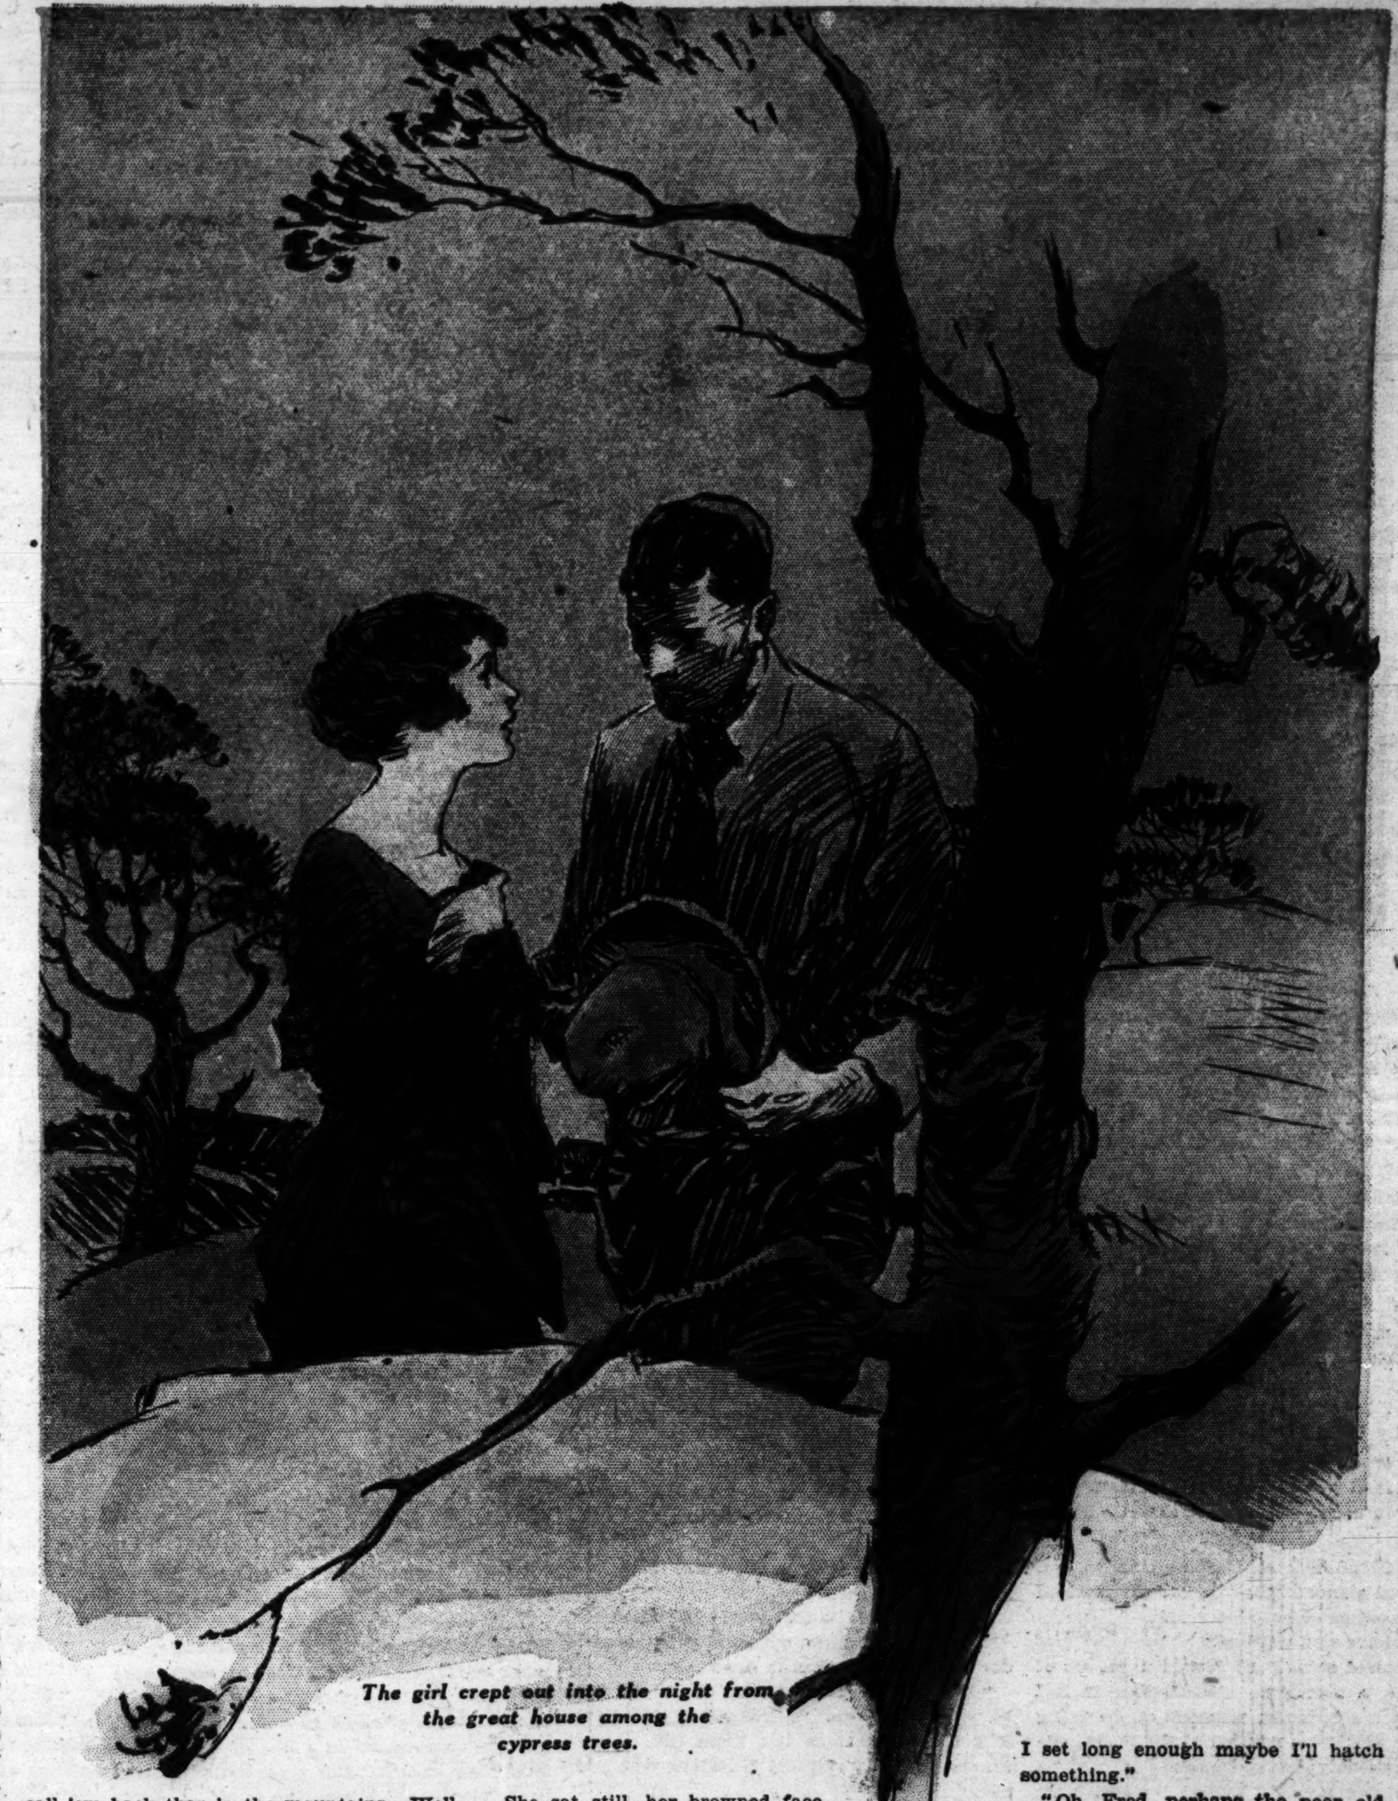
Just who Ann was it would be difficult to say, since no one really knew and she herself vouchsafed no information. From fall till spring she was swallowed up in that great winter refuge of Los Angeles, far to the south, but with each April, as the skies cleared of the rains and roses and poppies flamed in the foothills, would come a day when her winter haunts knew her no more. Even whatever name by which she might be known in the city would drop from her, and up through the fastnesses of the Coast Range or out where the seventh furnace of the San Joaquin dips down to the desert lonely dwellers would begin to wonder if "Walking Ann" would come their way that year. Nor did she give any explanation of that, either, possibly not even to herself. There were many who questioned her, comfortable people following accepted paths, amused or slightly aghast at the sight of her tall old form passing on its solitary way, but to each she would give the same answer:

"Well, it's kind of good to be on your way—and it's kind of good to think maybe you're goin' to get somewhere sometime."

That was all, and on she would go, with never a backward glance, her gaze always before her into that allurement of sheer distance.

"Guess I'll fetch round by the Nacimiento and look in on Jane Donohue tomorrer," she planned. "Land's sakes, if the court opens that there road 'tis she as'll be the first to go sky hootin' acrost it—and a bitter pill for Ellen Glynde 'twill be."

"For years I been wantin' to see it," she continued aloud in the manner of one who walks much alone. "The gates o' hate they call 'em back thar in the mountains. Well, you be big and ugly enough, Lord knows."



The girl crept out into the night from the great house among the cypress trees.

It was an automobile that aroused her from her self-communing, an imported, grey-gleaming car which came purring up the slope from the beach in a perfection of wrought-iron lugs. As the chauffeur alighted with jingling key chain the other occupants of the car turned a battery of cold enquiry on Ann. Entirely out of place she seemed, sitting there unmoved, yet with something of the naturalness of those chaparral bushes at her back, and with a hint of their barbed potencies as well.

The woman in the car spoke first, grey haired, with a certain controlled sweetness in face and voice, every detail as soberly perfect as those of her equipage.

"My good woman, are you in trouble?"

"Not as I knows on, thank you, Mis' Glynde," Ann precisely returned.

She sat still, her browned face quiet under the eaves of her sunbonnet. The answer seemed hardly what the other woman had expected, and a shadow of authority crept into her conscious benevolence.

"It seems very strange, your being here alone."

"There's many strange things in this world, ma'am," Ann mildly replied.

It was the man in the front seat who spoke next; a little fellow, already portly, his face overlaid, as by a mask, with an awareness of heaven-given superiority.

"We don't allow strangers to cross the ranch."

"'Ceptin' funerals," Ann amended. "I've heerd you allow 'em to bring out their dead, but I ain't quite ready for that."

"What are you doing here?" he rasped.

"A setting on the public lands, sir, and if I set long enough maybe I'll hatch something."

"Oh, Fred, perhaps the poor old lady is lost."

That was hardly more than a murmer, such as might come from one accustomed to being disregarded. It was the girl who spoke; seated in the tonneau, overshadowed by the presence of Ellen Glynde, she had escaped Ann's notice. Now, as she leaned forward, she showed of a fragile, drooping prettiness, like that of a plant kept to long in a sunless place.

"No, I ain't lost, Miss, thank you," said Ann, with a trifle less of hostility. "Body and soul, I knows jest where I be."

She turned to the older woman, a hint of malice in her tone.

"I was restin' at your gate, Mrs. Glynde, because 'tis here the trail turns off to the Nacimiento. I'm aimin' to fetch thar right soon, and if you have a message for your sister, Mis' Donohue, 'tis me as'll be glad to take it."

At that name it was as though a shade had been drawn down over the faces of Fred Glynde and his mother; something blankly decent to hide whatever might be behind it. Only in the eyes of the girl came a hint of something human—desperation, perhaps, or possibly appeal. Her hand, slimly ungloved, fluttered an instant over the side of the car,

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

BY

THE CLOWN AND THE DUNCE "GO OVER THE TOP."

"WELL, folks," said the General one evening when the Teenie Weenies had gathered around the camp fire, "we have had a mighty nice auto trip, and I think all the Teenie Weenies have enjoyed themselves here in this lovely camp, but we can't stay here forever, so we've got to get started back toward the old shoehouse."

"Can't we stay a few days longer?" cried the Clown.

"I'm sorry to say we can't," answered the General. "We have got to get in some vegetables for the winter, and besides school ought to be started soon, so we'll have to leave day after tomorrow for the trip back home."

Most of the Teenie Weenies hated to leave the pretty camp where they had been living for some days, but the next morning the little folks set to work getting ready for the long trip home.

It was hardly daylight the next day when the two tiny trucks chugged out onto the road and steered for home.

At noon the little folks stopped near a spring of water to eat their lunch and to enjoy a few minutes' rest.

"I'm goin' to ride on top of the truck," announced the Dunce when lunch was finished.

"I am, too!" cried the Clown. "It will be lots of fun."

"I don't think you'd better try it," said the General. "It's mighty hot up there, and besides you may get knocked off by the overhanging weeds."

"Ah, say! J-j-j-jimminie f-f-fishhooks!" bellowed the Dunce. "We know how to take care of ourselves. We aren't children just out of the cradle. We won't hurt anything. Come on, General, please let us have some fun." And the Dunce looked so disappointed the General couldn't refuse.

"Well, I'd much rather you'd ride inside like sensible people," said the General. "But I want you to remember that if you get hurt you have only yourselves to blame."

The two Teenie Weenies climbed up on top of the first truck and made themselves as comfortable as they could among the many bundles and boxes which were carried there

The two little fellows enjoyed themselves for some time, but they had to duck their heads quite often to keep from being hit by the long weeds that hung near the edge of the road.

The Dunce and the Clown enjoyed themselves as long as the truck kept on the big road, but when the tiny autos had to leave the smooth cement to keep from being seen by the big machines that whizzed by, they were forced to watch out for the big weeds to keep from being knocked off.

During the afternoon the Teenie Weenies passed many big machines, and the little people spent most of the time riding over the rough ground beside the road.

"Oh, l-l-l-look at that big grasshopper! We almost ran over him!" cried the Dunce, pointing to a frightened grasshopper that hopped toward the road in great jumps.

The Dunce and the Clown were so interested in watching the grasshopper they forgot all about the dangerous weeds, and before they had a bit of warning the little fellows were brushed by a big black-eyed Susan from the top of the truck.

The Clown caught a petal of the flower and swung swaying in the air, but the poor Dunce was knocked off the truck and landed right in the middle of a mud puddle.

Fortunately the truck was running slowly and Paddy Pinn, who was driving, brought it to a stop when he heard the Cook and the Chinaman shout, as those two little fellows were looking out the back door.

The Clown was helped to the ground, while the Turk, who was driving the second car, came to the rescue of the Dunce.

"Oh, hear t-t-the little b-b-b-butterflies sing!" cried the Dunce, and he babbled along until he was pulled out of the mud, for the poor fellow had the senses quite knocked out of him.

The Doctor soon brought the poor Dunce around, and in a short time he was quite himself again.

"Well, all aboard!" shouted the General when the Dunce had recovered from his fall. "Get up on top, Dunce!"

"Not on your life," grinned the Dunce. "I'm not goin' to have any more black-eyed Susans kissin' me. I'm goin' to ride inside."

and as the great machine rolled on through the opened gates Ann saw a leather wrist bag lying in the dust of the road.

She sat on, regarding it in motionless silence, wondering what was to come. A few yards the other side of the gate the car stopped again, and Mrs. Glynde's voice came on the breeze, clear and concise:

"You say you dropped your bag. How on earth did you do that?"

A moment of silence, probably covering an apologetic murmur that did not pass the car.

"Really, Lucy," Mrs. Glynde spoke again, in the irritated surprise of one whose own belongings were permanently in their proper place, "you are a most extraordinary girl. Now Harris will have to get out and go back after it."

The tonneau door swung open at that, and the girl sprang out with a swiftness evidently intended to forestall the chauffeur.

"No, please, aunt, don't let me trouble anybody—it won't take me a minute. I'm so sorry——"

It was the overemphasized tone of an accustomed under place. With her delicate prettiness flushed as by a concealed excitement, the girl hurried back along the road; the bag lay there in full view, but her gaze seemed deliberately to avoid it as she made a slight detour that brought her close to where Ann sat.

"I—I dropped my wrist bag," she laughed nervously.

"Did you, now?" Ann queried with some astonishment. Their glances met in a bland unconsciousness of the lost article lying within three feet of them, and with some embarrassment the girl went on:

"It isn't valuable at all; there's no money in it. I mean I never have any of my own."

"She wants me to do somethin' and she's tellin' me as she can't pay me for it," Ann silently translated as she listened.

"Of course, my aunt is most generous," the girl amended. "I have really everything I want."

"Exceptin' a dollar or two to spend as she pleases," commented Ann to herself. Then, rising, she spoke aloud.

"We'll have to look for 't, that's all."

Like the girl's, her own gaze seemed suddenly and violently astigmatic as, bending over the road, she passed within six inches of the bag without seeing it. So this was the niece old Peter Glynde had left without a cent and to whom his widow had given asylum.

"It must be here somewhere," Lucy Glynde faltered on. "I know just where I dropped it—— Are you the lady they call Walking Ann?"

"I be," Ann nodded shortly.

"I have heard of you from—from young Mr. Donohue," Lucy breathlessly continued. "He wrote to me all the time he was at the war, and I heard you say you were going around by the Nacimiento and—and——"

"You wants me to take a message to him," Ann finished for her. "Well, I'll do it—'tis a pity you ain't got a chanst to write him a line."

Lucy Glynde's flush deepened as with a frightened glance toward the car she fumbled in the recesses of her motor coat.

"I—I have one written."

Ann stared straitly up from her search of the road, a search so perfect that it had achieved the feminine pinnacle of deceiving herself. She knew nothing of the opera, she would probably have dismissed it as "a passel o' dog kiyi-in'," but as the girl drew out that note her chuckle was an echo of Figaro's at sight of Rosina's "viglietto."

"So you got it writ, have you?" she twinkled. "Don't you hand it to me, gal—you just drop it as you pick up that thar bag. That Fred Glynde's got his head outer the car a-watchin' of you."

"Oh——"

An added wave of red flowed up over the girl's face; her glance met Ann's with a look part fear, part guilt, largely courage, some gratitude, and completely of a strange mutual understanding. The next instant she had stooped, caught up the bag, and was flying back to the waiting car. And Ann, looking down at the dust, saw a folded note plainly inscribed "Mr. Jerry Donohue, Rancho Nacimiento."

Not until the gates were locked again and the car had disappeared in a dip in the road did she pick it up. Raising her skirt, she stowed it away in a little bag slung from her waist which contained her most intimate belongings.

"So Terry Donohue wrote her durin' the war, did he?" she mused as she adjusted her pack again. "Them letters couldn't come to Ellen Glynde's house—I'll lay that gal rented a post box with a bit o' pawned jewelry and told her aunt as she's lost it. Them as is always so dern right theirselves can sure be a fruitful vine o' wrongdoin' in others."

Her mouth grew caustic as she turned away, following the trail through the chaparral, where dried stalks of yucca bloom rattled in the breeze like skeletons of bygone springs. Into a cañon it led, a mere cleft heavy with shadow in the dying afternoon. The loganberries were red on the slopes; below them madronos and sweet bay arched over the blue gray bowlders of the dried stream bed. Higher up she came on occasional pools of brown water, then at last a flowing thread, clear and cool.

"The summer's gone," Ann commented as she saw it. "The streams is risin' to meet the rains."

"Ellen Glynde and that chesty little sparrer of a son o' hern," she muttered hotly, "I'll teach 'em to sass me."

In deliberate silence she made her camp by a crystal pool where water beetles skated on the surface and a huge black and yellow butterfly sailed on a festal barge of a fallen leaf. Laying out her blanket with neat exactness, she took from her pack a coffee pot and folding fire grid, kindling a clean, hot fire of dry chips. Her silence grew deeper as she set out her meal, the scanty fare of the seasoned "hiker," a pile of oatmeal crackers, a bunch of Tokay grapes, redly translucent on a platter of green leaves.

With a self-control that was almost ominous she waited until the coffee boiled, biting delicately into a cracker meanwhile. Then that control broke, the coffee pot flew through the air and crashed against a tree, and after it, pungent and scalding as its contents, went Ann's words.

"Rats bite 'em—take that! I wish 'twas Ellen Glynde as I am aimin' at. I'd teach her to 'my good woman' Walking Ann."

"I'd better hit the trail again, I be too bilin' to make camp," she scolded on. "'Tis a plumb sin for folks to be goin' around makin' a body so mad as I be right now. But 'tis queer, too; the wickeder I gets the spryer I be. I'll lay as I fetch the Nacimiento afore I quits hikin' this night."

Carefully drenching the ashes of her fire, she struck again up the trail. The short twilight had gone, the full moon still a pale promise behind the ridge. The spring chorus of the mocking birds was stilled, and even the stream's voice hushed by the long months of summer drought; all was silence as, leaving the humid coolness of the beach behind her, she went on and up into that Californian reversal of the higher the hotter. A dry heat, the breath of the desert seeking the sea, bringing a sense of vastness as though the dark bubble of the night were distended by it. From behind Cuyama peak the moon came up, reddish and huge, poising an instant on the crest like some strange beacon fire before it swung off into the limitless spaces.

It was at the Nacimiento Forks that she came upon Terry Donohue. She had heard him for some time, the beat of a horse's hoofs, an occasional quieting word as its rider urged it along the narrow trail. Then suddenly he came upon her round a bend, his pony shying violently in towards the bank as she stepped down from the outer edge to let it pass.

Leaning from his saddle, Terry Donohue scanned her closely.

"Walking Ann, is that you?—Thank God!"

"Amen to that, though what it be about I don't rightly know," Ann answered.

"It's mother—she has one of her spells," he went hastily on. "I was riding out to see if I could get some one from one of the ranches; there's only old Telesfora with her now."

"Them Mexicans is no good," sniffed Ann. "If you don't watch out, she'll be stickin' needles into your ma to drive out the devil. You take me right to her."

"That's sure a relief," he said as he dismounted. "Give me your pack. Could you ride my pony?"

"Young feller," returned Ann severely, "when the Indians quit the reservation back in the eighties 'twas me as rid forty mile to Laramie to take the word."

The moon was flooding the cañon as they turned up it, the bare bank of the trail gleaming yellowly amongst the chaparral. Scarlet stemmed madronos with glossy leaves, mottled ghosts of sycamores sere with fall, rock pinnacles fantastic and macabre under the eerie light. Ann rode silently considering Terry Donohue as he strode ahead, slim legged, erect, her pack and blanket on his shoulders.

"So you got back from Siberia at last?"

"Yep. Just my luck to get sent there."

"I guess you be right glad to be back."

"I suppose so."

Ann thought about that for a while, feeling dimly that this was a different Terry from the irresponsible lad who had marched away nearly three years before.

"Don't it seem good to be home?"

"It ought to," he answered dully; then came a hotter tone: "Home! Good God, after all I've seen and been through, and here they are in the same old place with the same old hate!"

"Well, you done a good work, lad, helpin' to make the world safe," Ann soothed, but the young fellow's smoldering resentment burst out again.

"Yes, safe for Fred Glynde and that Jap partner of his to corral all the potatoes from here to the Mexican line and hold up the price."

"I could help break that if mother would only listen," he went on. "There's men would finance me in putting a road through the back range to strike the S. P. at Carmelo; it would make the ranch worth half a million at least. But no, mother must go out over Las Palomas or not at all, and here I am, poor as a cholo, with all this land going to waste."

He had turned, standing bareheaded on the trail, the straightness of his features accentuated by the deep shadows of the moon, his eyes blackly bright under blacker brows and hair.

Even so his father might have stood before him, Ann thought; that dead Terence Donohue, too handsome, too winning, too impulsive—in short, too Irish. Ellen Fall, they said, would have given the heart from her body for him in those days. It might have been a match had not her sister Jane returned suddenly from the east. In two weeks Donohue had married and carried her off to the Nacimiento; a month later Ellen had married old Peter Glynde of Las Palomas and promptly sealed its gates.

"So your ma's sick again" Ann queried as Terry turned once more to the trail. "Was you by any chance talkin' o' leavin' the ranch?"

He stopped in his tracks, casting a surprised question over his shoulder.

"What makes you ask that?"

"Mayhap because I be a woman myself," said Ann shortly.

Topping the ridge the trail descended to the vale of the Nacimiento. A softer place, a richer luxuriance, its arable bottomlands wreathed in silver mist; far off between the slopes showed the dark line of the sea; a single light that told of the Palomas ranch house and a ribbon of faint gray that was the road of hate. Down they went between high hung orchards of pear and prune, of olives and almonds, or figs still heavy with fruit. A spicy breath of pine, a mingling of palm, oranges and untended shrubs, a long, low house half buried in purple creepers.

"There's many a soul would think they was in heaven could they pass their days here," Ann thought, "while Jane Donohue—but 'tis what a body's got inside of 'em as makes the difference, not what's outside."

Dismounting, Ann stalked into the house, a place of that precise neatness which only a small soul seems able to achieve, heavily shut in against the glory without. A bedroom full of dark mahogany and the hot glare of an oil lamp. By the bed a Mexican woman crouched and fingered a rosary, casting glances of emotional pity at the thin form outlined by the sheets.

Of the beauty which had seduced Terence Donohue only her hair remained, its masses, hardly touched by gray, spread out on the pillow about her. There was something almost startling in the contrast between those lustrous curls and the face between them, narrowed and pinched by years of self pity, the lips compressed to a line of unconquerable stubbornness. Her eyes, large and brilliant, were open, but at the sound of Ann's footsteps outside they closed with almost a snap and the whole face fell into an expression of patient suffering.

"Is that you, my son," she murmured as Ann came in.

She paused, her lips still closed, apparently spent for breath. Then her voice went on again, a faint trickle of desperate pathos.

"You are right, Terry, and you must do as you please about putting that road through. Do not regard my feelings, my boy—I am but a dying woman and this world is for the young and strong. Do as you please, Terry. I can bear it and I will never reproach you—it is only for a little longer that I must suffer. . . ."

Standing by the bedside, Ann listened while the voice flowed on in all the sapping tyranny of helplessness. Then suddenly her words came down across it like an acid dipped chopper.

"Jane Donohue, you quit them carryin's on."

The eyes opened at that and there followed an exclamation.

"Walking Ann!"

"Aye, 'tis me all right and I ain't no poor innercent lad to be took in."

For an instant their glances countered and clashed, a pampered willfulness on the one side, on the other an understanding grim and impartial. Mrs. Donohue spoke eagerly.

"What is the news outside?"

"As I came through San Luis Obispo they was bettin' even money that the courts would open the road."

"Oh—the courts!"

The woman sighed with the hopelessness of thirty years of unavailing litigation. Her bosom, pinched and meager as though all its vitalities had been drained away by her consuming resentment, rose and fell in convulsive gasps.

"I'll never live to see it. Just heaven, what have I done that I should be tortured so?"

"'Tis you as be doin' the tormentin'," Ann put in. "Terry could have a road through to the valley in three months if you'd but let him."

"Terry owns the ranch and I have told him to do as he pleases."

"Yes, I heerd you tellin' him so as I come in," Ann returned.

Again their glances met and Jane Donohue raised herself on her elbow.

"I can't give up—I can't. Oh, if I could but ride once across that ranch and laugh in Ellen's face as I go—"

Her hand, a mere bunch of fevered bones, fell on Ann's wrist and at its hot clasp the other started in a genuine alarm.

"Woman, you be real sick."

"Sick—I am sick to death," moaned Mrs. Donohue as she fell back on her pillows again. "But I will never, never give in."

A quiver of pity crossed Ann's face. Wasted, narrow, held by that almost fanaticism of stubbornness, the woman lay between her masses of hair, and from her eyes, as from two windows, there seemed to leer the very presence of that obsessing demon—the same one that, except for those drawn shades of blank decency, might have looked from the eyes of Ellen Glynde and her son. As Ann raised her an uncontrollable spasm shook her frame, causing her to fight for breath.

"There's naught will cure her but to get what she wants," Ann thought. "And so long as she lives she'll keep Terry cooped up here and be dyin' whenever he talks o' quittin'."

"Lie you still, Jane Donohue," she went on aloud. "I got to speak to Terry a bit and then you and me is due for a talk."

Terry was sitting on the veranda steps, chin in hand, staring gloomily down the moon flooded vale toward Las Palomas. Holding out the note picked up in the wake of the Glynde car, Ann spoke:

"Here's a letter for you, lad."

He did not stop to ask how she had obtained it; his eyes raced greedily over the lines, then sought the gleaming night dial of his wrist watch.

"Ten o'clock already," he exclaimed.

"Most like she'll be waitin' for you," Ann encouraged.

"She's been waiting since before the war," said Terry bitterly. "If mother would only let me do something I'd have had her out of Las Palomas long ago. I'm only waiting until I have something to offer her."

"She won't thank you none for that waitin'."

"How do you know that?"

"Because I been a gal myself—you didn't think that of old Ann, did you? But I know, and you take her, lad—take her quick."

"How can I ask her to come here from all she has down there?"

"She's awonderin' how you can't."

"She wants to see me tonight—but there's mother sick again," he hesitated with a glance at the house.

"Don't worry none about your ma. I'll stay with her till you gets back."

A glance of gratitude, warmly fleeting, and he was mounted and off, galloping down the vale with a lover's recklessness. Seated on the steps Ann pictured him passing on his way, insulated from all the world about him by the joy of that coming meeting, in his face a light that shamed the mild radiance of the moon. Then the girl, seemingly so meek and fragile, creeping out into the night from the great house among the cypress trees.

"I'll lay she has to lie to get out," Ann mused. "Land's sakes, the lovers' lies the Lord has to listen to! Millions o' years of 'em, and all the same since the world began—and I'll bet there's a kinder twinkle in His eye when He hears 'em."

Her face softened as she sat there, her sunbonnet thrown back from her white hair, her features puckered and brown, almost mystic in their stillness.

"One o' my own he might be, if they'd but lived. 'Twas such nights as these their father came acourtin' me under the cottonwoods down by the Platte ——"

She thought of the fence at the bottom of the vale, high, barbed, grown through by thorny, prickly pear.

"They has a way through it, them two,

A NICE GIRL

By Mildred Frisby

MERTELLE was not a nice girl. No self-respecting jeune femme, she argued with a dash of classroom French, would care to be classified under the nice girl heading.

Nice girls strolled in Lincoln Park, taking snap shots of cute giraffes and snappy statues.

Nice girls preferred Kathleen Norris to Theodore Dreiser.

Nice girls were forever crocheting lace for their shimmies instead of shaking them on mirrored dance floors.

The clamlike excitements of nice girls were shunned by Mertelle. For instance, she never made fudge in the presence of males or termed anything "perfectly wonderful," or—

But perhaps it would be of some help to know that Mertelle had evoluted from Myrtie—Myrtie, Myrtle, Myrtelle, and so on up to the pure chill heights of Mertelle.

Mertelle soaped her eyebrows into permanent arches.

Mertelle recognized the herd instinct in the bobbing of her bright hair.

Mertelle had once posed for a moving picture film company on the north side. She was one of the lobbyists in the big hotel scene—you know that one where Tulip Meringue gallops to the clerk and demands a room for less than $67 a day.

Ah, you remember?

A right pretty girl, Mertelle.

It was six o'clock of a particular evening. Mertelle, seated before her vanity dressing table, was staring intently at the eyes in the mirror. Her lovely hands lay palms up in her lap. There was about her a faint aura of sorrow, suggesting a nun at vespers.

Through her mind a picture was unreeling. Mertelle, small and hurt, was being lifted by a policeman from under a heavy truck. The picture was a bit harrowing. She winced, rapidly churning her thoughts until she saw herself in a black casket, floating on Lake Michigan like Elaine of Astolat.

Tears began to gather in the eyes of the lily maid of Chicago. She opened those eyes wide. They began to sparkle.

A few tears, Mertelle had learned, were as beneficial to the orbs as a permanent wave to the hair, even if one did have to use imagination to get them there.

Her hands flew in and out of the jars and trays on the table. She dabbed some powder on her chin, admired the widow's peak on her forehead, looked closely at her profile.

Then, holding high her head, she began in a peculiar husky voice—

"I never believe in doctors, and I never believe in lawyers, but I always believe in fortune tellers."

"Pauline Frederick?" interrupted a perky voice from the dark of the doorway.

"Ethel Barrymore," Mertelle volunteered in the same sweet huskiness, then swinging around, she yammered in the voice reserved for family use:

"Angie! You little fool! You wore my gold sweater to school again today! How many times have I——?"

But Angie had scurried down the hall, leaving Mertelle to follow, into the dining room.

The less important members of the Coyne family were eating the evening meal in silence.

"Mother! No salad again?" Mertelle whined. "Of course it doesn't make any difference to you, but I told you I was dieting, and salads are about all I can live on."

"Try some of those creamed onions," urged Mrs. Coyne, patiently.

Mertelle sniffed, but daintily.

"Besides," Mrs. Coyne continued, "there weren't any eggs for the mayonnaise."

"I know, mamma," Angie cried. "Mertelle used the eggs to wash her hair. She used four. Then she put lemon juice on it. If she starts in using the cream to bathe in, I'll have to diet, too."

"Myrtie, dear, I heard you scolding Angie for wearing your sweater," Mrs. Coyne said, as she dished up the first strawberries of the season. "I told her not to."

"I know, mother, but she did it anyway, and it happens every day and every day." There were pathetic stops between each word. "I suppose I'll have to marry some boob, just to get away from her."

"Couldn't you marry somebody who isn't a boob?" hopefully suggested her father.

Angie hammered her spoon on the table.

"Hear! Hear! Give it to her. That's a great line, papa! She's trying to scare you. Why, she's lucky to get Bob Mehaffy to take her to the Black Cat tonight."

"I wasn't thinking of Mr. Mehaffy, Angie, dar-ling," said Mertelle, dieting now on swimming strawberries.

"Oh-hoh! I suppose you mean the limp leather lad with the Brooklyn accent. Chews-dah! Raw-thair! I saw you with him at the New Tracy today. Mama, Mertelle's so afraid she'll be normal that she actually makes dates with that!"

"Who is he, Myrtie?"

Father grinned at the beautiful bolshevist.

"Archer Caballero"—this sullenly.

"Hum—wasn't there something about a man with a name like that in tonight's paper? Seems to me—why, yes, he was arrested, I believe."

Mertelle bit her lip.

Mertelle put down her spoon.

Mertelle rose.

"I don't happen to know any one who'd be arrested, father. My family are always against me."

She flared out of the room, walked into the living room, and snatched the paper from the table. She scanned it earnestly, down one column after the other, and found the story.

> A jaunty youth, who gave the name of Archer Caballero, was arrested late this afternoon in the New Tracy hotel by Detective Sergeants Kelly and Killeen of the bureau, charged with being a professional bridegroom.
> "We have been looking for this man for several months," said Kelly. "We believe he is the chap who has been marrying widows and flappers in various cities, getting their money and deserting them."
> A search of the prisoner's clothing revealed a little pocketbook in which were written the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of more than fifty Chicago girls. The police would not give out their names.

Mertelle's mother and father and Angie were coming into the room. She kicked the paper under her chair, yawned until her ears cracked, trying to look disinterested.

"How pale you are, Myrtie. Perhaps you're not getting nourishing food. Those creamed onions now—"

"I'm all right, mother."

"Of course she is, mama. It's the style now. No rouge on the cheeks. Gives 'em that interesting pallor."

"We're going to see Charlie Ray at the Vitagraph, dear; have a good time at your dance."

Finally they were gone.

That nasty story! Mertelle wouldn't, couldn't, go to the dance tonight. She'd call up Bob and tell him not to call for her.

She could hardly believe it about Archer Caballero. He had been so nice, indeed so charming. She was glad no one could say anything about her, anyway She had been to dances with him, to dinner twice, and to a few matinées. That was all.

But what if people did talk? She wouldn't think about it That was it—she just wouldn't bother head about it.

She crossed to the phonograph and put on a record. It sounded ghoulish. She lifted her voice in unison with the adenoidy tenor on the spinning plate.

Love bird, sweetly singing,
To my love come wing-ing.
Just a mes——

"Mess is right," she finished.

She shut off the intolerable song. She walked up and down the room.

"Oh, darn!" she said—then realized that sounded mighty like what a nice girl would say.

"Oh, damn!" she amended.

The front door bell rang. It was Bob, of course. She had forgotten to phone him. Her scowl changed to a smile before the shadow etched on the glass door. She grasped the knob and jerked.

It was not Bob.

Before her stood a chin, enormous, square, and dark blue from bathroom barbering. In ordinary times, that is, it would be a chin. Now, shot out at a fearsome angle, it was a thing with which to frighten little flappers.

The chin began to move, the mouth above it to articulate.

"Say, girly, whatcha think we are? We won't eat yuh. We're from headquarters. Kelly and Killeen. I'm Kelly."

The chin was then, really attached to a man. It came into the room through the doorway of which Mertelle was backing. Killeen followed.

If Kelly had a chin, Killeen had a heart. He often said so. That heart began to pump warmly now as he looked at the picture before him, the picture in a silver dancing frock.

"Now, little lady, we ain't here to make trouble," he began, only to be interrupted by the awful chin.

"Trouble?" mocked the chin. "Oh, no! We never make trouble. It ain't our business. We're here to ask yuh how yuh like the moo-sicians at the New Tracy."

"Oh, it's about that horrid Archer Caballero! Please don't drag me into that. Please!"

Mertelle was not imitating Ethel Barrymore now. But the husky voice was there, just the same.

"Don't you worry, Miss Coyne." Killeen was sympathetic. "Just answer a few questions about this now Calábozo guy, and——"

The chin was moving nervously about, seeking something. Relieved, its proud owner spat accurately upon the imitation log in the imitation fireplace.

If these two men would only go! Kelly and Killeen. Killeen and Kelly. These names jingled through her reeling brain.

"Have a cigaret, Joe?" Killeen tossed his package. "The kind I'd hock my watch for," and Kelly from his point of vantage in the depths of a chaise lounge, offered the package in turn to Mertelle.

"Smoke?"

"Yes. No! Why certainly not!"

The gray eyes of the girl turned to jade.

"You're keeping me from an engagement. If you gentlemen"—slight emphasis—"would excuse me——"

"Tell us first about this Cabbagero," and Kelly laughed long at his joke, revealing interesting spaces of dental neglect.

She told them all she could.

"An' he didn't make love to you?"

"He most assuredly did not," said Mertelle.

Killeen looked significantly at Chin Kelly, then rose and thumbed his coat lapel.

"I don't think we'll need you as a witness, little lady. You shouldn't be mixed up in this, such a nice girl. Don't smoke, don't use rouge. Guess we better be going!"

"Yeh, guess we better," said Kelly. "Sorry to bother yuh, girly; yuh sure are the nicest girl I ever seen."

They were rewarded with an April face.

"Thank you," Mertelle said prettily, and clicked her heels daintily toward the entrance.

And as they closed the door a small silvery girl flopped groaning into a big chair. She was free. But what was that vague unpleasantness that lingered?

A nice girl! The nicest girl I ever seen. They had dared to call her that! Her—Martelle!

"Nice girl?" she said. "Nice girl, damn!"

A blue chin neared her mental vision. She caught herself up.

"Nice girl? Why, of course."

Late that night, as the movie captions have it, Angie heard a noise in the kitchen and went to investigate.

She half reeled into her mother's room. Mrs. Coyne was putting a boudoir cap on her head.

"What's the matter, Angie?"

She had learned to be calm, even though the mother of Angie and Mertelle.

"Matter?" shrieked Angie. "It's Myrtie!"

"What about Myrtie? I know she didn't go to the dance."

Then Angie hurled her bomb.

"Ye gods! She's washing the dishes!"

THE ROAD OF HATE

my house and my wife will make her welcome—I shall see to that. Lucy," he turned to where the girl waited, "pack anything you can rightly call your own and be ready in fifteen minutes. We will drive to San Luis and be married this afternoon."

"Lucy——!" ejaculated Mrs. Glynde, but from halfway up the stairway the girl faced her in a stillness of exaltation.

"Yes, aunt; Terry and I have been engaged for nearly three years."

In the silence that ensued Terry was going; an almost crashing silence, broken only by a bubble of song as Lucy dashed up the stairs, and across it the two sisters faced each other in a realization of the futility of their thirty years of warfare.

"Terry—my son—you are killing me," gasped Jane Donohue. She fell back in all the appeal of one of her "spells," but Terry was beyond the reach of that now.

"I hardly think so, mother," he answered. "Mrs. Glynde, since you are the real cause of my mother's sickness I will leave her in your care; we know that it is not necessarily fatal."

He went at that, shouldering aside Fred Glynde, who, between him and the door, tried vainly to hold his ground. As the door clashed shut behind him Ellen Glynde spoke, again in that relapse to the relations of thirty years before as if all that had since happened were wiped out.

"His father's temper, Jane."

"Yes, poor Terence always did just what he wanted and there was no changing him—as you well know, Ellen."

"You were never fitted to bring up a son," Mrs. Glynde went on, but, with a stray trail of jasmine falling over one ear, Jane Donohue flashed back in weak asperity:

"Not a word against Terry, I won't have it. He's quite right and a better son never stepped, and if your Fred there had the spirit to talk to you like that you'd be a different woman today, Ellen."

"Jane, how did you come to think of doing such a senseless thing as this?" her sister demanded.

"I didn't; it was Walking Ann who suggested it."

Now in the evening quiet of the cañon, sipping her coffee and closing her eyes, Ann dwelt long and deliciously on that moment. The cold colors of the leaded glass in the front door, the staircase and its fretwork carvings; herself, with sunbonnet, blanket, and staff, the sudden center of all eyes as, with meekly downcast gaze, she dropped a decent curtsey.

"Yes ma'am; I be the 'good woman' as sot by your gate, Mis' Glynde."

She had gone at that, out of the door and down to where Terry awaited Lucy, pacing solitary under the fog dripping cypresses. That approach took courage, for in that moment even the friendly men who had accompanied him were leaving him alone. Ann marched straight up, secretly glorying in what she had aroused in him.

"Well, lad?"

"Get out of my sight, you meddling old harridan," he answered, his voice a smooth sluice of cold anger. "It was you who put my mother up to that infernal trick."

"Aye, 'twas me," Ann calmly agreed, "and the time is coming when you'll get down on your ham bones and give thanks as I had the sand."

"You have estranged me from my own mother," Terry accused.

"That's all you know about it," retorted Ann. "Your ma's in there a stickin' up for you again' Ellen Glynde right now."

"She is?" he exclaimed.

"She sure is. And let me tell you this, lad; there never was a body yet as amounted to anything until they first took and wrang the neck o' their family in some way or other. And the harder and quicker they does it the more their family thinks of 'em."

She left him to think that over, stalking away into the fog, a self-reliant old figure that gradually dimmed until the drifting vapors hid her entirely.

"Them was true words as I spoke. True as gospel, a bit bitter in the mouth, as the Book says, but sure sweet in the belly."

"That Ellen and Jane," she pondered on. "There won't be no separatin' 'em after this. They'll live on there, maybe for twenty year, havin' a good time a pickin' at each other. But thanks be I made a man and a master out o' Terry Donohue this day."

She sat on in such still serenity that a little Kangaroo rat ran out on a log at her side, dashed at a fragment of cracker, and hopped off again, carrying its treasure in its tiny forepaws. A lonesome sounding breeze sighed down the cañon, sending a brown sycamore leaf swirling to Ann's feet.

"The wild critters is layin' up their stores and the mountains is closing down for the winter," she mused. "'Tis time I was packin' my old bones away in Los Angeles till next April.

A smile curved her lips as she contemplated the last scene of all. The splintered débris of what had once been those gates of wicked hate, and Terry and Lucy, the jasmine decked wagon now a lovers' chariot, driving out across it, while the throng that had gathered for a funeral now shoutingly followed to a wedding.

"Well, I ain't done a thing I aimed to when I started last spring," Ann nodded, "but I sure done a heap else."

[Copyright: 1921: By Charles Saxby.]

There ain't no beatin' two young things in love."

"Now for Jane Donohue," she muttered as she rose. "And maybe for a lick at Ellen Glynde as well. I be mild as milk so long's I be let alone, but if a body tries to sit on Walking Ann they'll think they've sot plumb on a cactus."

Lovers' meetings are beyond time, and it was late when Terry Donohue returned. Anxiously tiptoeing, aghast at the hours' flight, he came along the veranda to where Ann stood, austerely outlined in a bar of yellow lamplight.

"Lad—'tis over."

"What do you mean?" he gasped.

At her gesture he followed to where Jane Donohue lay in heavy shadow of her bed, palely still, her hands crossed on her depleted breast.

"You can get a coffin ready this night," said Ann. "And send word through the mountains to all the neighbors. Them Glyndes will have to open their gates to your ma at last."

Through the mist of his tears the form of the woman on the bed seemed almost to quiver. Her mouth, willful even in that deathly stillness, was set in a wraith of a smile, as though in triumph that after thirty years of waiting she was at last to ride the road so long closed against her.

The fog was rolling in as Jane Donohue's procession reached the northern gate of Las Palomas Rancho.

Mountain and sea alike were gone, only a dim vista of the mesa was left, bare and brown under the drifting vapor, vibrating to the thud of the unseen surf, the piles of burning bean trash sending up great wreathes of smoke like funeral torches. It was Terry who, with Ann at his side, drove the wagon containing his mother's coffin, pillowed on pepper boughs, covered by trails of scented jasmine. Behind them the cortege spread out, representatives of all the mountain families for twenty miles about. Dingles, McMurrays from the back ranges; the Fallons of San Ojos; a score of Sepulvedas, three generations of Reyes, eighty-year-old Dona Arcadia de Marquez, wrapped in a black reboso, adroitly rolling cigarettes with one claw-like hand. So they came, a cloud of witnesses in buggies or on horseback, all the solemn joy of a mountain funeral enhanced by the adventure of accompanying Jane Donohue on her ride across the forbidden road.

They drew up at the gate, looming through the fog in exact counterpart of its fellow to the south, a wind-blown cypress tree drooping above it like a draggled hearse plume.

"There it be, locks at all," said Ann.

"Locks or not, it will have to open now," Terry answered somberly.

"Aye, there is sure a heap o' virtue in bein' good and dead," Ann agreed. "I'll lay your poor ma is just a grinnin' behind us there at the thought of what she's about to do."

"Have you no decency?" blazed Terry, but she faced him unabashed.

"I got what I got and I know what I know, and that's more nor you do right this minute. Now get you down and have that heathen open that there gate."

It was a black browed Japanese laborer who lurked behind the gate, sullen with suspicion at sight of such a throng pouring down on Las Palomas from those inimical mountains.

"This is a funeral, open that gate," Terry ordered as he strode forward.

"No sabe."

"Open—that—gate," Terry repeated, his face blanching dangerously, but the Japanese retreated to the refuge of his national, insolent non-understanding.

"Me no sabe."

From the knot of men at Terry's back a murmur went up. "One of them damned Glynde Japs."—"Refusing to let us bring out our dead now."—"Madre de Dios—que cosa." Above it, from where she sat on the seat of the flower decked wagon, came Ann's cracked war whoop.

"Terry Donohue—break that gate."

The Japanese was more insolent now, truculent as only one of his race can be when backed by white authority. The sight of a gun in his hand brought an answering and wicked flash of steel amongst the crowd.

"Pulling guns on a funeral—to hell with the Glyndes!"

"Kill the yellow skinned devil!"

Then a sudden, concerted shout:

"Come on, boys!"

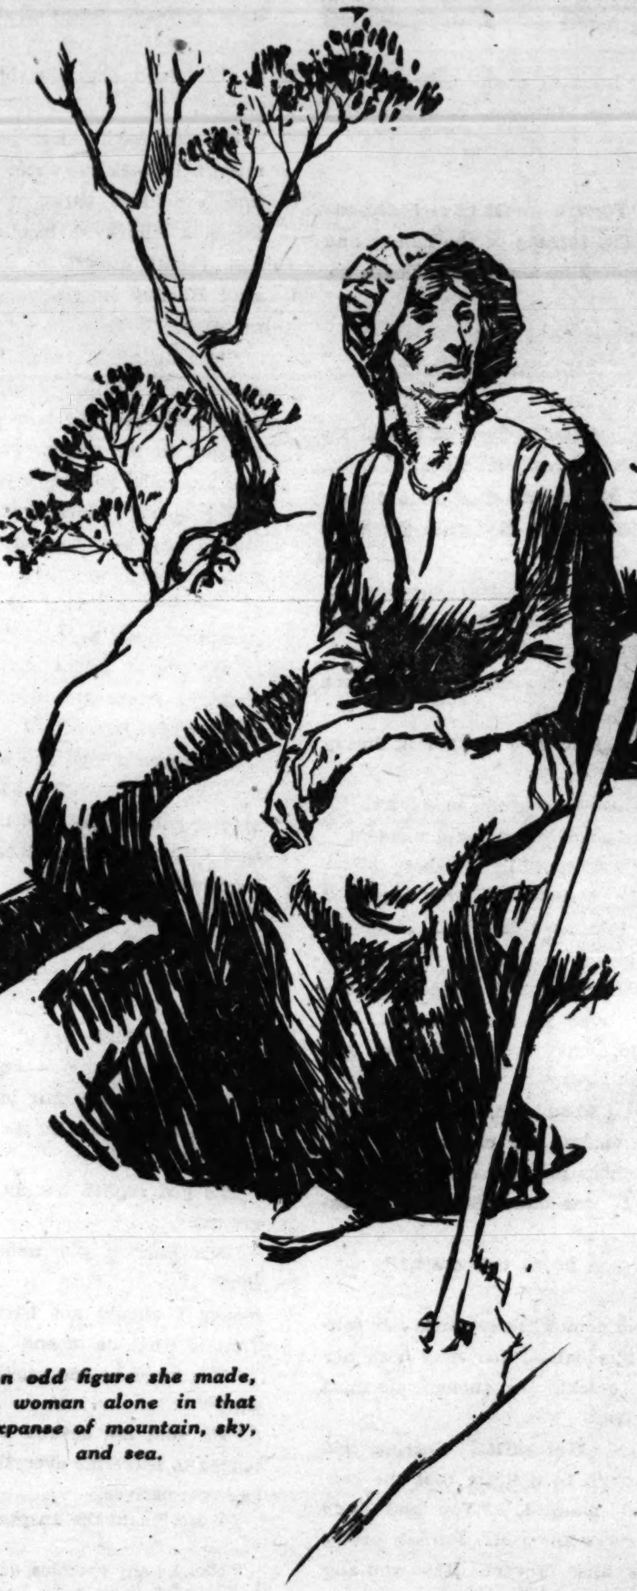
An ugly moment, half hidden by a fresh access of fog; a snarl like that of fighting wolves, the sound of crashing timbers, a shot or two. As the vapors thinned again the solid gate lay a mass of splinters on the ground and the Japanese was flying down the road, already half lost in the smoke wreathed mist.

And Ann, catching up the reins with an almost ribald chuckle, urged the horses forward.

"Stand aside, lads. I got a score agin them Glyndes myself and 'tis me and Jane Donohue will settle it together."

There was a bitterness also in the ranch house of the Doves and the Sea that morning as Ellen Glynde took counsel with her son. High ceiled, in the fashion of the eighties, its lambrequined windows looking out on the windbreak of twisted cypresses, the house was never anything but a gloomy place. Now, in the added chill of fog and keen-edged sea-wind, it had something of the cheerlessness of a public building.

"You are sure that the Supreme court has ruled against us?" she asked incredulously, and Fred Glynde stopped his pacing in irritated remonstrance.



An odd figure she made, a woman alone in that expanse of mountain, sky, and sea.

"Good heavens, mother, you heard Dixon's message yourself, didn't you?"

"I can hardly believe it," she answered. Gowned in sober perfection even at that early hour, still preserving her superficial placidness, she sat there like the superior of some repressive institution of which that room was the office. But beneath that surface it was as though her world were being rocked by subjective earthquake. To her the thirty-year sealing of those gates had almost the sanction of a religion, while their forced opening and the prospect of her sister riding across the ranch came with the shock of sacrilege.

"But the railroad lobby promised me—and they have always had influence with the courts," she protested.

"They don't want a coast highway drawing traffic from their valley line," Fred agreed. "But in these days—why, Dixon actually advised me to lower the price of potatoes to avoid an indictment. My own attorney giving me such advice; what do I pay him for except to get me out of such things?"

"It is Bolshevism," declared Mrs. Glynde.

"Why, some of the fellows round here who went to France are actually refusing to speak to me," Fred exploded. "Just as if I didn't subscribe five thousand to the Y. M. C. A.—I hold the mortgages on two of them, too."

The telephone bell cut sharply across his speech. There was consternation in his face as he clapped his hand over the instrument and turned to his mother.

"It's Goldschmidt at the north-end bunkhouse. He says Matsumoto has just brought word that the people have come down from the Cuyama, broken the gate and are riding across the ranch."

"What!"

"Several hundred of them. Matsumoto says all the Reyes, even the Fallons—they must have got word of that court decision."

The room grew acrid with silence as Mrs. Glynde sat there facing the picture of a triumphant horde already advancing along that road. From the fallen receiver the voice of the distant foreman could be plainly heard, imploring instructions. Fred stirred uneasily.

"Perhaps we had better order the car and clear out to San Luis for a few days," he suggested.

But his mother was of sterner stuff; it was not for nothing that, before her marriage, she had been known as "the high Fall." And now it was as though the thing which she had so long nourished was holding her with invisible bonds.

"The judgment has not been served on us, and until it is I have the right to keep my gates closed."

"But mother——"

Mrs. Glynde rose.

"Frederick, God has given me the stewardship of Las Palomas and until it is taken from me I am mistress here. Those people have no right on our lands—tell Goldschmidt if he cannot stop them to blow up the bridge across Las Lunas ravine."

It was five miles from the gate to that bridge, and two more to the ranch house. The echo of the explosion came to the ears of the procession long before they reached the place. A dreary place under the fog, the road winding down between high banks to where the creek cut deeply through the mesa, the splintered bridge showing forlornly above the boulders and shivering windows.

Silently they regarded it, a silence more ominous than even the dull roar of the dynamite had been, as they realized that the place was impassible for wheels.

"There's still our legs, a way across the stream, though," said Terry, through set teeth. "My mother will pay a visit to her sister today—for the first time in thirty years."

"We better nail that lid, I guess," whispered one of the Fallons as they lifted the temporary jasmine wreathed coffin from the wagon, but Ann was instantly at his side.

"Jud Fallon, you leave that lid loose, exactly as it be, and you carry her gentle acrost that there wash, too."

Her words carried authority and carefully they eased their burden down the bank and across the stream. Ann, with pack and staff, stalking grimly by Terry's side in the lead. Then up the opposite side and over its rim passing in silhouette against the shimmering fog, and on across the cheerless bean flats to the cypress gardens and front door of the ranch house.

Ellen Glynde was awaiting them, with Fred a trifle behind her. Lucy hovering palely in the background; she stood on the steps between the jigsaw indiscretions of the old house, a strange woman, implacable in her conviction of right, her external sweetness no more than the yellow moss upon a boulder. But at the sight of the burden they laid at the foot of those steps in silent accusation, her face broke.

"Oh—I did not realize——"

"You can realize now, then, Mrs. Glynde. Take a good look at your work," said Terry mercilessly.

"Lad, lift that there lid and show her who's within," Ann ordered.

The bearers and followers turned decently away, for the face of Ellen was hardly to be looked upon in that instant as Terry lifted the loose cover. Only Ann stood erect, her face twinkling with inner satisfaction.

The heaped jasmine fell away and there was a scream from Ellen Glynde as she saw the face exposed between the flowers. Then it strangled as something happened, a miracle it seemed, which left Ann alone unshaken as though she had expected it.

The seeming dead had awakened.

A smile of biting triumph on Jane Donohue's face, a sibilant whisper from amongst the mocking grave-flowers.

"No, I'm not dead, Ellen—and I've ridden your road at last."

Hours later as the fog cleared with the waning afternoon and the coast basked again in turquoise and amber. Walking Ann dragged weary feet to the camping place in the cañon.

With tired slowness she laid out her blanket in neat exactness, kindled the fire under the grid, set out her crackers and a pile of green figs and sat down to wait the boiling of the coffee pot. Not until it bubbled under its lid did she even think; then with the first reviving sips of it a smile of recollection settled down on her face.

"Yes, you sure got to hand it to Ellen Glynde," she nodded. "She's got sand, that woman. Never a tear nor nothin', just a wave o' her hand—and what was it she says: 'Since you've come to my house at last, Jane, you better make it your home!'"

She pondered that scene awhile. The picture of those two sisters going together up the steps, each sustained in that moment by the memory of her particular triumph. Ellen Glynde by her thirty years of stewardship over those locked gates; Jane Donohue by the reflection that the man they had both desired had been given to herself.

As Terry followed them, his eyes black in a face of paper white, Ann had gone to his side. Only as far as the hall, with the colored prisms of its front door, its sacerdotal stairway and its atmosphere of incurable mustiness. . . . That was as far into the Glynde house as Terry's feet would go.

They faced each other in the chill of that hallway; a barren moment, sterile with impossibility, its center the figure of Jane Donohue, already quavering under the triumph she could not quite sustain. Then her son spoke.

"So this was just a trick," he accused from between set teeth, and at the sound of it his mother collapsed into a chair.

"Ellen," she moaned, all the habit of thirty years before reasserting itself in that appeal to her stronger sister. But Terry went remorselessly on.

"No consideration of my feelings, no consideration for our neighbors, or for anything but your own stupid hot housed hate."

"Terry—remember I am your mother."

"If I were not remembering it I should be saying a great deal more," he answered. "After this one thing is understood, the Nacimiento Ranch is mine and I shall run it as I see fit."

"You turn your poor mother out of her own home," wept Mrs. Donohue.

"My mother will always have a home in

It All Came About—and Perhaps Not a It Should—From a Fall Down Stairs

IF Halliday hadn't been on the eve of sailing for Ponce he would never in the world have gone to Lida Garrish's party; and if Don Cattering had allowed himself time for a decent dinner that night of Tuesday, the twenty-third of November, this story would not have been written.

As it was, Halliday was bidding a last, tender farewell to the fleshpots before taking up a two years' residence in Porto Rico, and Don Cattering—well, Don was everywhere. Not at once, mind you. He was a leisurely person, but he made the rounds systematically, and people liked to see him coming. He danced well, talked with an easy brightness that endeared him to bee and butterfly alike, and was incredibly good to look upon.

Halliday saw in a moment that Sally Lynch thought so. Sally was a quiet young thing to be going to parties at the Garrish house.

Lida had said "fancy dress" over the phone, so Sally, as "Night," was in billowy black tulle, with a crescent moon in her hair. Halliday wore a domino over his traveling clothes, and observed her from the entirely inadequate slits in his mask. He had known her since she was a small child, indeed, and was interested to see how prettily the bud had flowered.

Don Cattering, of all the gay crowd, was maskless. He had made of himself an oriental potentate—maharajah—what you would—by the simple addition of a scarlet riband across his waistcoat and a turban skillfully fashioned from his silk scarf. And he danced with Sally Lynch almost exclusively, except when Lida dragged him off once to do his duty by the shy Graham girl, just out of school. Then he went back, chastened but radiant, to Miss Sally.

Halliday, with a little bitterness in his glance, watched them together. Tomorrow he would have cut himself off from all of this—the gayety, the light heartedness, the comradeship, and two years loomed gloomily ahead. He found his willing feet carrying him almost unconsciously across the room to where she waited Don's return with an ice.

"How did you know me?" she asked, when he had appropriated the chair beside her and drawled several overwhelming compliments without taking breath.

"Lida told you? O, cruel! That's against the rules." And she was laughing with him and at him quite as if they were two children. Halliday remembered now that he had always delighted in her voice.

"Don's taking an uncommonly long time about bringing me sustenance," she told him plaintively. But Halliday thought Don's absence all too brief, thought him, too, a bit flushed and eager, overcordial, perhaps, about the rite of shaking hands. Sally seemed not to notice. She was swaying her slim shoulders to the tantalizing rhythm of a fox trot as they talked. And she begged Halliday to guard her ice as Don carried her off in the brisk mazes of the dance.

That was the last he saw of the pair until much, much later—it must have been past two—because his train left at three, and he was not a man to miss trains.

He paused in the hall on his way down at the sight of Sally Lynch on the stair. She was fastening the rose colored wrap with trembling fingers, and anxiously watching the door.

Halliday wondered what on earth had happened to make her look so flushed and frightened. Great eyes staring fascinatedly, hectic splashes of color on her usually pale cheeks, she returned his banter as if her thoughts were miles away.

"Don's coming along," she flung after him, "Will you hurry him a bit, please?"

But Halliday found the task of hurrying Don spared him. The truant was coming down the hall, a trifle unsteady of gait, his coat trailing uncertainly after him.

"Good-night, old man," he murmured with vague pleasantness, and the other caught the odor of wine as he passed. It was none of his business, but he couldn't help stopping for just a moment. Sally was talking in low, anxious tones, and Don was saying plaintively that she didn't understand him—nobody understood him, that was just the trouble!

"Please, Don, please!" he heard Sally say tremblingly.

"Just one more dance?" This mournfully.

"No. We're going home right now," said the girl, with a kind of desperate tearfulness that the older man, in the shadow of the staircase, simply could not bear.

He took a step forward. Not right, by Jove, to let the little thing be harassed in this fashion. The young cub must go along and see she got home safely—idiot!

He felt a sudden violent dislike for Cattering, who, disregarding the girl's detaining hand, was already unsteadily negotiating the circular stair that led to the ballroom. He fumbled, went on, there was the sound of a fall, groans, a stifled scream. Halliday's shoulder was fiercely wrenched as the limp body struck it, then the balustrade.

Don Cattering lay lifeless, for all the world like a rag doll, amid the wreckage of the slender mahogany balustrade and telephone table, shattered by his fall.

Somehow Halliday managed to get Sally, death white and shivering, away. Men were lifting the boy—carrying him into Garrish's den; women, fluttering down with scared faces from the gayety above, were sent back reassured.

"A waiter slipped with a tray, that's all," Halliday heard a fresh faced undergraduate tell them easily. The girl, cowering in the doorway, looked at him with dumb gratitude.

Dr. Garrish himself was bending over the figure on the couch, unfastening his waistcoat, tearing open his glistening shirt, already frightfully stained with blood.

"It's his head, I think," he told Halliday, who, with the others, was hovering anxiously near, with well meant but disturbing offers to do anything, go anywhere.

Don was moaning, moaning horribly, Halliday thought, with his handsome young face twisted and suddenly wan.

"Sally!" he cried thickly. "Sally!"

Halliday hoped no one would tell her—and that she would not hear. He thought it unbelievable that she should be dragged into this mess. If he had had his way he would have packed her off home immediately.

But before he had time to carry out his high handed notion the girl had crept, small and pitiable, to the boy's side.

"He wants me," she told Halliday, who stood grimly at attention.

Then, to the physician: "Is it very bad, Dr. Garrish? Is it serious?"

Garrish said that he could not tell—that North had gone for another doctor, the telephone connection being broken. He did not know, he said again. But he looked grave.

They had, by this time, bandaged his head. The maharajah's turban lay crumpled on the floor. Sally, observing it, and thinking probably of the happy hours that had gone before, was shaken with sobs.

Don, roused by them, swiftly, incredibly sober, opened his eyes and spoke.

She turned, with a little gesture of supplication. "He wants—he wants to speak to me alone," she told them.

Garrish, with a look of grim opposition, marshaled them all into the hall. Followed an oppressive five minutes, while Halliday glanced alternately at his watch and at the door.

At the end of the unbearably long interval the girl appeared. She went straight to him as to a friend.

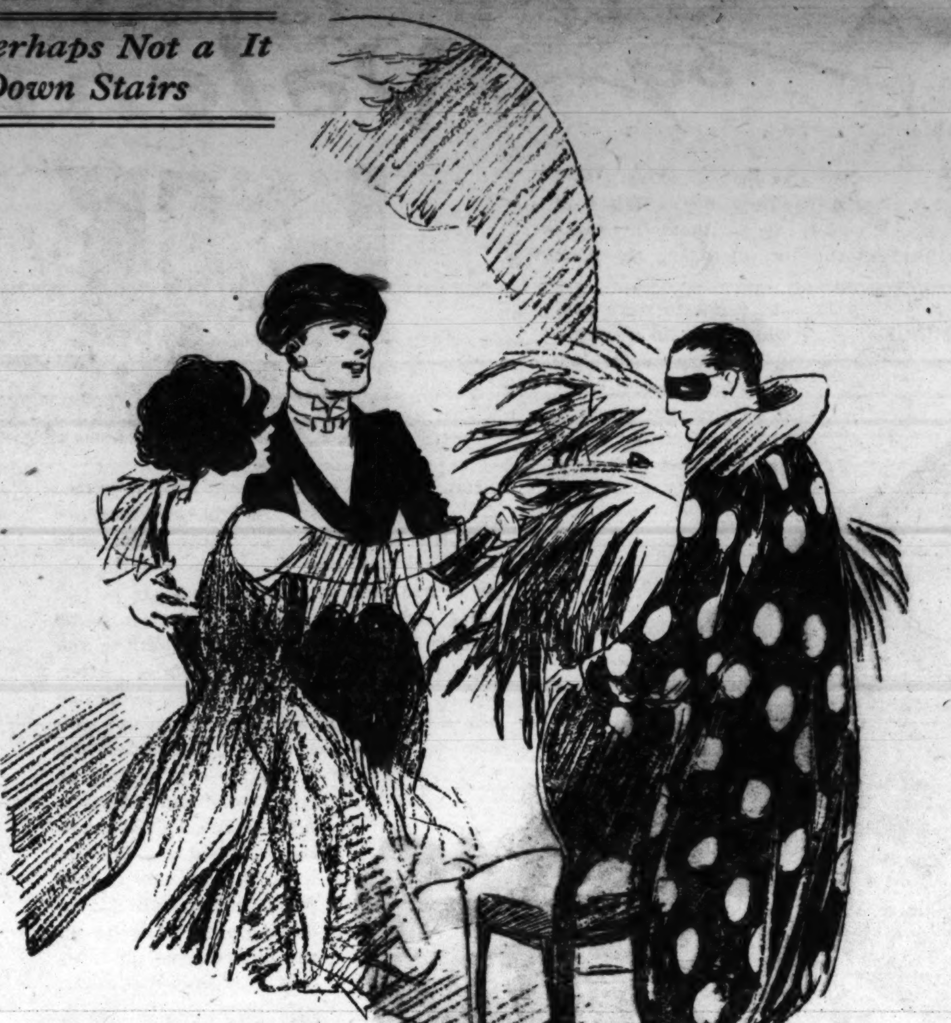
"Will you go for Father Lambert?" she said to him in that sweet, clear voice, somehow as if she expected him to understand. "We are going to be married at once, Don and I. We have been engaged for a week, you know—or you didn't, of course. But if the worst is going to happen I want to marry him tonight."

Halliday looked at her stupidly. It seemed to him that the bad dream in which he had been living for the last half hour must dissolve.

"Do you—can you possibly know what you're saying?" he asked her. "Don't you want me to call your mother, or Aline, or some of them?" He felt very much the elder brother as he continued. "You ought not to make a decision of this sort by yourself. They'd never forgive for having helped you."

Sally sighed an impatient, gusty little sigh. She leaned against the door, looking at him with blazing young eyes.

"Will you do it, Jim Halliday?" she demanded. "Or shall I have to ask some one I don't know. I certainly thought you'd stand by me."



Halliday, with a little bitterness in his glance, watched them together.

He saw she was distraught, shaken beyond all control. Garrish, to whom he turned for counsel, shrugged half whimsically, half in despair.

"There doesn't seem to be anything we can do to stop it," he said.

"There, you see!" It was the little girl Sally who clung to his hand now, her eyes beseeching him. "O, Jim, it is all right. He rushed so he hadn't time for a bite of dinner, that's why the wine went to his head. I love him so. This is the thing to do, don't you see? I promised to marry him, and I want to keep my promise."

She blazed up fiercely at Halliday's look of disdain.

"You mustn't think that about him," she cried sobbingly. "He doesn't want me to do it. I had to beg and beg. O, you must believe that. He's fine and brave about it and doesn't want to hold me. But I should be a fine sort if I flung him down just when he's in such a dreadful fix."

"It isn't a case of flinging him down at all, Sally," the man protested. "It's a perfectly fanatical sacrifice, and your mother and father would neither of them forgive me for being party to it. Please don't decide until tomorrow; or wait, at least, until Dr. Hart comes."

But Sally was already groping about for the rose colored wrap.

"All right. I'll go myself, if you won't," she told him through sobs.

Halliday buttoned his greatcoat resignedly, started down the stairs.

Halliday was older by two years when he went swinging down the avenue again. The syringas were in full bloom, and the old fashioned flagged path, down which he had carefully guided poor, sleepy Father Lambert that blustery night, was white with fragrant bloom.

How painfully well he remembered the details of that night—his ride through the rain for the priest; Sally, straight and slim, a somewhat incongruous bride in her black tulle, with the crescent moon awry, holding Don's limp hand.

He had just a blurred recollection of frantically shaking her own hand a moment later and rushing for his train.

It was curious he had never heard anything from or about Sally Lynch since then. He did not even know whether or not Don had recovered. Once, after arriving in Porto Rico, he had written Lida Garrish a carefully worded letter of inquiry. The letter had been forwarded to various addresses—and finally returned to him. It was so hard to get home papers, and when they did arrive they were weeks old. And he had no people of his own to relay gossip.

Now, back in his own country, he could not understand his dilatoriness. He might have written Sally herself, but then he had had a strange reluctance about doing so.

Into his dreams a clear voice sounded. A girl, leaning from a motor, slowing at the curb, was calling him.

"Jim Halliday! I am glad to see you."

And Sally Lynch was smiling at him, with eyes as blue as the hydrangeas on her hat.

Afterward he called himself all manner of harsh names for his stupid, blurting questions. He was so blunderingly amazed at having the lady of his dreams take form before his eyes that he lost his usual cool reserve.

"Don will be excited to hear you're back," he heard her saying through the blurred maze of his thoughts. "Can't you just let me drive you on to him? I'm picking him up at the club at five. Please do. Then perhaps you can have dinner with us."

It was nice of her, Halliday said, but, thank you, he couldn't. He was dining with Markham—Cliff Markham—she remembered. It was an engagement of long standing. But he was rushing out to Denver the next morning, and this would be his last chance to see her. Couldn't she stop and have tea with him? The Blakemore, now, across the way. Was it still smart to have tea there? He had been away for so long he would be sure to make mistakes, and she, in that glorious spring hat, should grace the gayest place in town.

Sally laughed again, but her eyes were troubled. Foolish, it was, she told him, but she had said five, at the club, to Don, and if she was not there he might go on. There was a sudden haunting fear in her sweet face. Halliday noticed, all at once, that her rare loveliness was delicately transparent—that she was fearfully thin. That delightful laugh, too, had what the British call a nervy edge.

He wanted fiercely to ask if it was all right with her. He wanted to cheat himself into thinking these signs and portents lived in his imagination only, but somehow he knew.

He seemed to see her waiting for Don, this child, fearful and anxious, at the window, listening for an uncertain step, hushing stupid, senseless laughter, being endlessly brave, disillusioned.

But there was nothing to do but keep polite silence. To clasp the silken, soft hand in leavetaking, to try not to see the damnably frightened look in her eyes as she feverishly guided the smart, small motor through the intricacies of the traffic.

He stood, hat in hand, looking after her. He must have remained that way for a good five minutes, because Markham, who had been watching him quizzically from his post on the hotel steps, said it was much longer than that.

"What's the matter, old fellow?" he wanted to know, bantering of tone. "She was an awfully pretty girl, but you look as if you were gazing after a ghost."

Halliday roused himself with an effort. "I know now how that chap Damocles looked when the sword hung over him, that's all," he said.

The YELLOW STREAK

SYNOPSIS.

Hartley Parrish, who has had a sudden rise to wealth as a result of the war, has several guests at his country house. Among them are Lady Trevert, her daughter Mary, and her son Horace, and Robin Greve, who is in love with Mary and she with him. When he proposes she tells him she has become engaged to Parrish. He accuses her of mercenary motives, which she admits, and leaves her in anger. A few moments later she hears a shot and informs her brother and others, who break into the library, which is locked from the inside, and find their host dead with a revolver in his hand, apparently a suicide. Greve realizes Mary suspects him, and from a remark to the police by the butler, Bude, that Greve was near the library when the shot was fired, the inspector questions him closely and finally is closeted with Mary.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

The Inspector Questions Mary.

THE great drawing room of Harkings was ablaze with light. The cluster of lights in the heavy crystal chandelier and the green shaded electric lamps in their gilt sconces on the plain white paneled walls coldly lit up the formal, little used room with its gilt furniture, painted piano, and huge marble fireplace.

This glittering Louis Seize environment seemed altogether too much for the homely inspector. Whilst waiting for Mary Trevert to come to him he tried several attitudes in turn. The empty hearth frightened him away from the mantelpiece, the fragile appearance of a gilt settee decided him against risking his sixteen stone weight on its silken cushions, and the vastness of the room overawed him when he took up his position in the center of the Aubusson carpet. Finally, he selected an ornate chair, rather more solid looking than the rest, which he drew up to a small table on the far side of the room. There he sat down, his large red hands spread out upon his knees in an attitude of singular embarrassment.

But Mary Trevert set him quickly at his ease when presently she came to him. She was pale but quite self-possessed. Indeed, the effort she had made to regain her self-control was so marked that it would have scarcely escaped the attention of the inspector even if he had not had a brief vision of her as she had stood for that instant at the library door, pale, distraught, and trembling. He was astonished to find her cool, collected, almost businesslike in the way she sat down, motioned him to his seat, and expressed her readiness to tell him all she knew.

The phrases he had been laboriously preparing—"This has been a bad shock for you, ma'am"; "You will forgive me, I'm sure, ma'am, for calling upon you at a moment such as this"—died away on his lips as Mary Trevert said:

"Ask me any questions you wish, inspector. I will tell you everything I can."

"That's very good of you, ma'am, I'm sure," answered the inspector, unstrapping his note book, "and I'll try and not detain you long. Now then, tell me what you know of this sad affair."

Mary Trevert plucked an instant nervously at her little cambric handkerchief in her lap. Then she said:

"I went to the library from the billiard room . . ."

"A moment," interposed the inspector. "What time was that?"

"A little after five. The tea gong had gone some time. I was going to the library to tell Mr. Parrish that tea was ready."

Mr. Humphries made a note. He nodded to show he was listening.

"I crossed the hall and went down to the library corridor. I knocked on the library door. There was no reply. Then I heard a shot and a sort of thud."

Despite her effort to remain calm, the girl's voice shook a little. She made a little helpless gesture of her hands. A diamond ring she was wearing on her finger caught the light and blazed for an instant.

"Then I got frightened. I ran back along the corridor to the lounge, where the others were, and told them."

"When you knocked at the door, you say there was no reply. I suppose, now, you tried the handle first?"

"Oh, yes . . ."

"Then Mr. Parrish would have heard the two sounds? The turning of the handle and then the knocking on the door? That's so, isn't it?"

"Yes, I suppose so . . ."

"Yet you say there was no reply?"

"No. None at all."

The inspector jotted a word or two in his note book as it lay open flat upon the table.

"The shot, then, was fired immediately after you had knocked? Not while you were knocking?"

"No. I knocked and waited, expecting Mr. Parrish to answer. Instead of his answer, there came this shot."

"I see. And after the shot was fired there was a crash?"

"A sort of thud—like something heavy falling down."

"And you heard no groan or cry?"

The girl knit her brows for a moment.

"I—I—was frightened by the shot. I—I—don't seem able to remember what happened afterwards. Let me think . . . . let me think. . . ."

"There, there," said the inspector paternally. "Don't upset yourself like this. Just try and think what happened after you heard the shot fired."

Mary Trevert shuddered, one slim white hand pressed against her cheek.

"I do remember now," she said. "There was a cry. It was more like a sharp exclamation. . . ."

"And then you heard this crash?"

"Yes."

The girl had somewhat regained her self-possession. She dabbed her eyes with her handkerchief quickly, as though ashamed of her weakness.

"Now," said Humphries, clearing his throat, as though to indicate that the conversation had changed. "You and Lady Margaret Trevert knew Mr. Parrish pretty well, I believe, Miss Trevert. Have you any idea why he should have done this thing?"

Mary Trevert shook her dark head rather wearily.

"It is inconceivable to me . . . to all of us," she answered.

"Do you happen to know whether Mr. Parrish had any business worries?"

"He always had a great deal of business on hand and he has had a great deal to do lately over some big deal."

"What was it, do you know?"

"He was raising fresh capital for Hornaway's—that is the big engineering firm he controls."

"Do you know if he was pleased with the way things were shaping?"

"Oh, yes. He told me last night that everything would be finished this week. He seemed quite satisfied."

The inspector paused to make a note.

Then he thrust a hand into the side pocket of his tunic and produced Hartley Parrish's letter.

"This," he said, eying the girl as he handed her the letter, "may throw some light on the affair!"

Open-eyed, a little surprised, she took the plain white envelope from his hand and gazed an instant without speaking on the bold, sprawling address.

"Miss Mary Trevert."

"Open it, please," said the inspector gently.

The girl tore open the envelope. Humphries saw her eyes fill, watched the emotion grip her and shake her in her self-control so that she could not speak when, her reading done, she gave him back the letter.

Without asking her permission he took the sheet of fine, expensive paper with its neat engraved heading and postal directions and read Hartley Parrish's last message.

"My dear," it ran, "I signed my will at Brady's office yesterday and he sent it back to me today. Just this line to let you know you are properly provided for should anything happen to me. I wanted to fix things so that you and Lady Margaret would not have to worry any more. I just had to write. I guess you understand why. H."

There was a long and impressive silence while the Inspector deliberately read the note. Then he looked interrogatively at the girl.

"We were engaged, Inspector," she said. "We were to have been married very soon."

A deep flush crept slowly over Mr. Humphries' florid face and spread into the roots of his tawny fair hair.

"But what does he mean by 'having to write'?" he asked.

The girl replied hastily, her eyes on the ground.

"Mr. Parrish was under the impression that . . . that . . . without his money I should not have cared for him. That is what he means . . ."

"You knew he had provided for you in his will?"

"He told me several times that he intended to leave me everything. You see, he has no relatives!"

"I see!" said the Inspector in a reflective voice.

"Had he any enemies, do you know? Anybody who would drive him to a thing like this?"

The girl shook her head vehemently.

"No!"

The monosyllables came out emphatically. Again the Inspector darted one of his quick, shrewd glances at the girl. She met his scrutiny with her habitual serene and candid gaze. The Inspector dropped his eyes and scribbled in his book.

"Was his health good?"

"He smoked far too much," the girl said, "and it made him rather nervy. But otherwise he never had a day's illness in his life."

Humphries ran his eye over the notes he had made.

"There is just one more question I should like to ask you, Miss Trevert," he said, "rather a personal question."

Mary Trevert's hands twisted the cambric handkerchief into a little ball and slowly unwound it again. But her face remained quite calm.

"About your engagement to Mr. Parrish. When did it take place?"

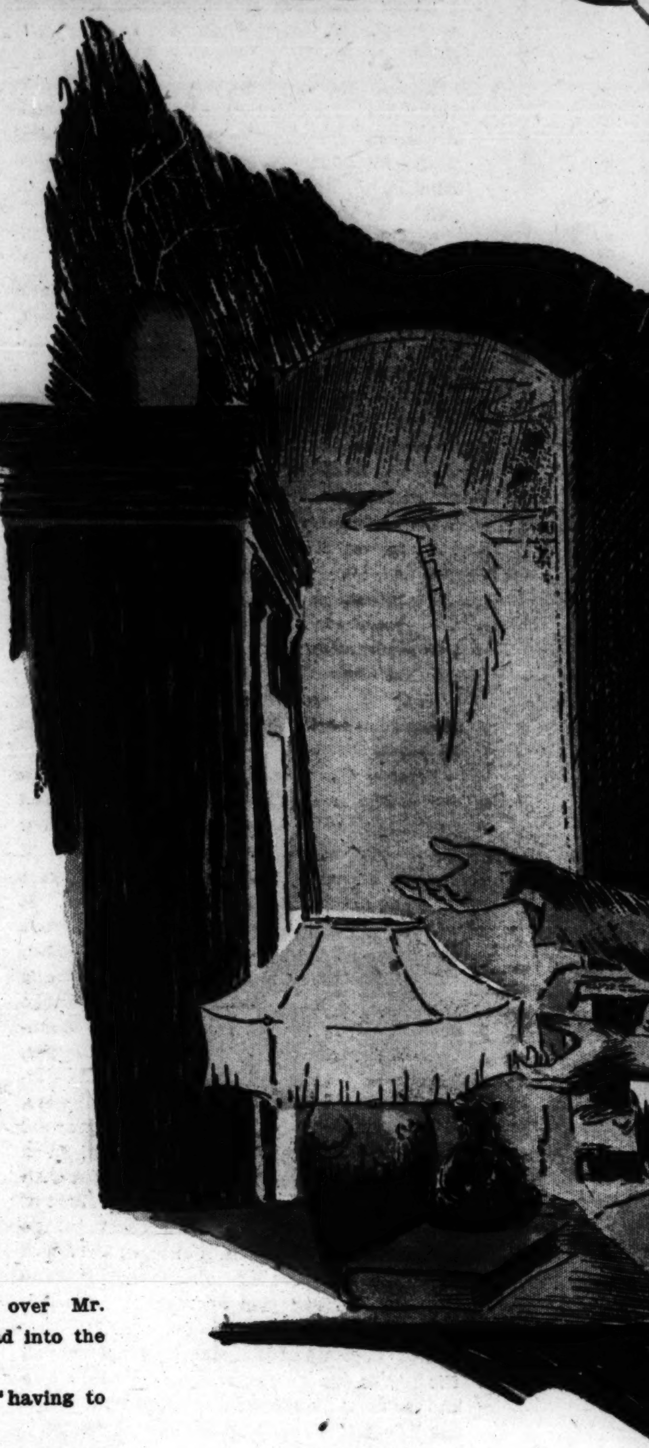
"Some days ago. It has not yet been announced."

The Inspector coughed.

"I was wondering whether, perhaps, Mr. Parrish was not quite . . . whether he was, maybe, a little disturbed in his mind about the engagement."

The girl hesitated. Then she said firmly:

"Mr. Parrish was perfectly happy about it. He was looking forward to our being married in the spring."



Despite her effort to remain calm
She made a little helpless

Mr. Humphries shut his notebook with a snap and rose to his feet.

"Thank you very much, ma'am," he said with a little formal bow. "If you will excuse me now. I have the doctor to see again and there's the coroner to be warned . . ."

He bowed again and tramped toward the door with a tread that made the chandelier tinkle melodiously.

The door closed behind him and his heavy footsteps died away along the corridor. Mary Trevert had risen to her feet calm and impassive. But when he had gone her bosom began to heave and a spasm of pain shot across her face. Again the tears welled up in her eyes, brimmed over and stole down her cheeks.

"If I only knew!" she sobbed, "if I only knew!"

The swift tragedy of the winter afternoon had convulsed the well-organized repose of Hartley Parrish's household. Nowhere had his master grasp of detail been seen to better advantage than in the management of his country home. Overwhelmed with work though he constantly was, accustomed to carry his business and often part of his business staff to Harkings with him for the week-ends, there was never the least confusion about the house. The methodical calm of Harkings was that of a convent.

Hartley Parrish was wont to say that he paid his butler and housekeeper well to save himself from worry. It was rather to insure his orders being punctiliously and promptly carried out. His was the mind behind the method which insured that meals were punctually served and trains at Stevenish station never missed.

But it was into a house in turmoil that Mary Trevert stepped when she left the drawing room and passed along the corridor to go to her room. Doors slammed and there was the heavy thud of footsteps on the floor above. The glass door leading into the gardens was open, as Mary passed it, swinging in the gusts of cold rain. In the gardens without there was a confused murmur of voices and the flash of lanterns.

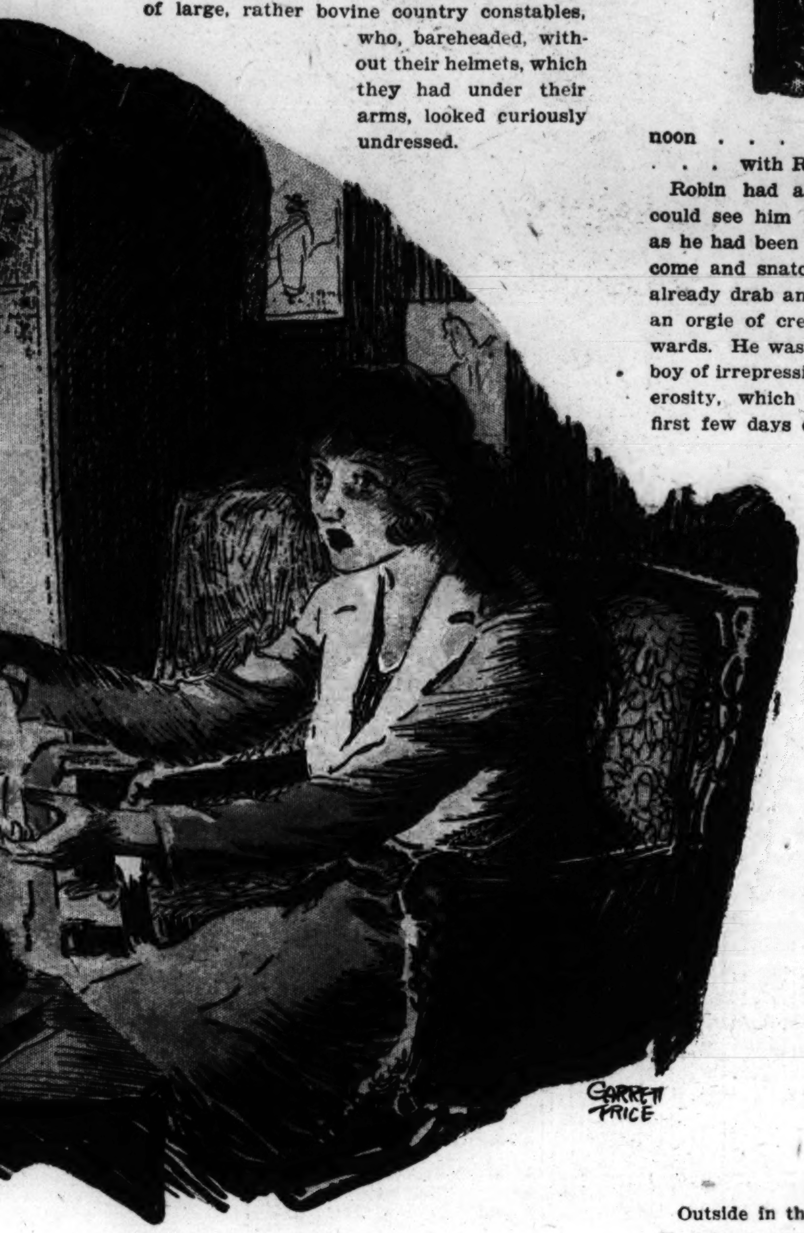
In the hall a knot of servants were gossiping in frightened whispers with a couple of large, rather bovine country constables, who, bareheaded, without their helmets, which they had under their arms, looked curiously undressed.



remain calm, the girl's voice shook a little. little helpless gesture of her hands.

The whispers died away as Mary crossed the hall. All eyes followed her with interest as she went. It was as though an echo of her talk with the inspector had by some occult means already spread through the little household. Through the half open green baize door leading to the servants' quarters some unseen person was bawling down the telephone in a heated controversy with the exchange about a long distance call to London. And but an hour since, the girl reflected sadly as she mounted the oaken staircase, the house had been wrapped in its wonted evening silence in response to that firm and dominating personality who had passed out in the gloom of the winter twilight.

When, about six months before, Mary and her mother had begun to be regular visitors at Harkings, Hartley Parrish had insisted on giving Mary a boudoir to herself. This in response to a chance remark of Mary's in admiration of a Chinese room she had seen at a friend's house, Parrish had had decorated in the Chinese style, with black walls and black and gold lacquer furniture. The room had been transformed from a rather prosaic morning room with old oak and chintz in the space of three days as a surprise for Mary. She remembered now how Parrish had left her to make the discovery of the change for herself. She loved color and line, and the contrast between this quaint and delightful room with her rather shabby bedroom in her mother's small house in Brompton had made this surprise one of the most delightful she had ever experienced.

She rang the bell and sat down listlessly in a charmingly lacquered armchair in front of the log fire blazing brightly in the fireplace. She was conscious that a great disaster had overtaken her, but only dimly conscious. For more poignantly than this dull sense of tragedy she was aware of a great aching at her heart and her thoughts, after hovering over the events of the afternoon, settled down upon her talk that afternoon . . . already how far off it seemed . . . with Robin Greve in the library.

Robin had always been her hero. She could see him now in the glow of the fire as he had been when in the holidays he had come and snatched her away from a home already drab and difficult for a matinée and an orgie of cream cakes at Gunter's afterwards. He was then a long, slim, handsome boy of irrepressible spirits and impulsive generosity, which usually left him after the first few days of his holidays in a state of lamentable impecuniosity. All their lives, it seemed to her, they had been friends, but with a stronger feeling between them until Robin, having joined the army on the outbreak of the war, had come to say good-bye on being ordered to France.

But by that time money troubles at home with which, as it seemed to her, she had been surrounded all her life, had grown so pressing that, apart from Lady Mary's reiterated counsels, she herself had come to recognize that a suitable marriage was the only way out of their ever-increasing embarrassment.

She and Robin, she recalled with a feeling of relief, had never discussed the matter. He, too, had understood and had sailed for France without seeking to take advantage of the circumstance.

Outside in the black night a car throbbed. Footsteps crunched the gravel beneath her window. The sounds brought her back to the present with a sudden pang. She began to think of Hartley Parrish. All her life she had been so very poor that, until she had met this big, vigorous, intensely vital man, she had never known what a lavish command of money meant. Hartley Parrish did things in a big way. If he wanted a thing he bought it, as he had bought Bude, as he had bought a car he had seen standing outside a Pall Mall club and admired. He had rooted the owner out, bade him name his price, and had paid it, there and then, by cheque, and driven Mary off to a lawn tennis tournament at Queen's, hugely delighted by her bewilderment.

She did not love him. She could never have learned to love him. There was a gleeful zest in his enjoyment of his money, an ostentatious parade of his riches which repelled her. And there was a look in his face, those narrow eyes, that hard mouth which revealed to her womanly intuition a ruthlessness which she guessed he kept for his business. But she liked him, especially his reverent and chivalrous devotion to her; and the thought that his dominating and vital personality was extinguished forever made her conscious of a great void in her life.

And now she was rich. Hartley Parrish's idea of " proper provision " for her, she knew, meant wealth for her beyond anything she had ever dreamed. The perpetual debasing struggle with poverty which she and her mother had carried on for years was a thing of the past. Money meant freedom, freedom to live . . and to love.

She stretched her hands out to the blaze. Was she free to love? What had driven Hartley Parrish to suicide? Or who? She went over in her mind her interview with Robin Greve in the billiard room. He had spoken of other women in connection with Hartley Parrish. Had he used that knowledge to threaten his rival? What had Robin done after he had left her that afternoon with his final taunt?

She felt the blood rise to her cheeks as she thought of it. Mary Trevert had all the pride of her ancient race. The recollection of that taunt galled her. Her loyalty to the man from whom she had received nothing but chivalry, whose fortune was to banish a hideous nightmare from her life, rose up in arms. What had Robin done? She must know the truth.

A tap came at the door. Bude appeared.

"I think you rang, miss," he said, in his quiet, deep voice. "I was with the inspector, miss, and I couldn't come before. Was there anything? . . ."

The girl turned in her chair.

"Come in and shut the door, Bude," she said. "I want to speak to you."

The butler obeyed and came over to where she sat. He seemed ill at ease and rather apprehensive.

"Bude," said the girl, "I want you to tell me why you were certain that Mr. Greve was going to Mr. Parrish in the library when he passed you in the hall this afternoon!"

The butler smoothed his hands down his trousers in embarrassment.

"I thought he—Mr. Greve—would be sure to be going to fetch Mr. Parrish in to tea, miss . . ." he replied, eyeing the girl anxiously.

Mary Trevert continued gazing into the fire.

"You know it is a rule in this house, Bude," she said, "that Mr. Parrish is never disturbed in the library."

The butler changed his position uneasily.

"Yes, miss, but I thought . . ."

Slowly Mary Trevert turned and looked at the man.

"Bude," her voice was very calm, "I want you to tell me the truth. You know that Mr. Greve went in to Mr. Parrish."

Bude looked uneasily about him.

"Oh, miss," he answered almost in a whisper, "whatever are you saying?"

"I want your answer, Bude," the girl said, coldly.

Bude did not speak. He rubbed his hands up and down his trousers in desperation.

"I wish to know why Mr. Parrish did this thing, Bude. I mean to know. And I think you are keeping something back!"

"Miss Trevert, ma'am," the butler said in a low voice, "I wouldn't take it upon me to say anything as would get anybody in this house into trouble. . . ."

"You saw Mr. Greve go in to Mr. Parrish?"

The butler raised his hands in a quick gesture of denial.

"God forbid, Miss!" he ejaculated in horror.

"What, then, do you know that is likely to get anybody here into trouble?"

The butler hesitated an instant. Then he spoke.

"That Inspector Humphries has been asking me questions, Miss, in a nasty, suspicious sort o' way. I told him what I told him already, that just after I'd done serving the tea Mr. Greve crossed the hall and went down the library corridor. . . ."

"You didn't tell him everything, Bude?"

The butler took a step nearer.

"O, Miss," he said, lowering his voice, "if you'll pardon my frankness, but I know as how you and Mr. Greve are old friends and I wouldn't take it upon me to tell the police anything as might. . . ."

Mary Trevert stood up and faced the man.

"Bude," said she, "Mr. Parrish was your master, a kind and generous master as he was kind and generous to every one in this house. We must clear up the mystery of his . . . of his death. Neither you nor I nor Mr. Greve nor anybody must stand in the way. Now tell me the truth!"

She dropped back into her chair. She gave the order imperiously like the mistress of the house. The butler, trained through life to receive orders, surrendered.

"There's nothing much to tell, Miss. When Mr. Humphries asked me if I were the last person to see Mr. Parrish alive I made sure that Mr. Greve would say he had been in to tell him tea was ready. But Mr. Greve, who heard the inspector's question and my answer, said nothing. So I thought, maybe, he had his reasons and I did not feel exactly as how it was my place. . . ."

Mary Trevert tapped with her foot impatiently.

"But what grounds have you for saying that Mr. Greve went in to Mr. Parrish? Mr. Greve declared quite positively that he went out by the side door and did not go into the library at all."

"But, Miss, I heard him speaking to Mr. Parrish. . . ."

The girl turned round and the man saw fear in her wide open eyes.

The butler put his hand on the back of her chair and leaned forward.

"Better leave things where they are, Miss," he said in a low voice. "Mr. Parrish, I daresay, had his reasons. He's gone to his last account now. What does it matter why he done it?

The man was agitated and in his emotion his carefully studied English was forsaking him.

But the girl broke in incisively.

"Please explain what you mean!" she commanded.

"Why, Miss," replied the butler, "we know that Mr. Greve had no call to like Mr. Parrish seeing how things were between you and the master. . . ."

"You mean the servants know that Mr. Parrish and I were engaged. . . ."

Bude made a deprecatory gesture.

"Know, Miss? I wouldn't go so far as to say 'know.' But there has been some talk in the servants' 'all, Miss. You know what young female servants are, Miss. . . ."

"And you think that Mr. Greve went to Mr. Parrish to talk about . . . me?"

Mary Trevert's voice faltered a little. She looked eagerly at the other's fat, smooth face.

"I presoomed as much, Miss, I must confess!" –

"But what did you hear Mr. Greve say?"

"I heard nothing, Miss, except just only the sound of voices. After Mr. Greve had crossed me in the hall I took the salver I was carrying into the butler's pantry. I stayed there a minute or two and then I remembered I had not collected the letters from the box in the hall for the chauffeur to take to the post, the same as he does every evening. I went back to the hall and just as I opened the green baize door I heard voices from the library. . . ."

"Was it Mr. Greve's voice?"

"I cannot say, Miss. It was just the sound of voices, rather loud like. I caught the sound because the door leading from the hall to the library corridor was ajar. Mr. Greve must have forgotten to shut it."

"What did you do?"

"Well, Miss, I closed the corridor door. . . ."

"Why did you do that?"

"Well, Miss, seeing the voices sounded angry-like I thought perhaps it would be better not to let any one else hear. . . And Mr. Greve looked upset-like when he passed me. He gave me quite a turn, he did, when I saw his face under the hall lamp. . . ."

"Did you stay there . . . . and listen?"

Bude drew himself up.

"That is not my 'abit, Miss, not 'ere nor in hany of the 'ouses where I 'ave seen service. . . ."

The butler broke off. The "h's" were too much for him in his indignation.

"I didn't mean to suggest anything underhand," the girl said quickly. "I mean, did you hear any more?"

"No, Miss. I emptied the letter-box and took the letters to the servants' hall."

"But," said Mary in a puzzled way, "why do you say it was Mr. Greve if you didn't hear his voice?"

Bude spread out his hands in bewilderment.

"Who else should it have been, Miss? Sir Horace and the doctor were in the lounge at tea. Jay and Robert were in the servants' hall. It could have been nobody else. . . ."

The girl's head sank slowly on her breast. She was silent. The butler shifted his position.

"Was there anything more, Miss?" he asked after a little while.

"There is nothing further, thank you, Bude," replied Mary. "About Mr. Greve—I am sure there must be some mistake. . . he cannot have understood Mr. Humphries' question. I'll ask him about it when I see him. I don't think I should say anything to the inspector about it, at any rate, not until I've seen Mr. Greve. He'll probably speak to you about it himself. . . ."

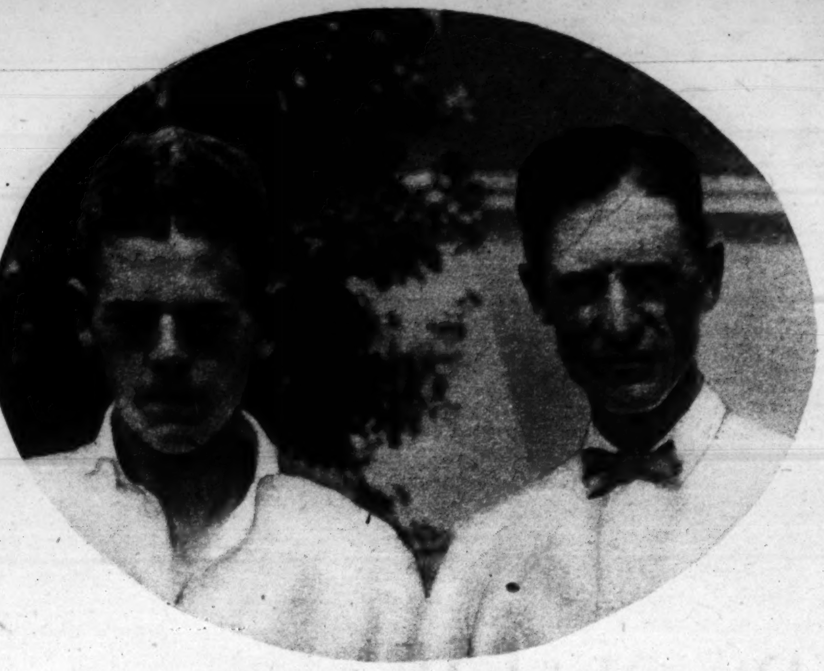
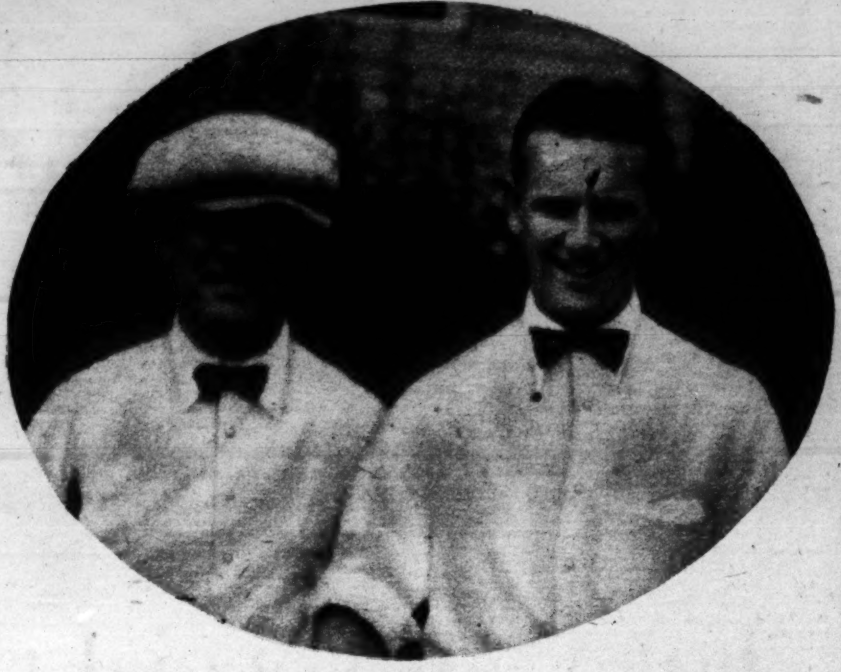
FATHERS and SONS — DO THEY LOOK ALIKE ?

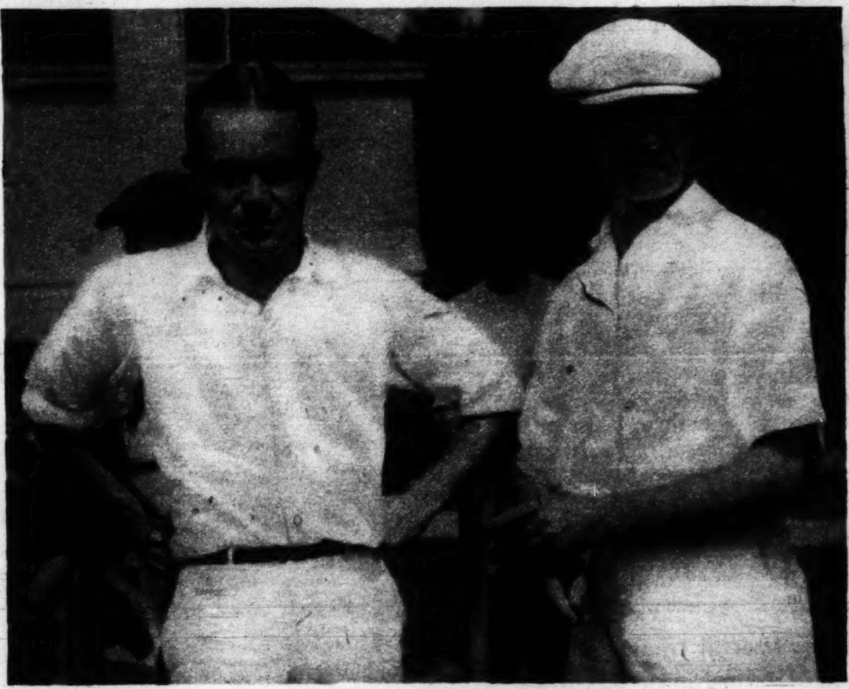
Dad and the boy as they appeared on the links at the Pater Filius Golf Tournament at the Midlothian Country Club.



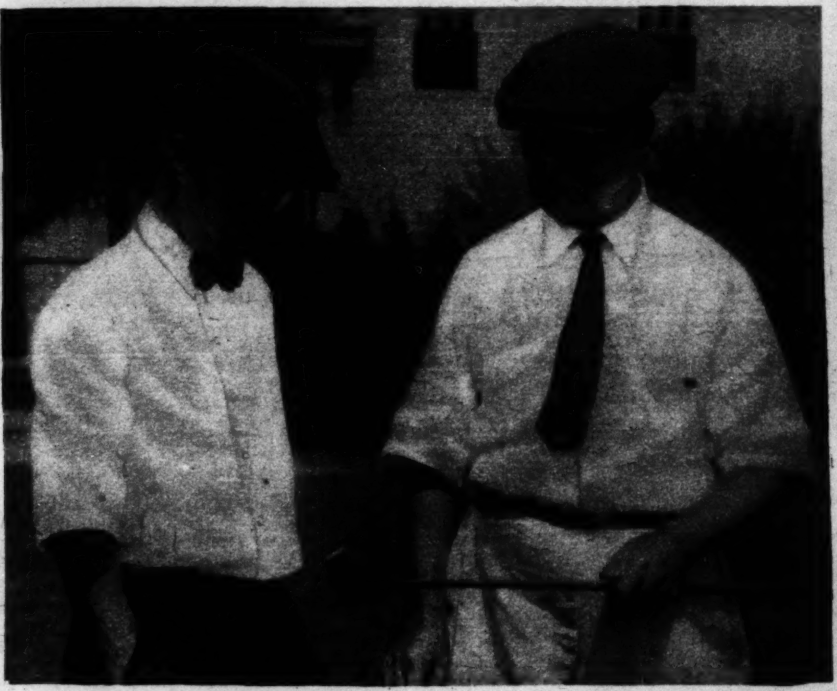
CHARLES W. FOLDS and his son, George W. Folds, regard their golf with fitting seriousness.



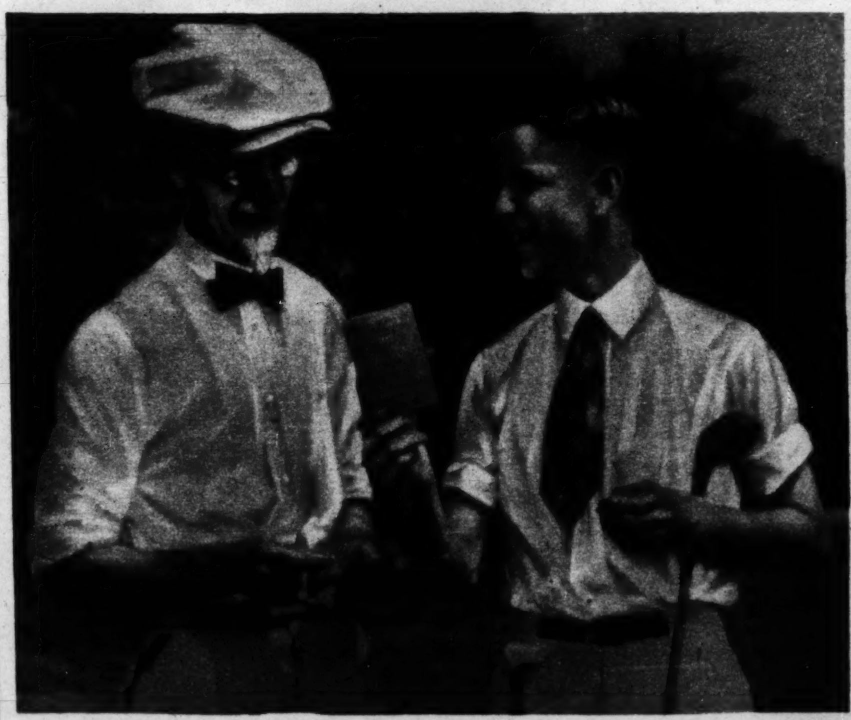
W. M. RYAN and his son, J. D. Ryan, all smiles, take their departure for the Midlothian course.



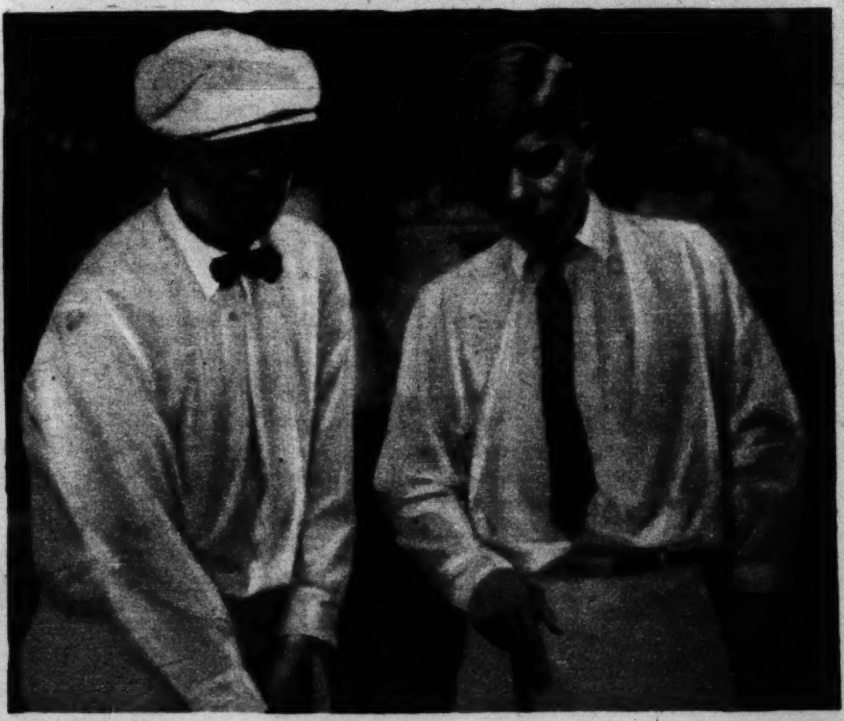
THE TWO JACK FULTONS, senior and junior, wear determined expressions that presage a stiff game.



PAPA F. E. BARTELME gives T. T. Bartelme a brief lesson in some of the fine points of the ancient sport.



IS IT POSSIBLE that Paul T. Smith is twitting Smith Pere—Charles A. Smith—about the score?



JAMES BELDEN SENIOR and Junior, who strikingly resemble each other, all set for some fine work.

"Does not cover up the complexion, as most powders do, but reveals and enhances the natural beauty of the skin."

No other face powder can be like Melba

Now you can get a face powder—made by a revolutionary new process—which does things that no face powder ever did before—a face powder which clings through heat, wind or moisture, and which gives a pearly, clear transparency to every skin. The secret of Melba's new process is jealously guarded. It was invented by Melba and is used exclusively by Melba.

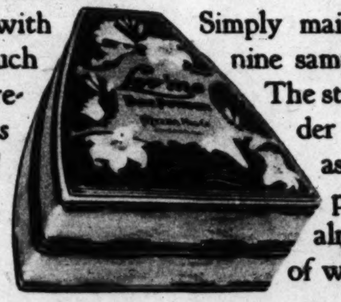
Why Melba Powders are so Much Better

The secret of "air-floating" is the secret of Melba superiority. Before Melba's revolutionary process was perfected, all face powder was made in the same way, by sifting through cloth, much as flour is bolted. This method has been used for more than 2000 years and is still in use.

Only Melba Powders are made in the new way—floated on air. Gentle air currents circulate through the Melba containers and only those particles which are fine enough to float are retained and boxed. This makes face powder infinitely finer than it ever has been made before. That is why Melba blends with the skin instead of merely covering it, why it gives such a transparent beauty to the complexion while remaining itself invisible. And this is one of the reasons why Melba stays on through wind, heat and moisture!

And Melba does more!

Because we add stearate of zinc to Melba powders, they soothe as well as beautify the skin. All specialists recommend stearate of zinc for any irritation of the skin. Melba stearate of zinc is specially refined by our own exclusive process. This element also helps Melba powders to cling through everything, by adding the necessary weight and body to Melba fineness. Melba powders will not enlarge the pores, because they do not expand under heat and are not soluble in moisture.



Test nine Melba powders free

Melba "Lov'me," fragrant with the famous "Lov'me" odor, "The Perfume of Romance," is the most popular of all Melba powders. It is sold everywhere at 75 cents. But there are eight other Melba powders—all made in the exclusive Melba way—floated on air. One of these is sure to be the powder that exactly fits your personality, so we want you to try them all, at our expense.

For your special type of skin—there is a special treatment

Skins differ widely—are you using the right treatment for your special type of skin?

IF your skin is a constant problem—if you cannot keep it smooth and flawless—then you may be sure it is because you are not using the right treatment for your special type of skin.

Skins differ widely. A naturally oily skin needs a special form of cleansing to counteract the tendency to an excess of oil. A pale, sallow skin needs a treatment that will stimulate the pores and blood vessels.

No matter what your type of skin happens to be—by the right treatment you can overcome its defects. For your skin is constantly changing—each day old skin dies and new takes its place. Give this new skin the special care suited to its needs—and see how beautifully soft and fine and clear you can make it!

For an oily skin use this special treatment every night:

FIRST cleanse your skin thoroughly by washing it in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. Wipe off the surplus moisture, but leave the skin slightly damp. Now with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly, with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. If possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice.

A complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations

For 25 cents we will send you a complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations, containing

A trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap
A sample tube of the new Woodbury's Facial Cream
A sample tube of Woodbury's Cold Cream
A sample box of Woodbury's Facial Powder
Together with the treatment booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch."

Send for this set today. Address The Andrew Jergens Company, 26 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

For a pale, sallow skin use this new steam treatment:

ONE or two nights a week, fill your washbowl full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the bowl and cover your head and the basin with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this, wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion. Rinse thoroughly, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing with a piece of ice.

In addition to the special treatments given here for two types of skin—an oily skin and a pale, sallow skin—you will find other special treatments for all the different types of skin in the famous booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch." This booklet is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today at any drug store or toilet goods counter—find the treatment recommended for your skin and begin using it tonight. A 25c cake lasts for a month or six weeks of any treatment, and for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

If you have the type of skin that is subject to blackheads—find the special treatment you need on page 3 of the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch."

If your skin is of the tender, sensitive type—learn the right treatment for it on page 6 of the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch."

NILES WELCH and MADGE BELLAMY are stunning in this picture, don't you think? Rather—isn't this a stunning picture of Niles Welch and Madge Bellamy? It is an art "still" made by John Ellis of the Thomas Ince studios and shows them in a scene taken from "The Cup of Life." Mae Tinee.

MABEL JULIENNE SCOTT will be seen playing the title role in the film version of "Fanny Herself." The story was written by Edna Ferber and is now being produced at Universal City.

Miss Scott, who isn't seen as often in pictures as her admirers might wish, was born in Minneapolis, Minn., and educated there. She has had a stage career, playing both in stock and vaudeville, and started her screen work in "The Barrier," the Rex Beach story. Since that time she has appeared in a number of pictures, among which were "The Sign Invisible," "Sacred Silence," and "The Sea Wolf."

She's 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 128 pounds, and has dark hair and brown eyes. Mae Tinee.

Get Thin to music!

WHEN will you start reducing—the easy, phonograph way? Begin your reduction this week. Your excess flesh will commence to leave from the very first day. Five thousand women have proved it. Free proof is waiting for you.

I HAVE a thousand letters like the following—letters no money could buy. These women know what my course can do!

Having reduced 60 lbs. my friends pass me without recognizing who it is. I feel and appear ten years younger.
(Mrs.) Grace Horchler
4625 Indiana Ave., Chicago, Ill.

I have reduced 15 lbs. in two lessons and would be pleased to grant permission to make use of my letter.
(Miss) Esta Arbaugh,
Mandamin, Iowa.

If anyone had told me I could lose 5½ lbs. in one week, then lose 25 lbs. more, simply and surely, I would not have believed it. You have improved my looks, figure and health, too. Words don't express my gratification.
(Miss) Ethel Baitz,
85 Galena Blvd.,
Aurora, Illinois.

One hundred dollars would not buy back my Wallace records. I thought I would be difficult to reduce, but am getting along just fine. My health has improved 100%. It has all been a pleasure to me.
(Mrs.) M. F. Wiersum,
721 Hogan, S.W.,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

—can you doubt evidence like the above? (Letters printed by permission).

Wallace

My method of restoring a normal figure is pleasant, positive, permanent. It has been used from coast to coast and not a single failure has been reported. It can and will make your weight what it should be. All I ask is the chance to prove it.

The next dress you buy can have lines and style, whatever your present proportions. Five pounds excess flesh, or fifty, will yield to this practical treatment. Resolve here and now to test this fascinating course—set to music—full of interest—resultful.

It's play to reduce the Wallace way

Unlike most methods of reducing, your 20-minute daily lesson with me will prove a genuine pleasure. Your health will improve from the very first week. Your skin will glow; your eyes will clear; you'll work and play without tiring.

This novel, but natural means of growing thin can be used in any home where there is a phonograph. My instructional records are clear as a bell, and it's easy to do what I tell you. You do everything to inspiring music—the lesson is over too soon.

Free Lesson The coupon below offers positive proof, without cost to you. I accept no money in advance. The first full-size record, (which any standard machine will play) with complete instructions will be sent for the asking. If you really want to reduce, here is your opportunity. Fill in coupon with lead pencil.

WALLACE 178 W. Jackson Blvd.
Chicago, Ills.

Please send record for first reducing lesson, free and prepaid. I will either enroll, or return you record at the end of a five-day trial. This does not obligate me in any way.

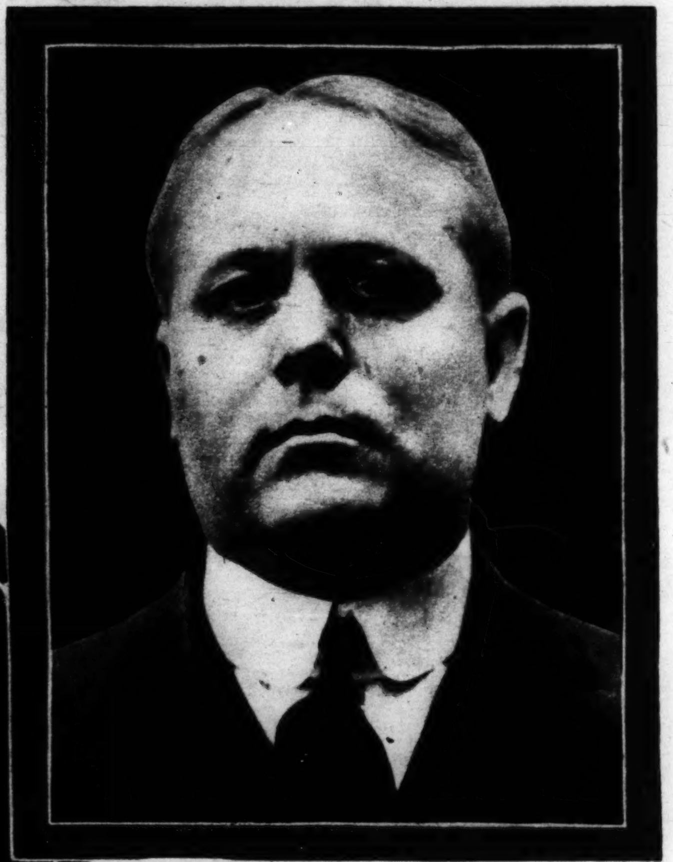
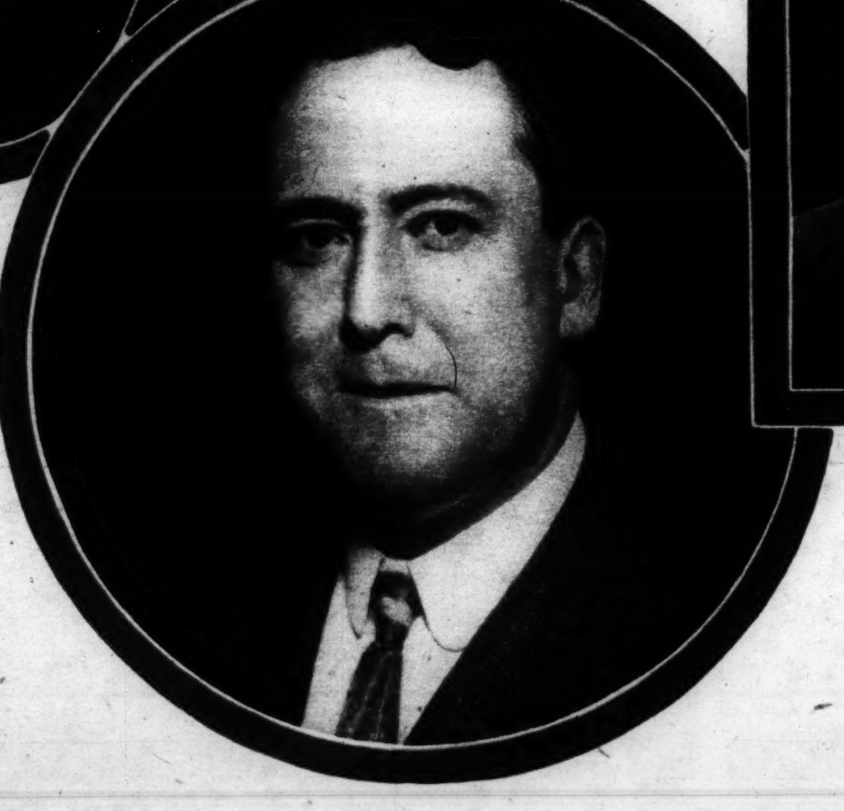
Why The Tribune has the largest morning daily circulation in America

MEN like Hewitt, Evans, Brown and Kelley help to make The Tribune the world's greatest newspaper. The stories of Hewitt, Evans and Brown are read by persons seeking real information on matters of public interest—men who know that they may rely absolutely on the accounts of these reporters, while John Kelley's picturesque career and association for several decades with the police enable him to tell in a charming style stories of the tragedy and the humor of the cell and the sergeant's desk.

ARTHUR EVANS is an old time Chicago reporter who has a large following among Tribune readers. He has specialized on news of industrial development, the outlook for business improvement and labor problems. Farmers, clerks, mechanics and millionaires are among his constant readers, and it is seldom indeed that a complaint is received against his fairness and impartiality

PARKE BROWN became a reporter for The Tribune in 1904. His work has covered a wide field. City hall reporter, war and foreign correspondent, and political writer have all been a part of his experience. There are few persons in the public eye in Chicago whom he has not interviewed

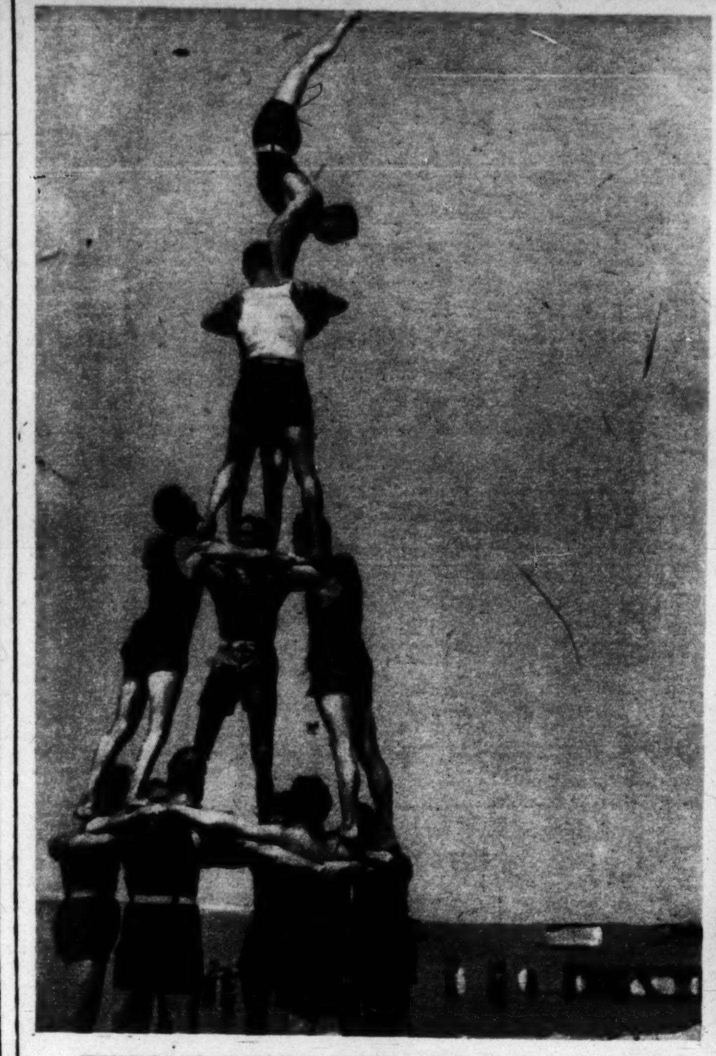




JOHN KELLEY, at your right, is known as "the veteran police reporter." He has "covered police" for 33 years and knows every old-timer in the department by his first name. Few men have seen the dark passages in life that John Kelley has seen. He has come in personal contact with all the lurid details of murder, suicide, poison, vice and distress. As an antidote, he reads poetry and enjoys everything from the odes of "Bathhouse John" to Shelley

OSCAR HEWITT likes figures as well as other men like golf or baseball. A statistician, if he knew the sources of information, might gather together the figures. But it takes a natural gift to write about them in such a way that the reader does not realize he is consuming statistics, and thinks only that he has found some information he would like to relay to his neighbors. There is probably no other newspaper man who starts so much conversation between men on the street car platforms, in smokers, in back porch conferences and wherever men gather to settle the problems of the universe

Read The Tribune Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, as well as Sunday!



TWELVE HUSKY BATHERS at one of the Chicago beaches have here turned themselves into pyramid builders, and the impressive four-story exhibit is the result. If you don't believe the feat requires muscle and agility, try it some time.

HE CAN'T KEEP THE GIRL OFF HIS MIND—Remember the old-fashioned man who pasted his sweetheart's picture in his watch? Well, he places it in his hat now, as the picture shows, and every time he tips the headgear he is automatically warned not to flirt. The new fad has given even Boul Mich something to talk about.

STARS OF DANCE ATTEND CHRISTENING—Four notables, including three world famous dancers, were present when the daughter of Mrs. Lydia Ragosin (Lydia Kyasht, the Russian dancer) was christened in the Russian church in London. The photograph shows Gordon Selfridge, London merchant and former Chicagoan, who was godfather; Mrs. Ragosin and her daughter, and Mme. Adeline Genee and Anna Pavlowa, who acted as godmothers.

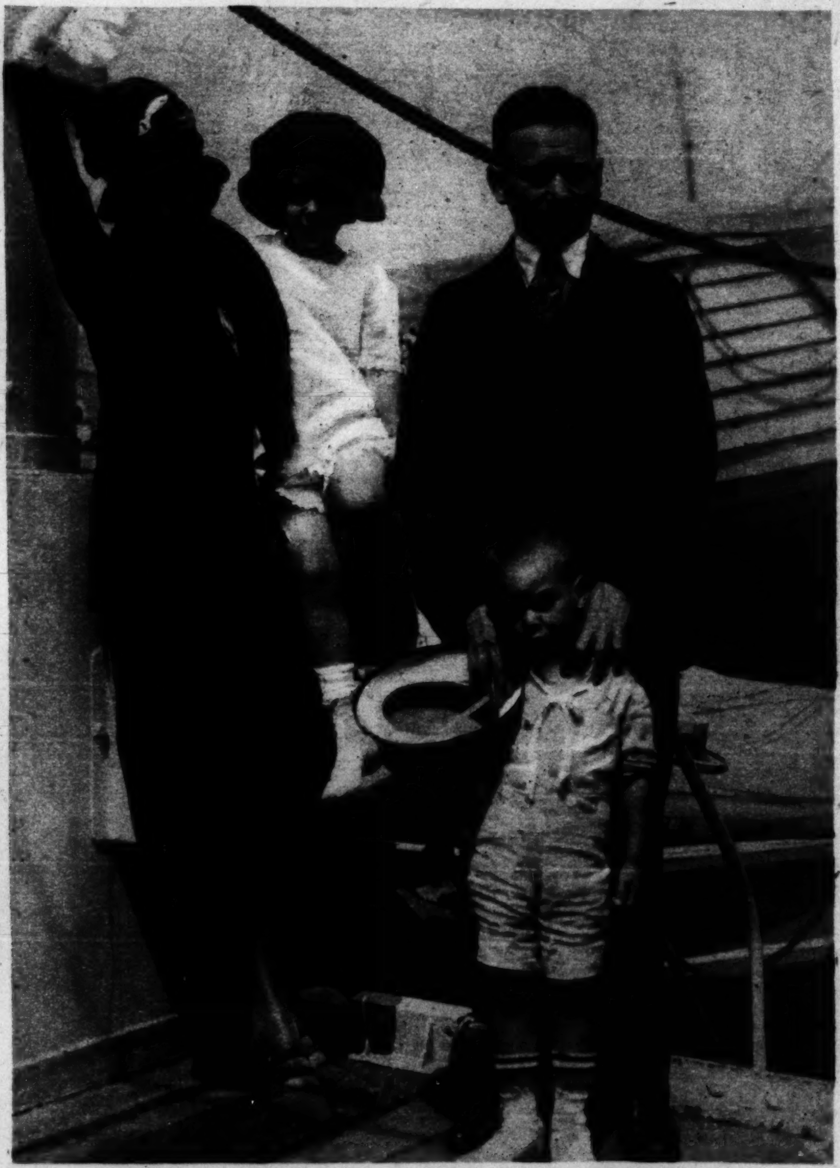
A MEMORIAL CHAPEL OF TREES—This entire majestic grove in Humboldt county, California, was dedicated on August 6 to the memory of Col. Raynal C. Bolling, killed in battle near Amiens, France. The practical sentiment that living trees are the best monuments to the hero dead inspired the dedication. Scores of American communities are planting trees in memory of their warriors. The photograph is from the Save the Redwoods League.



NOTED SINGER SAILS FOR EUROPE—Alma Gluck, famous songbird, and her two children, Efrem and Maria, snapped just as they sailed for an extended vacation abroad. Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, who is Mlle. Gluck's husband, did not sail with them, but will join them later.

It's of beautifully drapable gray Frosthrêpe, this latest of chemise-frocks, and its distinctive feature is the very new back panel of long and slim lines, faced with black Crêpe Jersey.

The Egyptian influence upon the style of the Empire period is apparent in this background drapery. It is one of the decorative and upholstery silks presented by Cheney Brothers.

The Smart Frock has a Silken Distinction

SELF-DETERMINATION is the policy of the chic frock for Fall. Skirt and sleeves may go to any lengths or widths; the silhouette may confine itself to the slenderness of the chemise-frock or attain an amazing degree of bouffancy; there may be quaint panniers or a daring hint at the bustle drapery; but by its fabric shall the true aristocrat of smartness be known. Therefore, one finds the hall-mark of Fashion in a Cheney Silk.

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

THE LAST WORD IN BATTLESHIPS—The superdreadnaught Washington, just launched, plowing the seas at full speed ahead. This latest addition to America's navy is a huge floating fort equipped to give the hardest possible blows and take the greatest degree of punishment. It is 624 feet long, displaces 33,200 tons, and has a speed of 21 knots. Eight sixteen-inch guns, among the heaviest ever made, comprise the Washington's main battery and a belt of fourteen-inch armor girdles the vessel as a precaution against undersea and aerial attack. Two 15,000 horsepower turbo-electric generators generate the electricity to operate the four 8,300 horsepower Westinghouse motors that drive the four propellers. In the Washington the United States maintains its lead over other nations in the matter of electrically driven war vessels.

The quadrangle comprises six courts, or campuses, and will be completed during the current year. Harkness Memorial Tower (at the left) is a Couronne tower after the fashion of St. Botolph's, Boston, England, and Wrexham Tower (right) is in the style of the tower of Wrexham Cathedral, Wales, where Elihu Yale was buried. Gamble Rogers, formerly of Chicago, is the architect. The quadrangle buildings will house about 650 students.

KASHA CLOTH MAKES MANY SMART AUTUMN COSTUMES

BY CORINNE LOVE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was that prince of irresponsibles, Omar Khayyam, who sang, "Ah, take the cash and let the credit go." Those who have looked over the early autumn modes are tempted to tamper with the classics a little and say, "Ah, take the kasha and let everything else go." And, having been as playful as this, we add that the kasha register is working overtime.

This material, kasha, has, in fact, taken us by storm, and is used indiscriminately for coats, suits, frocks, and coat dresses. It is a mellow fabric and gets along well with every kind of trimming—embroidery, fur, braid, cut work, or ribbon. Also many of the smartest of the kasha models are set off with—more kasha—this applied in bands of contrasting color.

We show on this page three models of the dominant material. To start out with, here in the center is a gown of soft green trimmed with gray satin ribbon and with bands of mole. Aside from the delightful color combination represented by these various elements, this model commands attention because of several individual touches. First of all, there is that cute little piece of ribbon underneath the mole cuff. Sleeves are like G. K. Chesterton this year. They have to be different. They are compelled to say things upside down. Consequently we find a number of them whispering their trimming below stairs.

Let me bring forward a few samples of this secretive method. First of all, there is that black crepe de chine frock which Premet designed for Mlle. Canas and which has been copied in New York a number of times. This has turquoise blue chiffon sleeves which are exceedingly wide and which are patrolled on the lower side by jet. Not quite so widely known is the black velvet coat from Jenny which breaks the wide surface of its gray silk embroidery only by an exposed section extending on its nether side from above the elbow to the wrist. This area of black velvet is made more conspicuous by loops of self-material. These are only two of many instances, but they are enough to assure us that we can put fringe, bands, buttons, or loops on the under section and be more chic than the next person.

But to go back to the frock of green kasha. A second arresting touch is the pockets, and a third the tunic. Of course, we can't allow a skirt to be humdrum any more. It's got to be stimulating somehow. Yet this tunic with its wayward peak at one side is decidedly more novel than many of the other attempts at giving variety to the hem.

As to the fur, it is well to remember that this is used on frocks chiefly in the form of such narrow bands as we find here. These bands often edge tunic or flying panels, but a variation from this technique is found in the bands of monkey fur which are sometimes run down the skirt sides of the crepe de chine frocks. Another way to employ fur on the autumn frock is via the diamond motifs which were so much featured in thin summer frocks. These motifs of mole are stunning on the new georgette gowns.

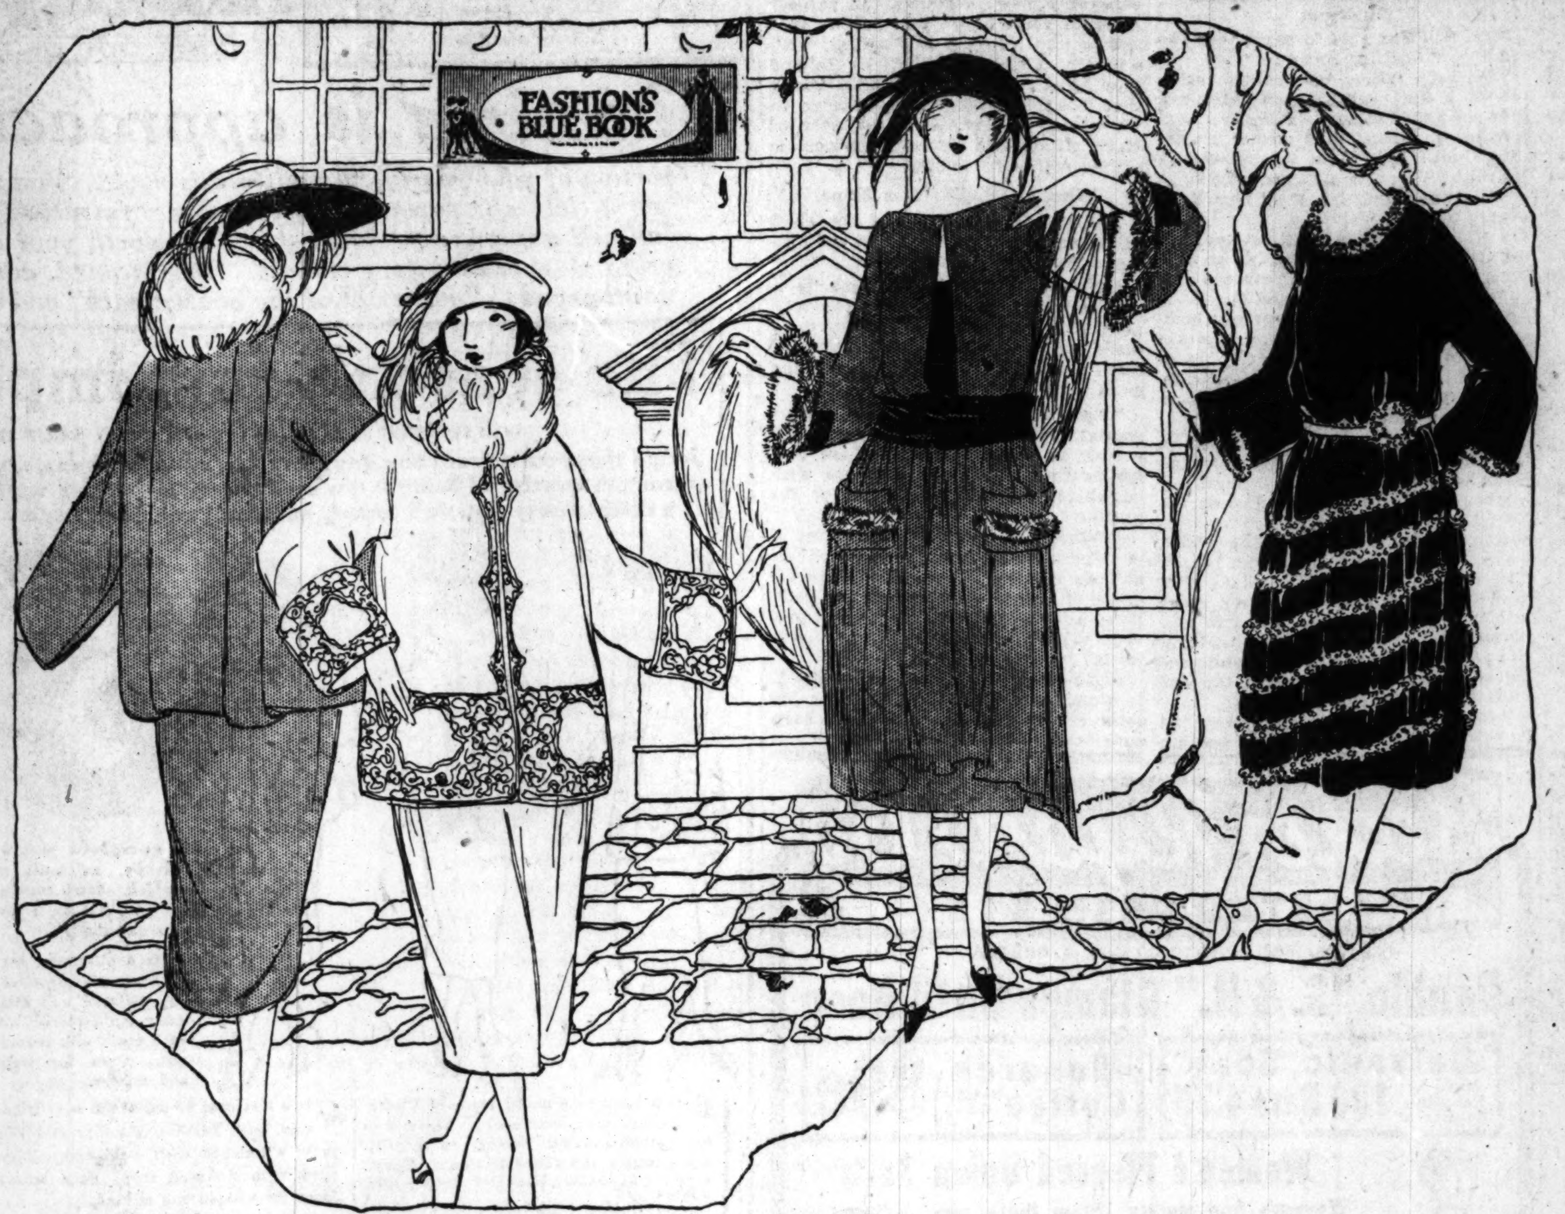
Still another thesis in fur trimming is illustrated on the model the right. This, a black kasha cloth, is made arresting through the diagonal placing of the gray slynx bands on the skirt. The slynx is repeated on the sleeves and at the round neck line, and it only dismissed after accomplishing its final chore—that of edging the girdle of silver braid.

The three piece costume is here, and decidedly here, among exhibitions of the early fall modes. This is a subject for thanksgiving, for nothing is more practical and, generally speaking, more ornamental. A number of the new three piece costumes are made with the jaunty loose coat and extremely wide sleeves. Usually the coat strikes the hip line, but a famous French model brought to this country gives us permission to go as far as we like. For it roams almost to the knees and then dips on either side in imitation of a skirt which does the same.

The basis of this model which we have just mentioned is duvetyn. Its embroidery is of silver and gold. The pelt, which sways from every available point, is monkey. It is a recipe which is followed faithfully by many a three piece suit and plain suit of the season. For, although the kasha costume is smart, duvetyn holds its own with remarkable vitality.

It is of this time honored fabric that is achieved the three piece model second from the left. The color is beige, and on this is applied gold thread embroidery in a design which leaves barren occasional areas of cloth. And, by the way, this gold thread is a bit tarnished. They don't seem, in fact, to like good housekeeping among their metal threads of this year, for on quite a number of the exceedingly chic things I have noticed this calculated dinginess of effect.

As to the chin collar which is so often found on the wraps of the season, it is here of brown squirrel. It might, however, just as plausibly be of broadtail or Persian lamb, for these crinkly furs seem to be rivaled this autumn only by monkey. The three are undoubtedly the duvetyn fur favorites for both frocks and suits. Beneath the coat lurks a dress bodice of beige chiffon trimmed sparingly with the same tarnished metallic thread.



"PLACE your trimming fuse under the sleeve," says the lady in the center, "and your frock will go off nicely." She proves what she says in this charming model of soft green kasha cloth trimmed with gray satin ribbon and with bands of mole. At the right another kasha cloth frock, this in black, chooses gray slynx for its bands and silver braid for its girdle. At the left a black kasha suit is accompanied by a chin collar of gray squirrel, and last comes a beige duvetyn three piece costume with embroidery of tarnished gold thread.

It is not only the three piece suit but the suit itself which has come under the sway of the loose jacket. An example of this is found in the suit of black kasha at the left. This is trimmed chiefly with a collar of gray squirrel—that combination of black and gray is still good—and with the two bands of self-material tucking under the coat hem.

The cape back suit is retained from the summer, and many are the variations of this effect. Along with this one must enter the cape coat of which a stunning representative is found in a model of Madeleine et Madeleine. This adds to a long, slender coat of black velvet and blue broadcloth a cape of almost philosophic amplitude. Composed of three flounces of the cloth so dense as to almost obscure the richer fabric, this cape reminds one of those worn by the German men who before the war used to almost obliterate under their portly physiques the "great masters" of Italy and the peaks of Switzerland. This cape reaches, in fact, to almost the hem of the frock, and is voluminous in proportion.

But if one has a limited income, dally not in the flowery meads of the three piece suit or the coat or any fussiness whatsoever. Hark straight to the severe tailor made. This will always do more chores than an office boy can get out of, and this season it basks in the sunlight of favor. The partiality started last spring in Paris when our fashion Ulysses reported that every other woman was wearing a mannish suit of Oxford gray. We shall probably get away from the Oxford gray, but the ideal of cut is still with us. Indeed, whether it be of serge, kasha cloth, tweed, or bure, the tailored suit is the pillar of the autumn wardrobe.

Many of these suits are made with an extremely long coat. At other times the wraps are finger tip length. Usually there is a slight flare to the skirt of the coat. But always they are plain, plain, plain. They depend for their success upon cleverness of seam and upon accessories.

The chief accomplices of the tailored suit this fall are the jabot and high neck frill of white organdy or batiste. Often these are piped with a bit of colored organdy or embroidery, and some new ones show a vivid touch of kid. Another means of color is in the boutonniere. It is wonderful, indeed, what a crimson flower and a green leaf will do for your severe suit of tan or brown or navy.

A favorite accompaniment for the tailored suit is the tricorne of velvet, duvetyn, or felt. Tricornes are much in evidence nowadays, and, though they often seem more corn than tri, though we seek vainly for some resemblance to the hat of revolutionary days, they are all undeniably smart.

However, the tailor made woman does not limit herself to this phase of millinery, for there are any number of charming little toques, of Bretons, and of the popular hat with the turnback cuff from which to choose.

The Autumn Mode

Suits

An interesting thing about the new Fall suits is that they may be long or short and either plain or fur trimmed. There are flare effects, blouse effects and box effects. Duvet de Laine, Moussyne, Panvelaine, Gerona, Marvella, Duvetyn and Caracul cloth are the beautiful materials that come in the new colors, Burro, Malay, Zanzibar, Pyramid, Sphinx, Volnay, Moroccan, Sorrento, Navy and Black. The favored furs are Opossum, Wolf, Squirrel, Beaver, Caracul and Nutria.

Wraps

The mode also achieves variation in Wraps. There's the sleeve wrap, the coat effect, the blouse effect and the large sleeve coat. The materials and colors are the same charming ones that are seen in the suits. There's Duvetyn, Gerona, Marvella, Pollyanna, Erminie, Moussyne and Duvet de Laine in Burro, Malay, Zanzibar, Pyramid, Sphinx, Volnay, Moroccan, Sorrento, Navy and Black. In addition to fur, some daring effects are obtained in other trimmings, such as embroidery and stitching.

Millinery

The Spanish influence determines the trend of the style in Autumn Millinery. High backed combs, lovely lace and fringe combine to make this an entrancing mode. This particular French turban from Marie Duc is fashioned of black crepe and receives its entire inspiration from the land of romance. The shape of the hat is modeled after the comb and the only trimmings are bands of gunmetal and silver beads. The head size is small to adapt itself to the new coiffure, the Spanish head dress.

Blouses

The new Blouses revel in the new colorings. This charming Overblouse of Canton Crepe is hand embroidered in cross stitching of Chinese coloring, and the wide sleeve effect is a noticeably smart feature. Among our new Autumn blouses are lovely over-blouses of Spanish lace, and combination effects of Georgette and Canton Crepe. Tailored blouses are also shown in a varied assortment in trimly plain tucked or plaited styles.

Frocks

To enumerate the mode in Frocks would involve individual preference. Long skirts take their places alongside of short skirts. Lines may be long, straight or bloused. The coat dress and the Empress Eugenie styles are equally popular. Sleeves have grown in length, and with the aid of the uneven hem line achieve distinction for many a frock.

Crepe Romaine, Canton Crepe, Crepe Satin, Morocco Crepe, Chiffon, Lace, Tricotine, Homespun, Duvetyn and Piquetine are the favored materials, while even more alluring than their names are the new colorings, Vionnet, Red, Fuchsia, Cocoa, Copper, Wedgwood, Jade, Sapphire, Rust, Navy and Black.

Sports Apparel

If it's true that the knicker suits are going to be included in every business girl's wardrobe for general wear, our collection offers an interesting variety. The Autumn Sports Apparel also includes new Riding Habits, Motor Coats, Sports Coats and Suits.

The Sports Skirt holds its own in the realm of Fall fashions. Plaids and stripes are even more startlingly gay. There are both pleated and gathered effects in Prunella cloth, Novelty Plaids, Satin and Canton Crepe. The wool materials offer a wide selection of new colors, while the silk skirts are black, navy or brown.

BEATING EGGS.

A REQUEST has come in—it was some weeks back—for an article on beating eggs, especially for cakes. It looks easy enough to whip up an egg. It is the last thing a cooks thinks she has failed in if her cake is poor. But the heavy hand on the egg beater or whisk, the irregular movements instead of the even, the lack of feeling for the task—we might call it lack of concentration—are some of the things that make for failure in doing so simple a thing as beating an egg.

Poor omelets, entire failures with angel cakes and sponge cakes, poor cakes of any sort, popovers that do not pop, and Yorkshire puddings that are like lead, all go to show that it is not so easy, after all, to beat or whip an egg. It is not easy to say what makes for skill, but perhaps a little discussion will evolve what are the manifestations of both skill and failure, and some wherefores of each.

Why the Cake Falls.

If eggs are perfectly beaten not nearly so much flour will be required as otherwise; therefore, the cake will not be so dry, and yet there will be no risk of its falling. No well trained cook of today worries about a cake's falling. It will not do so once in a blue moon if the eggs are well beaten and then not unbeaten again, as may happen; that is, the inexpert get a bulk of egg, then lose it by adding to it heavy ingredients heavily.

Suppose the task a young woman sets herself is the making of a layer cake, either with a creamed butter and sugar foundation, or one on the sponge order. Of about three things to be given expert attention, in doing this piece of work, the whipping of the egg comes first. If she neither whips the eggs well nor bakes in such a way as to overcome in part this fault—on a decreasing heat—she will get exceedingly poor results. If baked in large layers the surface may have a succession of elevations of different sizes and heights, instead of having a nicely level top. Even when baked with descending heat, which means a hot oven at the start, to heat through and raise cake quickly, the quality of the cake will be far from perfect if the eggs are unevenly or in any way imperfectly whipped.

Folding Air Into Batter.

The old fashioned cook helped out her poor work with the egg beating or whisking by whacking batters violently. This took main strength, especially as the old recipes called for large portions of everything. Of course, the whacking helped, because you can beat enough air into plain flour or a meal with a liquid—adding none of the special leavening agents—to help it to rise when it is baked.

You need really to put such a batter into a hermetically sealed utensil, in which case the heat turns part of the wet into expanding steam, and the flour or meal naturally swells and lightens in these two mediums, of wet and hot. In this case the mixing of the wet and dry, even with beating, was mostly for the sake of blending the two.

When in addition to folding air into a mixture of wet and dry and subjecting it to the expansion heat works when it turns water to steam, we add egg for body or framework, and an aerated framework at that, the lightness of our bread or cake—increase of bulk in proportion to weight as well as perfecting of quality—should be greater by far and for several reasons.

Breaking the Airy Mass.

"It makes it more interesting to know the reason," said a young woman to whom I was giving a lesson in cake making recently. I was explaining to her that we must not only whip air into eggs, but that we must not after that break down the air filled mass, as we may so easily do just as we break a soap bubble, although not so manifestly.

It is so easy to break down the airy mass of well whipped eggs by dumping heavy flour into it, therefore we sift the flour over it, and fold it in. You may also break this airy mass by stirring it, or this may not so easily be done if the eggs have been beaten until they have body, or will "stand alone."

It is easy to tell when egg whites have been whipped enough. They are dry and will "point." If you lift the beater out of the mass, a piece of the egg white, or pieces, often an inch long or more, will hang from it and decrease in size to a point.

Holding the Egg Expansion.

One way to make cake light is to fold into the batter made of the other ingredients the stiffly beaten egg whites, the last thing. Yet for all sponge cakes, which include sunshine and angel, I have found it best to whip the egg whites until they are dry or until they will point, then to fold the sugar into them gradually, before adding the flour in the same way, or if the yolks are used they are folded into the whites and the sugar before the flour. The sugar fills the air cells, the walls of which are the expanded white of egg, and in this way the expansion of the egg, gained by whipping it, is set and it cannot readily be lost.

When the yolks are beaten separately, they are rarely beaten enough by the every-day cook, although the expert directs that they be beaten until lemon colored. If their measure of cold liquid is added to them, and then they are beaten until every large bubble has disappeared, they can be given almost as much body as egg white beaten until dry, but this airy mass can more easily be broken down than can one of whites, therefore, it is best to fold it into the sugared whites for cakes, or if making omelets or popovers the two airy masses should be folded together carefully.

Choosing the Beater.

What sort of a beater shall I use, is a question not infrequently asked. The Scotch cook, at least in her home town and in the schools, is taught to use a knife blade. Many American cooks use a silver fork or a wire whisk. It is a whisk that revolves so effectively in the power egg beaters.

The rotary egg beaters have long been popular. There are several makes all based on the old Dover. There have been all sorts of variations on this type, but only one improvement, as far as I know, in these rotary beaters. I can get more universal service from the turbine, but some people have no success beating eggs with it.

One danger is to be foreseen when the rotary—sometimes called a cog beater, although there are others with cogs—is in the hands of an amateur. She may approach an egg white or egg as though she were going to tear it all to pieces, and that is just what she may do. After it has been broken in this way you cannot beat your egg or egg white to any great volume. The approach must be slower; the first movements must be like those of a machine getting under way. Then the elastic strings of the egg white are not broken but stretched and puffed.

The greatest major domo in cooking demonstrations we have ever had, I believe, always used a wire spoon for whipping eggs. These spoons have a rather heavy wire for rim, with lighter weight wires crisscrossed, to fill in. They used to be sold for about 3 cents apiece, and the cook in question kept a supply on hand, as they wore out rapidly. In watching her you might easily believe that with three or four whisks the egg white under her hand became stiff and dry, and you would not be far off in your guess.

The Skillful and Powerful Hand.

You can only explain this by the word skill. By training and experience her hand had become rarely skillful and powerful in this work.

If cakes and omelets are difficult to make because of lack of skill in whipping eggs, a soufflé is an impossible thing, and there are many of these light and fluffy things that are a delight. In general, they are whipped eggs to which is added a purée of fruit or vegetables. A prune whip consists of sweetened egg white and sieved prunes. The quantity of the latter may vary, but should never be so large as to break down the air cells of the egg white. And this is true of whatever ingredient we add.

The Incomplete Recipe.

The old fashioned cooks were so afraid that a soufflé would fall on its way from oven to table that they used a sheet of hot iron over it. But, if made rather small and the eggs so whipped as to have body, a soufflé will not fall even when it is cold.

The cooking teachers do not write much about beating eggs. One text book says that a person needs to see an omelet made in order to make one. In another book, for young students, after the recipe for creamy omelet it says: "There are many dishes in which the beaten white of egg is used. Egg white is elastic, and as it is stretched by beating, air is caught in it and it becomes white and fluffy."

But this recipe has flour, which is in a sense a substitute for eggs beaten until they have enough body. The direction given for beating "until creamy" is inadequate.

Different Beaters for Different Textures.

Mrs. Hill has this to say under the heading, "Beating Eggs :

"Without taking into consideration the fact that eggs enrich mixtures, they are added either to thicken a mixture or to thicken and render a mixture light. Lightness is not always desirable. When eggs are added simply to thicken a mixture they should be beaten only until the whites and yolks are well mixed, i. e., without separating the whites from the yolks and until a spoonful of the mixture can be taken up and held in the spoon. A spoon, fork, whisk, or Dover egg beater may be used. When the eggs are added to insure lightness the yolks and whites should be beaten separately—the yolks until thick and lemon-colored, and the whites until dry.

"Various textures may be given to the whites of eggs in beating by judicious selection of the utensil used. If a close texture be desired, choose the Dover egg beater, and a looser texture is insured by the confectioner's whisk; a still looser texture by the flat beater. The reason for this lies in the fact that the whisk and flat beater carry into the mixture more air, half the utensil at each motion being first in the air and then in the egg, while the Dover beater is immersed in the egg until the egg is beaten.

"In using the Dover egg beater let it rest lightly in the bowl, beating slowly at first and then increasing in rapidity. To beat well, eggs should be cold and fresh; a few grains of salt may be added to the whites to hasten the process."

It would be a digression to tell of the different utensils used by different nations for beating eggs, but some of them are most interesting, though unbelievably slow in action. In pioneer America something was used that looked like a spiral bed spring, with a handle at the small end. In Holland they have a wonderful bamboo whisk that looks like the cleanest whisk in the world. The wonderful sabayon of Italy, which is a cooked egg nog, is beaten with a "quirlino."

When Beating Whites Alone.

And here is what one of the older of the school cooks writes on the subject of beating eggs:

"The use of a whisk on a platter is the best way of converting the slippery egg white into a frothy, flaky mass, so firm and dry that it may be turned upside down without slipping from the platter.

"Egg beaters are not absolutely essential, for the work may be done with a fork, in time. The whisks are best for beating whites alone—those with cogwheels for the whole egg or for beating batters.

"When yolk and white are mixed it is impossible to beat in as much air as into the white alone, probably because of the oil contained in the yolk. Even a very little of the yolk will prevent the white from becoming a stiff froth."

But you can beat yolks and a liquid to almost a stiff froth perhaps for the same reason that you can make soap suds—the oil emulsifies.

Think She's Pretty?

Mothers to Blame for Daring Stunts of Flappers.

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NOW, I want it understood I am not an old fashioned lady with old fashioned ideas about young girls. I don't spend my time crying things weren't like that when I was a young thing, because I know quite a number of things would have made my deb and subdeb days much happier if they hadn't been as they were.

And I don't think the toddle (as it was invented) shocking and not fit for the young ladies. I think short skirts are snappy, and if I could stand the popular test I'd probably wear mine an inch or two higher. I think the styles were never prettier, younger, more hygienic than they are today.

If bobbed hair suits the type, I think it adorable. If a slight dash of rouge on any but the very young face is going to relieve a pale, anemic coloring, I'm for it. And I certainly believe a face powdered delicately is much more attractive than a face with shiny, oily skin.

A Wave of Sophistication.

But with all that it takes a more liberal mind and more forgiving heart than mine to appreciate the ways of the daughters of some of our so called good families.

There is a wave of something—I know not what to call it—sweeping the earth which unquestionably has dragged a lot of our young maids into a maelstrom of daredeviltry, of sophistication which belongs not to their generation nor to their years nor to any world but the one labeled "underworld."

The pity of the whole thing is that the youngsters do not know what they are doing. They haven't lived long enough to know the matrimonial market value of virtue and innocence nor the beauty value of it. They cannot know that the impression they give of having accumulated the entire wisdom of the world is the one impression they should never give if they want any one particular man to like them or if they want to be popular with a number of young men friends.

The Frank Masculine Opinion.

A friend related an incident the other day of a young girl with whom she is associated in business—a smart enough sort of girl as far as her work is concerned. She told my friend of a conversation she had with her beau which fairly bowled the older girl over. The most intimate things were discussed.

"Surely you cannot talk things like that over with a man to whom you are not engaged," my friend asked.

"O, all the girls do nowadays. Every fellow will tell you that," was the reply.

My friend has a most successful young, unmarried brother about 24. She asked him if there was anything to the charge. Come to find out, he knew this particular girl and answered his sister's query:

"She's just a plain blinkety blank fool, that girl. She's not bad, but she's one of these smart guys who just try to see how far they can go without paying any penalty. The woods are full of them."

The Psychology of Dress.

Of course, it does seem to me that there is but one person to address on the problem of dress and conduct as it is being practiced by so many of the flapper class. She is the mother of the girl.

The mother is the one to blame. She knows human nature. She knows what men say about girls who are immodest in their manner and immodest in their dress. She knows the danger to the girl of going about with perhaps a single garment under her dress, her stockings rolled, and her skirt so short as to expose her knees. She knows the girl's responsibility in the matter of dress where another mother's son is involved.

If she doesn't know it, all she has to do is to call in her son and ask him what he thinks of his sister's scant attire. A brother's frankness about his sister's conduct is evidence enough there are decent instincts in the male breast that writhe against the woman he loves subjecting herself to criticism.

Modesty Must Be Taught Early.

Of course, the mother doesn't need to wait until her daughter has reached her teens or her early twenties to talk modesty of dress and conduct to her girl. If she begins it in her early days she will not find her daughter ever the butt of a coarse joke or an insulting remark. You can ingrain modesty in a child so that it will never be forgotten. But a mother cannot do it by preaching alone. She has to practice it herself. In the topsy-turvy turning of today's events it is not an infrequent occurrence to find a daughter trying to lead mother back on the straight and narrow path of dress and conduct.

The pendulum will swing back one of these days and all will be serene and nice along the broad highways—but in the meantime a lot of young girls who mistake the smart and bold for the smart and nice are going to lose out in beauty comparisons, lose out getting nice young men to lead them to altars, and, much to their chagrin, they are going to discover the girls they thought back numbers and old fashioned are going to be happily ensconced in homes and hearts of the better men of that sex to whom woman's art of half concealment never loses charm.

Beauty Answers

By Antoinette Donnelly

PLAIN GIRL: NOW, IF I COULD write you a "prescription" that would make your eyelashes grow and curl upward I'd go into the business. For if there's one thing every lady knows it's that she can do a powerful lot of damage with eyelashes that are luxurious with an upward curl. But growing eyelashes is a tedious, tedious job, and their inaccessibility makes them harder to be patient with in the matter of remedying.

Here's the very best formula I know of, but don't forget the big job is up to you, which is being as consistently regular in the application of the "grower" as you are about eating. Yellow vaseline, two ounces; oil of lavender, 15 drops, and oil of rosemary, 15 drops. Apply with a tiny brush and be very careful not to get any into the eyes.

FLORENCE B.: S. A. E. ISN'T anybody—just a stamped addressed envelope. How to put on weight? First, you must be sure there is nothing organically wrong with you. Is your digestion good? Nothing wrong with your teeth to prevent a wholesome digestion of healthy foods? Do you sleep nine hours? Do you eat regularly? Do you get in a certain amount of wholesome exercise daily? How about your food? Can you take cream and milk, spread butter generously on your bread? You had better send the s. a. e., now that you know what it is, and let me mail you information on how to gain weight, which is given at length and I am sure will benefit you.

UNHAPPY: THE FIRST RULE for maintaining that lovely baby texture and clarity of skin is to wash the face correctly. Careless washing and hasty washing of the face start the blackhead trouble. Then it is but a step to pimples and other complications which are disfiguring. Don't use hot water on the face, but warm water and a good soap. Rinse that off in warm water, then rinse in cold water every time you wash the face. The cold water is tonic and astringent in virtue. If you let it go at a hot water rinse you leave the pores open, inviting dust and soot to settle therein and start blackheads. I have a booklet on care of the complexion you would find helpful. Please send s. a. e.

ALONE ACROSS THE CONTINENT

DEAR PAL: I got back just a week ago today after the loneliest journey of my life. Nor have I been able to shake off that awful lonesomeness since. The fact is I'm missing you, precious playmate, to such an extent that it keeps me wandering around like a lost somebody.

My bachelor apartment that I was so enormously proud of has sure lost charm. In the evenings I can no longer sink deep into my old leather chair, light a pipe, pick up a good magazine, and be content. In five minutes I'm out of that chair like a jack in the box and pacing the floor, trying to decide whether to send you a telegram, a night letter, special delivery, common everyday letter, or to throw up my job and start back to California on the next train.

I've cleared out and packed away a lot of my old trophies and things, because I could just hear you say the place was "too cluttered to breathe." I've taken down all but a half dozen of my pictures. Shouldn't have cared to have you examine the others too critically. I somehow can't examine or judge anything any more without weighing your viewpoint, dear little mentor. Meeting you has changed this old world considerably for me, you can begin to see.

Speaking of that trip home again, it was awful! There were five pairs of newlyweds on the train, or at least young couples. Everywhere I went I bumped into those happy looking people, till I got too lonesome and grumpy to live. Every time I went into the diner there was sure to be a couple at the table next mine, and one in front. I'd meet the other three going or coming, sure.

If I got out at the stations for exercise I ran into the whole bunch, a bit self-conscious, but happy as larks. I felt like a pretty dejected bird myself. I'd go back into the smoker and go to comparing those girls with the one little girl I was longing for. How they did suffer by those comparisons! I always used to think it fun to watch such couples, but that was before I knew what it meant to be close beside the pal of a lifetime. I hadn't met you, dear chum, and had never missed any one that way before.

All during the trip I couldn't see or hear a joke without its going flat for me. You weren't along, so I couldn't watch your eyes get all sparkly, and the corners of your mouth jump up for the laugh.

If I looked out of the window I kept thinking, "Sally would like that bit along here," or "Do look at that old chap. He's a character. Sally could do a great little sketch of him." Then I'd jerk out my watch to see what o'clock it was and try to make out whether it wasn't about the time you would be starting out for a spin in your roadster.

That trip was a mocking farce, a beastly sham. Life has been that, too, ever since I came back. I've lost my capacity for enjoying a single, independent existence. If I win back my old zest for life it will only be through a promise from you to become my pal for all time.

Sally, dear love, my heart didn't travel back with me from Californa. It refused to leave you behind. Won't you make it a trade? At a word from you I'll catch the flyer out and we'll make a trip home together that will be worth while.

PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

How to Use the Patterns

THE long lines of pattern No. 9906 make it particularly becoming to almost any figure. One naturally begins to think of new clothes this time of year, and no mistake will be made to use this design for one dress.

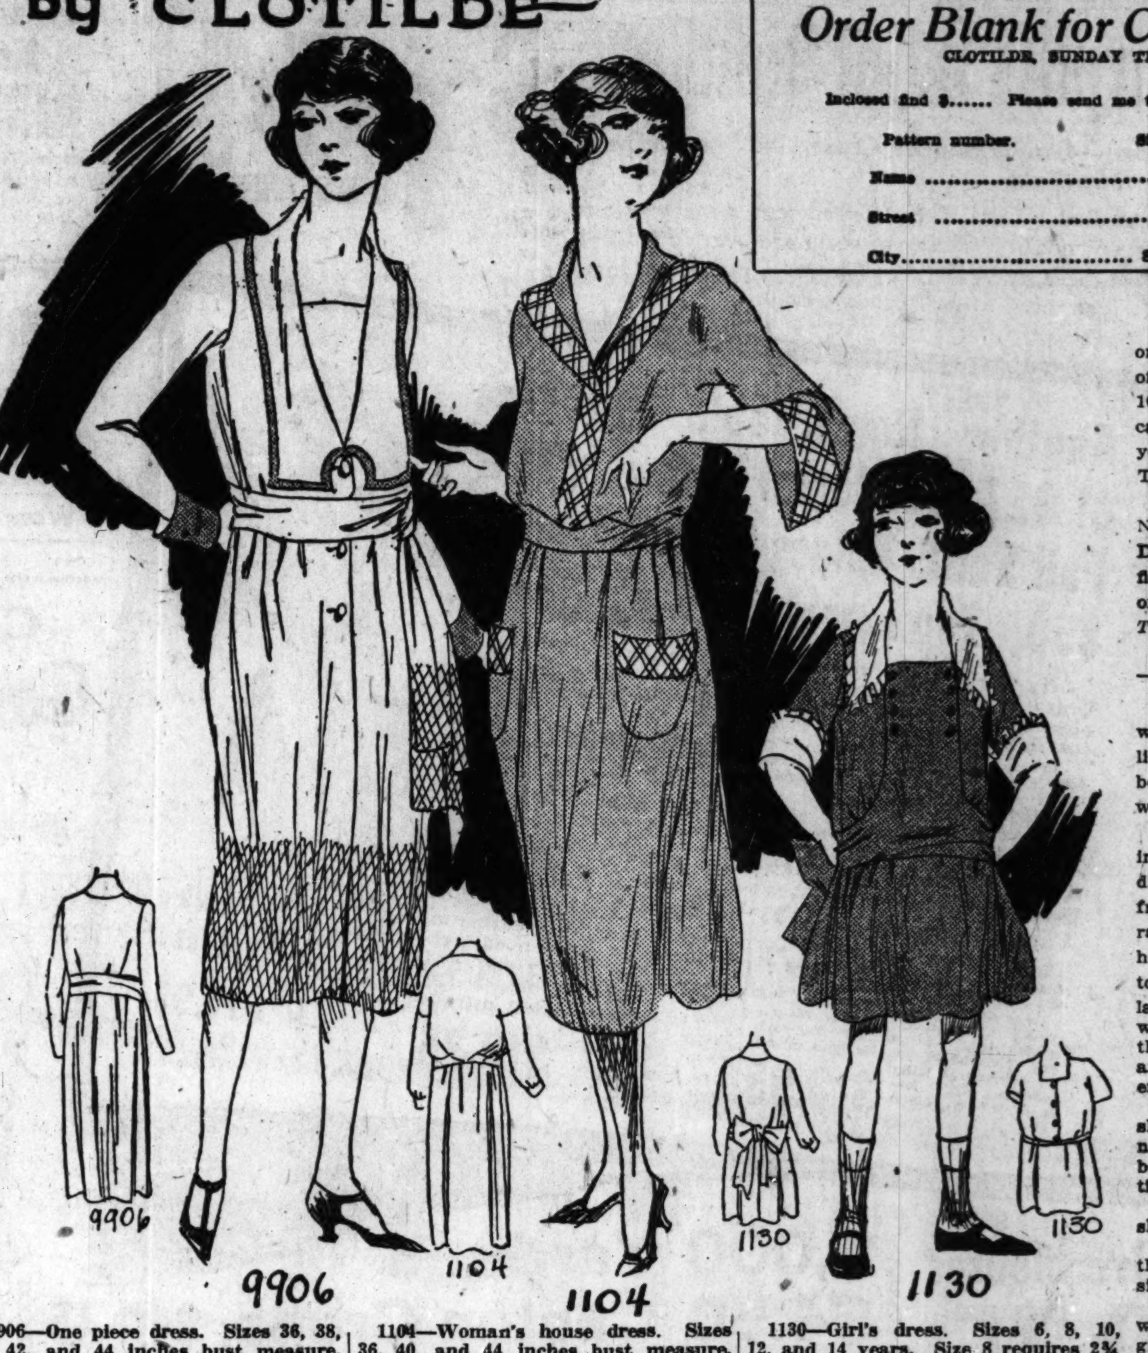
The waist and skirt parts are cut in one, and any sort of a girdle or narrow belt can be worn with it. Most women will want to have the log waisted effect, and a girdle can be adjusted to help that out, or a very narrow belt can be used.

The width of the skirt at the bottom is, for size 36, 1⅛ yards, and the dress is shown with long sleeves, which are almost entirely seen now on daytime dresses.

These sleeves are cut with a seam up the outside from the wrist to the elbow. It will be wise to trace this seam on the sleeve material, baste it together, and try on before cutting the material away there. No arms are just the same length from elbow to bottom or elbow to shoulder; nor are they the same size around, and so, while the pattern may fit you perfectly, there will be no harm done in taking the precaution of finding out first.

Lay the sleeve on a board and bring the traced lines together that mark that outside seam. Pin and baste together, basting from the elbow towards the bottom. If the material looks ever so slightly twisted or puckery, remove the pins and put together so that there is perfect smoothness. Twisted seams make twisted looking sleeves.

Be careful not to cut around the armhole unless necessary. It should be large enough not to be felt, but it is fatal to cut it out too much. Around the front where the curve is greatest, it is possible to stretch the material quite a little, and this is often done if there is a close feeling. The sized armhole for the average figure is 15 inches or a little over. In basting and stitching the sleeve in, it is possible to make the armhole smaller—another thing to guard against. Measure before and after basting to make sure you are all right.



9906—One piece dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 36 inch, 3⅝ yards of 44 inch, or 2½ yards of 54 inch material and 2 yards of binding.

1104—Woman's house dress. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material and ¾ yard of 22 inch bias plaid material.

1130—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material with ¼ yard of 36 inch contrasting and 1⅝ yards of ruffling.

Any of the light weight woolens will be pretty, cut by this pattern, and so will taffeta or satin. There is nothing prettier than crepe de chine and a dark blue, made with some contrasting color. For the trimming around the bottom why not get inch wide bands of embroidery in gold or silver threads and put it on so as to form a lattice work trimming, making the border when finished perhaps 10 or 12 inches wide.

How to Order Clotilde Patterns.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (wrap coin carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Note: Clotilde patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE. They are perfect in fit, up to date in style, and the easiest of all patterns to use.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

No. 1130 would look well made of wool jersey in a becoming color. Challis or any wash material would also be appropriate—depending largely on when the dress is to be worn.

The skirt is perfectly straight and in one piece, and should present no difficulties. The waist opens in the front and the sleeves are cut separately and are sewed into the armhole. The waist and skirt are sewed to the same band. Over the waist is laid the bib part, ending in sash ends which tie in the back. One can make the dress of one or two materials, and if the material is plain, embroidery on the bib will be pretty.

The sleeves can be made long or short, and if long they are set into narrow bands of cuffs. These should be made close fitting but not at all tight.

The straight skirt is rather wide at the bottom, measuring 1¾ yards for size 36.

The waist is cut kimono fashion with short sleeves and open neck. If gingham or percale is used, it would be pretty to use a solid color for the dress and trim with bias bands of plaid gingham. Or the reverse could be done—choosing material having some design and using plain bands of some contrasting color and embroidering them—matching the color or colors in the design in the dress material.

Who is this Dame Fashion?

This person who has so glibly decreed what must be worn and what must not?

FOR some time there had been a growing impatience among women of good taste, toward this much advertised Dame Fashion.

"Who can she be?" they demanded. "Her uncomfortable habit of decreeing that our last year's suits and coats are passé this season is becoming a nuisance. We have other more interesting pursuits than trying to keep up with her, and we are discarding perfectly good clothes because of her whims!"

And so these women proceeded to unmask Dame Fashion. Did they find a mysteriously gifted oracle from which issued inspired prophecy? No. They found a few self-appointed designers, many of them able, but all with one ambition—to express the novel, the most daring and unique in woman's dress.

Small wonder that these ephemeral fashions, which only a few could wear becomingly, lasted but a season.

But, once shorn of her mystery, Dame Fashion is powerless. Women themselves will dictate from now on. They will demand equally smart and effective apparel, but they will require the assurance that it is no passing fad but a thing of lasting beauty.

And this attitude is, in a large measure, responsible for the increasing demand for Wooltex Tailor-mades and Wooltex Knockabouts. No model in either coat or suit ever bears the signature of the Wooltex Tailors unless it is lasting in fabric, in tailoring and in style.

The finest of serges, tricotines, homespuns, tweeds and others go into the making of these coats and suits.

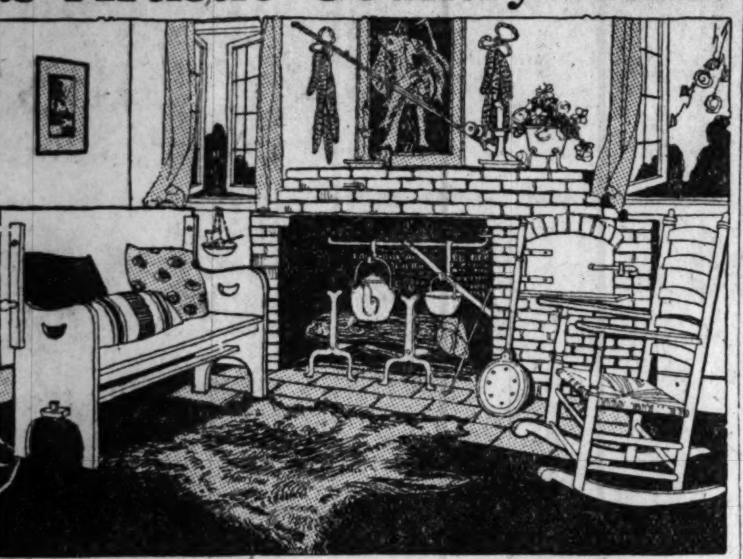
Remodel Your Farmhouse as Artistic Country Home



By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

TURNING a farmhouse into a holiday home is a task that one undertakes with a light heart. It means throwing off all of the conventionalities necessary for the formal routine of a permanent home for a freer scheme of living.

First of all, we will provide the house with shutters, for when we come to close it for the season we want it safe against intrusion. These will be made of solid wood, painted to match the rest of the wood trim, and fitted on the inside with heavy bolts. This is an effective and artistic way of boarding up. The whole will be adorned in holiday mood.

In New England and in the French quarters in the south one sees these solid blinds with a little motif, a crescent, or a clover leaf cut in at the top for venilation. In Latin countries country cottages have these blinds decorated with simple conventionalized designs of flowers, painted in bright colors on the sides that open out. Windows are then left curtainless, and the pattern shows through the glass into the room when the blinds are closed.

Window boxes have flowers planted in them that repeat the colors of the painted ones. With this treatment during the summer when the blinds are left permanently open the windows are framed in a veritable mass of color.

In the little remodeled farmhouse on Green bay local building conditions have been carefully considered. The shore abounds in large flat stones. So we placed a terrace of these at the south of the house running the length of the living room. The two side windows of the living room look out on this terrace. Then with smaller stones we had a chimney built in the middle wall space, with an open fireplace facing outdoors on the stone terrace.

Inside of the room the fireplace was finished with a dull brick low mantel. There is nothing pleasanter than to sit in front of a log fire that is built between windows, commanding a good view, particularly if one lingers in the country until the first flurry of snow. The contrast then gives one a sense of luxurious comfort that is downright feline.

At either side of the front of the house we built a lattice stretching straight out, tripling the apparent breadth of the cottage front. One of these lattices screens the stone side porch from a view of the road. Just fancy what fun it is to come up from a swim, on to this stone porch, and dry out in front of a permanent bonfire. Out here we have put a couple of canvas army cots instead of hammocks, and a few green garden slat chairs. That is about all the furniture except a slat table and small bench. These are things that can be left out without damage from a passing shower. There is nothing overhead.

You can lie in the evening on the cots and let your eyes rove from the lusty red of the burning logs up to the pure depths of the star shimmering midnight blue. On a summer morning breakfast in this roofless garden room has a charm of its own. On the south it opens on a view of an old apple orchard, and from the east side one looks down across a wide vista of lake seen between lilac bushes. Nothing but real cold makes it uncomfortable.

The children of the house took great joy in laying flat stones in a stepping stone path from the front door clear down to the gateway at the road.

The front of the house was of the common kind, two stories high, a single gable roof, a door, and double window downstairs, and two smaller windows upstairs. The windows we fitted with solid blinds, as described, and with flower boxes. The window top and door top were just off alignment, so, to conceal this defect, we decided to build a small porch, roof it under a single gable, and have at either side of the door a love bench backed with a trellis.

This cunning addition we succeeded in finding ready made, had it shipped to us in units, and easily assembled, it ourselves. At either side of this little roofed in entry way we will plant dwarf blue needle fir trees.

The house, which is now an ugly mustard color trimmed with Indian red, is to be repainted old ivory trimmed with Italian blue. The trellis also will be old ivory trimmed with blue, and the roof will be of stone gray asbestos shingles, because the little house is in that zone that is so constantly threatened with forest fires.

The whole place clearly expresses the spirit of the countryside. The timbered structure is framed from the trees of the woods near which it stands.

Difficulty in securing labor, at a distance of twenty miles from the nearest town, is considered in the garden plan. I should dwell on the natural beauty of the deep pine wood and a few silver birches, and bar carefully cut lawns, hedges and bedded flowers, (geraniums and other provincial folks) because of the expense of maintenance.

The trellises forming inclosures will be wreathed with rose and vine and striped with hollyhock, and there will be devecotes set on poles. At one hand half way toward the road will be a rustic pedestal, with a shallow bowl set on it for a bird bath. This will be balanced by a similar pedestal mounted by a sundial. Perhaps in time I should terrace the incline that leads down towards the bay from the back of the house, but for the present will content myself with an irregular planting of iris and forget-me-nots on the sunny slope towards the water.

All the land towards the road at one side in front of the apple orchard is filled with wild flowers. These will remain. The other side, which is not so rich, will be planted with purple clover, and we shall buy a book on raising bees.

"I have always read the good you have done for others, but never thought I would have to come to you myself, but now I need your help very badly. I lost my husband a short time ago and now I have to go to work and haven't any clothes to wear as it took all the money for my husband's bills. I wear size 38 or 40 bust and No. 5 shoes. Anything that any one does for me will be greatly appreciated. I will pay postage or call for them.

"Mrs. J. E. W."

Any help given this widow will be more than appreciated.

"I am the sole support of a family and my widowed mother, and due to this and my low wages the greatest ambition of my life so far never has been fulfilled. That is the study of bacteria with the microscope. May it be possible that some of your readers have a suitable instrument, powerful enough for this work, and which they no longer have use for, which they would let me have? Would be glad to do any work I can do in return for same.

C. W. W."

I am happy to pass along your petition, with warm wishes for its success.

"I have quite a number of garments in good condition, suitable for a little girl anywhere from 5 to 8 years, which I would be glad to pass on to some really needy mother. Also I have several pairs of ladies' shoes, high heels, in size 1½ B. Mrs. C. A. A."

Thank you, very much. Some little girl will be made happy with the clothes you have to give.

"May I appeal to you to ask if any of your readers could spare some unframed views of the city of Chicago, a book on its history, and a general American history? These would be much appreciated by my daughter, who is unable to procure same.

"Mrs. S. P."

Your name will be sent to any one who has the views and history you ask for.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

MORE MATERIAL IN COSTUMES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—"Would there be anything a body could wear in any of the collections?" demanded the innocent tourist of a fashion expert who had made the round of the openings.

"No, nothing," was her answer. "The head of one of the smart New York houses brought his wife with him. He had her try on everything, and he said there wasn't a thing you could wear without taking something off of it."

"I wanted to get a storm costume," remarked the tourist, and the fashion expert merely smiled wanly what she thought and felt about any such utterance as that. In a few minutes she began telling about the tiny little flowers made out of narrow fluted ribbon, with which Lanvin is trimming everything. Those costumes are not for rainy days. I was telling you, you remember, about the passion of Lanvin for making her employés work on tiny, handmade things. This year she is covering everything with mignonette or forget-me-nots, for which every little petal is made by hand.

Pink is her color for evening, and long square sleeves, you might almost say, was her trademark. The underarm opening begins somewhere near the waist line, and the sleeve is as long and full as the skirt used to be. If you ask me, I think you could scarcely conceive a worse silhouette for the American woman than the one produced by this new conception in sleeves.

Some of the old, smart Philadelphia families were represented at a little fashion séance in our courtyard this afternoon at tea time, and they were saying how very much too broad we American women are through the hips for any such playful fantasies as that. But don't think on this account you will be relieved from temptation to buy French gowns. You will find something in every collection that you can wear.

As for colors, pink and coral seem to have it for evening and brown for the days. Worth is accused of robbing India's coral strand for his trimmings. Tassels and belt buckles and queer ornaments are used for anchoring trains in unexpected places, and strands of garnishment for facings are in coral beads. He spurns the bouffante silhouette even for evening, and goes in for long, undraped lines.

As nearly as one silhouette could cover the field, I think the first illustration indicates the prevailing line for winter—except for the evening dresses, which have their own outline. The model is by Molyneux, and the boulevards, which are given over to the Anglo-Saxon race for the moment, are whispering that for our type of figure his collection is the best. As for the model under discussion, the hat is not an unimportant part of it. Note how wide and flat it is, and its one flower for a trimming. It is in tête de nègre velvet, and the flower, I think, is an orange shaded gardenia.

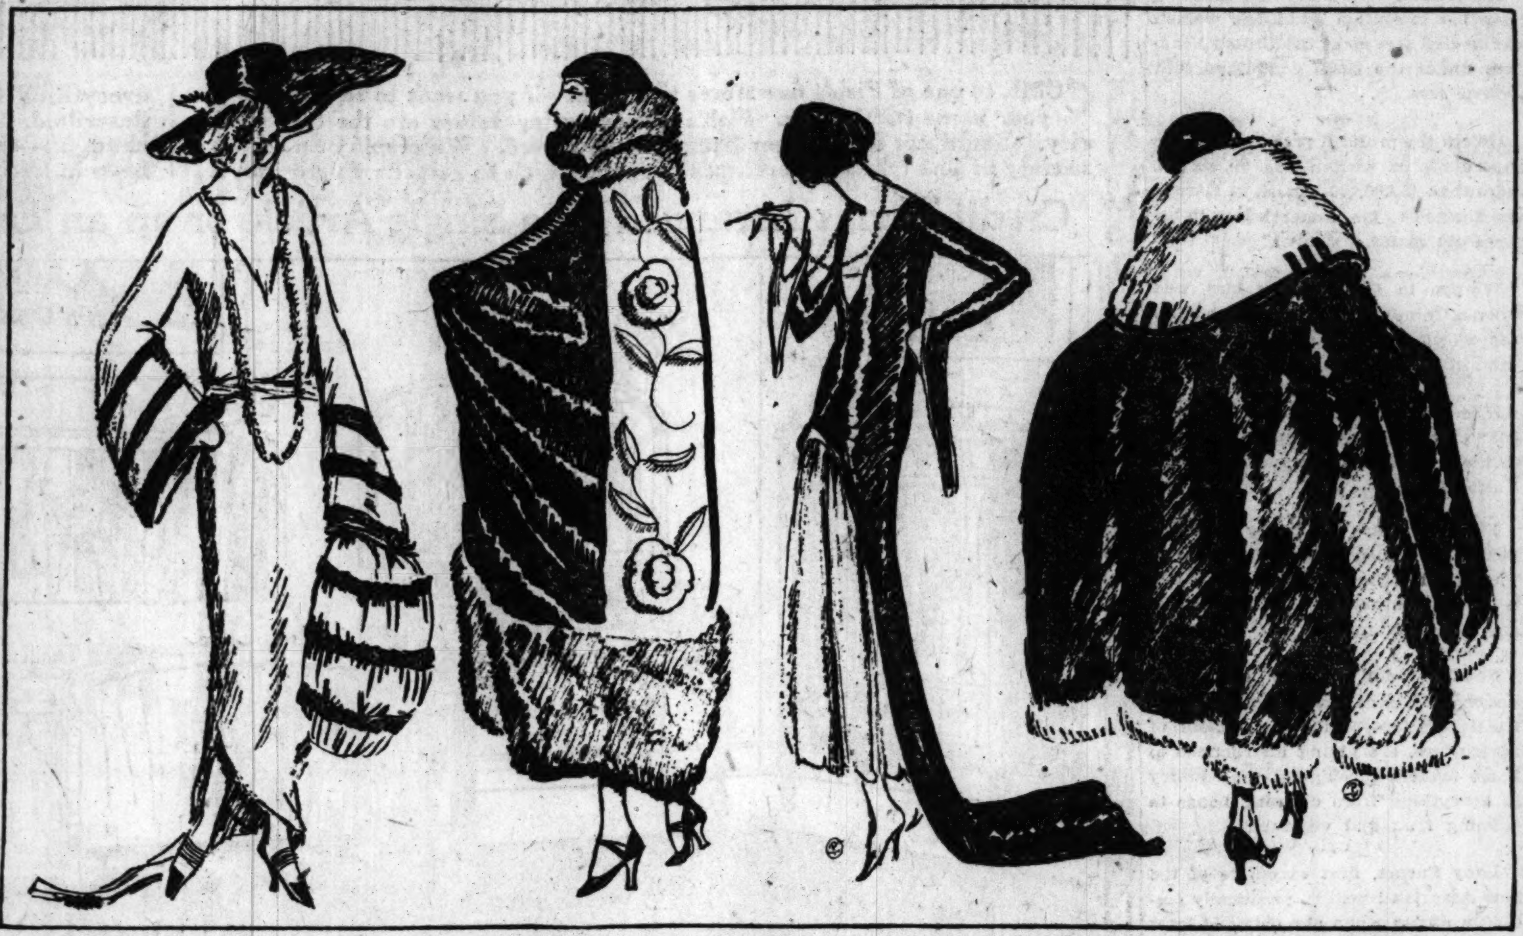
Of course the important item of the dress is the sleeve aided and abetted by the muff, which must be worn as if a continuation of the arm covering. The dress is in biscuit colored chiffon broadcloth, garnished with beaver bands round sleeves and muff. There is only slight acknowledgment of a waistline, and this comes exactly at the latitude designed for it by nature. Worth, too, is placing most of his waistlines there. But perhaps an even more prevailing style is the very low waistline, with a wide belt running tightly round the lower extremity of the abdomen.

Poiret is turning out some wonderful things with all of the material in the world in them. The men are chuckling over how plump the women are going to have to look. When you point out the price of those materials which he uses in such profusion, they cease to smile.

The following models show more or less what he is up to in his fall displays. The second one is made of black lustrous satin with a collar and deep band of yellow fur. Evidently it has been dyed, and it seems as if most of the furs of the winter have been. One that they are using is not, I think, rightfully fur at all, but yellow dog. The panel down the back of this voluminous garment is in white satin embroidered in silver and black.

The next offering depicts the vast difference between the silhouette for dresses, and the one for coats. Get your dresses as straight and your coat as bouffante as possible, is the battle cry of many a smart house. This dress represents a line which Poiret favors for evening gowns. The robe is of black satin, with gray and silver threads woven closely together on a rather stiff material for the gathered underskirt. The queer, long cuffs of the tight sleeves are lined with the same material, and this, too, is an item for generalization. Lanvin and others line their vast sleeves with contrasting material, and trim them with some still different motif on the outside.

Maybe the fourth coat shows more clearly than the other what volumes of material are at present consumed in the making of a winter wrap. Somebody said that Poiret here shows the women how effective it is for them to be large. You can use your own judgment about it. The ground work of this coat is black velvet. It has a border and a large collar of white fur. The latter is trimmed with black inserts of the velvet in groups of three, that look like piano keys.



Dress for autumn in biscuit colored broadcloth. | Evening coat of black satin, white satin embroidered. | Gown of black satin, lining of silver and gray threads, closely woven. | Model showing bouffante line for winter wraps.

Turned Hose on Him.

We lived in the north side of a double house with a big garden. I had chickens shut in by a fence, which also inclosed my vegetable garden. The man on the south side had no chickens and no fence around his little patch of radishes and lettuce, and one day my chickens got out and scratched in his young green stuff.

At noon, when I was watering the flowers in the front of the house, he came around in a rage to tell me I must keep my chickens shut up. I turned, still holding the hose, to apologize, and in my perturbation at his sudden angry onslaught, didn't realize what I was doing until I saw, to my horror, the stream of water strike him amidships.

Before I could shut it off he was drenched and took it for an intentional insult. He turned on his heel, saying between his teeth: "Well, I thought you were a lady!"

It was weeks before I could see the funny side. A. F.

Watched Her Carefully.

Five of us had been spending the afternoon with one of the girls, and as I was the first to leave, the rest walked to the street car with me. As I stepped on the platform two of the girls told the conductor where to let me off and to watch me as I was just a little irresponsible. Every time I looked, the man was watching me and by the time I reached our street, I was nearly "irresponsible." I think I did more silly things on that ride than ever before. It was the most embarrassing moment of my life. M. H.

An Unconscious Invitation.

We were coming home from a country dance, and were walking along a quiet country road. Suddenly the young man I was with grew rather bold, and kissed me. I became very angry, and decided that I'd walk the rest of the way myself. I managed to get several yards ahead of him, and as I walked along, I began to hum various tunes reminiscent of the dance.

Suddenly the chap, in back of me, burst out laughing. At first I couldn't understand the reason for this uncontrollable mirth, but imagine my embarrassment when I suddenly realized that I had been humming "Kiss Me Again." P. T.

Acquired the Habit.

I am a very absent minded person. We had been at a camp for several weeks and at the table had been accustomed to throw my drinking water on the ground, when it became warm, in order to obtain fresh. The evening after returning to the city I was out for dinner. Towards the end of the meal my water became warm and without thinking I picked up my glass and threw the water on the rug behind me. When I realize what I had done I was overcome with mortification. I left hurriedly and since then have avoided my friend. M. J. B.

Only One He Knew.

My college chum and I, both of us from the country, were being entertained one Sunday afternoon at the home of one of the professors. The daughter of the house, with a friend, invited us after tea to attend church. Returning, we were prepared to take our leave when we were again asked in to hear some music by our new acquaintance. After listening to the "Moonlight Sonata" she asked what we would like to hear and I innocently suggested the only piece I knew by name, "Home, Sweet Home," with variations! Our relations have never been any more intimate with the pianist; but with the professor's daughter—that's another story. C. J.

A Matter of Spelling.

Last year I was giving my sweet sixteen party and not having time I asked my younger brother to write the invitations for me. I dictated the first one to him and told him to make eighteen copies of it.

After he had written the addresses on them I went out to mail the cards and imagine my horror when after I had mailed all but one I happened to read that one over and found that instead of writing, "We request the honor of your presence," he had written, "We request the honor of your presents." Picture my great embarrassment when upon arriving all the guests held their parcels out in front of them. A. L.

When Your Ear Burns
by Doris Blake

"Right cheek, left cheek, why do you burn?
Cursed be she that doth me any harm;
If she be a maid, let her be staid;
If she be a widow, long let her mourn;
But if she be my own true love, burn, cheek, burn!"

If the right cheek burns, someone is speaking well of you; if the left cheek burns, some one is speaking to your disadvantage.

Another interpretation is: "If you are a maiden and your left cheek burns you will be kissed on that cheek by a young lady friend; if the right cheek burns guard well your rosy lips, for your sweetheart is near.

The evil spoken of you when your left ear burns will fall unheeded if you bite the little finger of your left hand.

If you hear a whistling in your ears it is a sign you are going to be dunned.

A red cheek or a ringing in the ears is a sign of some one talking about you.

If a warm wave sweeps over you without any apparent reason, some great calamity is about to occur to some one in the house.

If you feel a srawling sensation of the flesh, it is a sign that some one is trying to bewitch you.

If a faint trembling should of a sudden come upon one, it is considered lucky.

"Since you shall change state speedily, for that trembling
Is always the first symptom of a bride."

If your hand trembles it is a sign that you are going to be given something.

When a cold trembling hreeps over the limbs, people frequently say: "They are riding over my grave."

If you have gooseflesh without cold, the Irish superstition says, a goose is walking over your grave.

If you have a creepy, shivery feeling without apparent cause it is a sign of bad news or trouble of some kind.

If a person shivers in summer or beside a roaring fire, the Welsh say: "The spirits are searching for your grave."

American Indians believed that ringing in the ear resulted in one of two things. Some one was due to come without his family and must be entertained, or news would be heard. The direction from which the news or person was to come was shown by the ear affected.

"By the pricking of my thumbs Something wicked this way comes."
—Macbeth.

A tinkling in the palm of the hand betokens money coming.

"Make a cross on the foot when it is asleep" and the tingling will cease.

If your feet burn and you have a desire to keep them out from beneath the covers, you will be very angry over a disappointment.

If your corns sting, it is a sign of rain.

A ticklish sensation around the heart that cannot be relieved by scratching is a sign of love.

A jumping sensation of the heart forebodes serious ill fortune.

There is an old saying that every sigh or grain robs the heart of a drop of blood.

Every time you sigh you drive a nail in your coffin.

To sigh a great deal is a sign that you are in love.

If one keeps sighing without reason, he will draw sorrow and sighing to himself.

JACK BREAKS THE ICE.

During my college days I helped, unconsciously, to plan the most astonishing romance I ever heard of in all my life—and that extends over a considerable period of time.

There were six of us happy-go-lucky, charge-it-to-dad sort of fellows. We were sophs when there came to join the freshman ranks a demure little lass. She was as cute as the dickens, but was bashful and consequently unpopular. She was always alone. She didn't mix well with the girls—hardly any of them spoke to her—thus we fellows were out of luck as far as an introduction was concerned.

Well, one day we six decided to popularize little Miss Nelly Wales. The fellows weren't overanxious about the job, but they hated to see her spend her college days hermit style. Ches, Paul, Bob, Les, Jack and I were the six huskies who decided to rush Miss Nelly. The start was the worst part of the whole arrangement; so to make things fair and square we, at my suggestion, counted out to see who was going to break the ice.

The noose fell around poor woman hater Jack's neck. He protested miserably, without avail. So Jack, with our help, called up Miss Nelly and made an engagement with her.

That's the way it began. We were then to take turns escorting Miss Nelly around, but, sorry to say, the rest of us never got our turns. From that time on Jack was a changed man. All I can say is it was a case of love at first date, because two weeks later Jack and Nelly were engaged and when school closed in the spring we received an invitation to the Smith and Wales nuptials.

Can you beat it? L. J.

Opening of

AUTUMN, with its diversity of attractions, both outdoor and indoor, advances swiftly and as usual will find many unprepared for the first chilly day. But those forethoughtful folk who always "dress the part" will find us prepared as never before to supply their wardrobes with new, carefully selected merchandise of unquestionable taste and quality at prices which will compare even favorably with those so frequently quoted by persons who favor price more than quality. In our Fall lines nothing has been done to get down to a price, yet our vast resources and tremendous buying power, plus a most painstaking search and comparison of markets have secured for us all that is possible to obtain in the way of worthy merchandise and really low prices.

The Frocks In this section the miss 14 to 18 or madame 36 to 50 will find in each size an excellent style assortment at widely ranging prices. Glittering sequin robes, imported and mounted in this country, rival in popularity the dinner dresses of rich Spanish and French laces. "Debs" and "subdebs" will find dance frocks of gayest colors so reasonably priced that two may be purchased at the former price of one. For teas and matinees our section of afternoon dresses in youthful styles cannot be excelled. Superb quality materials are created in new and striking style designs, with a decided trend toward higher neck lines. The Mandarin sleeve is an assured fact, and in some of the softly draping silks it enhances the charm of long, slender lines.

Cloth Dresses Their number is legion. Straight line and blouse effects, tunic and panel styles, present such an interesting variety of clever trimming ideas that only a personal inspection will do them justice. Wool jersey, too, comes in admirable styles—close fitting and trim, as only wool jersey can be.

The Gotham

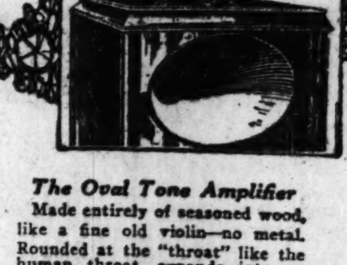
IN KEEPING with our established policy of offering music lovers those things which are admittedly supreme in the world of musical art, The Fair takes singular pride in announcing that Brunswick—phonographs and records—have been added to our line.

We make this announcement after months of investigation, which revealed Brunswick's enviable standing as a musical instrument; its adaptability to playing all makes of records; its wide variety of Cabi and Period designs—exquisitely fini the dependability of the House wick which makes it.

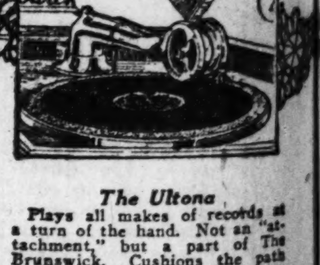
All music lovers are i ear Brunswick Phonographs and The Fair's Phonograph Departme

The Brunswick is pr 65 to $750. Sixteen models from oose. Extended payment plan p ited.

The Exclusive Brunswick Method of Reproduction



The Oval Tone Amplifier
Made entirely of seasoned wood, like a fine old violin—no metal. Rounded at the "throat" like the human throat, expands into an oval like the mouth, and is responsible for the famous Brunswick Tone. Does away with "metallic" sounds.



The Ultona
Plays all makes of records at a turn of the hand. Not an "attachment," but a part of The Brunswick. Cushions the path of the needle by proper suspension. Hence, sweeter tones, a surprising modification of all "surface" noises, and longer lasting records.

Hats The crowning glory of it all—unique in appearance and lovely in shape—creations so charming and chic—small and large picture effects with just the right touch of Spanish influence, are the prominent features of the new modes in Fall millinery. The materials of Lyons and Panne velvet, as well as hatter's plush are the most prominent. Black and colors that shade to brown tones predominate—there are many and varied others. Among the more popular are the fuchsia shades, poppy red and amber. The prices are very moderate.

The Wraps Rich in quality material, rich in style design, rich in fur trimming, rich in name—picture such soft, silky fabrics as Orlando, Marvella, Panvelaine, Gerona, Veedyne, Alonzo and Evora in glistening blacks, clear bright navy blues, misty Sorrento blue and the rich, leafy brown shades that only the finest cloths can show to good advantage. Here, too, one notes the wider sleeves in various designs. Many good makers favor the straight line coat, relying upon clever plaits, stitching and fine fur trimmings for relief from severity. Others, however, show handsome models rather closely fitted to the waist, flaring distinctly below it, even sometimes, in circular form.

The Suits Must be fur trimmed, of course, unless one has new separate furs, and if one is a 14 to 38 there are exceedingly clever box and cutaway effects that can be worn to much advantage. Probably, however, practical business women will desire the longer belted straight line coats and feel that perhaps next year's suit problem is solved now. Tricotine, Panvelaine, Moussyne, Yalama, Duvet de Laine—these are the sought for fabrics. Mole, Nutria and Squirrel collars and cuffs.

The Furs Luxurious—that's the word. None other quite expresses their charm, and you'll agree when you see the wraps and coats of choice Eastern mink, fine Scotch mole, Hudson seal, Persian lamb, Siberian squirrel, Alaska seal and all the lesser kinds of fur. All-enveloping wraps, nifty little three-quarter coats—and for smart looking misses we recommend the appearing sports coats of natural muskrat and raccoon. Their vogue is assured, their prices about half of last year's. Small pieces, too, for early wear with suits and dresses. All favored furs of highest quality.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Tribune, Chicago.

VALUING ONE'S SERVICE.

WE ARE all here for our daily luncheon chats again; Ann, Marion, Dorothy and I. For the first few days after their return Marion and Dorothy could neither think nor talk of anything but these precious holidays. We got back yesterday to our pre-vacation status, however.

Just before we left the table Marion remarked irrelevantly, "How strange it is that so many changes occur, or seem to occur, at home and at the office during one's absence.

"I suppose," she said, "it's because no change really occurs without some tiny forewarning sign which impresses us, consciously or unconsciously, when we're there, so that when the actual motion takes place we are really prepared for it."

"Did something happen at home that you were unprepared for?" Ann asked her.

"No, nothing startling at home this time," Marion answered meditatively. Then after a few moments of silence she said, "But I found several changes at the office. One of them especially interested and surprised me. It's too late to tell you about it now," she said, gathering up her purse and gloves, "but if you'll remind me I'll tell you about it tomorrow."

We didn't have to remind her of the story today, however. She had hardly slipped into her place at the table when she began: "You've never heard me speak of Miss Emery. Somehow or other there never seemed to be anything about her that excited interest or curiosity. She's been with the firm for years; was there when I came. But up to a week ago I don't think there were more than three people in the house who knew her well, and certainly not more than a score who even knew her by name.

"I'm one of the three who knew her pretty well, and it was only by accident that I discovered what a really superior person she is and what a perfect workman.

"I decided to stay one night after everybody else left to make up an intricate report that had been bothering me. I'd kept putting off doing it, because it was such a hard job, until I reached a deadline. The report had to be turned in in the morning. Miss Emery passed my desk on the way out, and as she nodded good-night and asked, 'Not ready to leave yet?' I pointed to the papers on my desk and answered, 'I can't go home tonight until I've cleaned up this mess.'

"My voice and gesture probably seemed more weary and worried than I'd meant them to, for she stopped, walked back a step or two, hesitated, and finally said rather timidily, 'I'd like to help you clear that work up—if I wouldn't be interfering.'

"Ordinarily I wouldn't have taken any one at her word like that, but she seemed so sincere in her wish to help that I found it easier to accept her offer than turn it down.

"She took off her hat and with a few instructions from me started getting my papers into order with a swiftness and ease that astonished me. Her tabulations in the draft of the report she made ready for me to copy were the work of an artist. The whole thing took less than an hour, and alone I'd have struggled over it for three. I never turned in a finer looking piece of work, either.

"I watched her after that and wondered, when I saw some expert bit of work that she'd done, why she had never been picked for one of the big jobs in the house. Here, I thought, was exceptional talent going to waste on a job that any ordinarily intelligent person could handle without much effort. Then I realized suddenly that there was such a thing as being too good for your job—too perfect a workman. If you did your work well, without a hitch, if things ran along too smoothly so that there was never any friction, I reasoned, you were likely to get yourself overlooked in a big institution like ours; especially if you were of a reserved disposition. And that's what happened to Miss Emery. She was so unobtrusive and did her work so completely and perfectly that no one realized she was there.

"Well, I've had to readjust my ideas somewhat since I've come back. It does pay, after all, to be good on your job. Miss Emery was discovered while I was away. Of course it's taken a long time, but I imagine she'd say it was worth it. She's got the best woman's job in the house, and she'll probably hold on to it as long as she wants it.

"Her predecessor left suddenly four weeks ago, and three girls, one after the other, were tried out, and failed. The heads of the firm were about to hire somebody from outside when one of them happened to notice Miss Emery working quietly in her corner. He was suddenly inspired to sound her out. He knew she had been there a long time and wondered why none of them had thought of her before. After he'd talked to her a few minutes he walked straight into the president's office, one of the girls told me, with a grin from ear to ear. In a few minutes Miss Emery was summoned, and the next day she took over the new work."

It was an interesting story, I thought. But it seemed to me Miss Emery waited so long for recognition not because, as Marion said, she was too good for her job, but because she had failed to place a full valuation on her services. She was too humble and self-effacing. The business world is one of strong competition, and to succeed you've got to assert yourself enough so that your talents and accomplishments will be noticed and appreciated.

Dry Cleaning at Home

BY ALMA HARDING.

ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF SPOT REMOVERS.

This is the twentieth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

SUGAR—Usually tepid water is sufficient without the addition of soap.

Sulphuric Acid.

No matter how dilute the acid, if it is splashed on cotton and allowed to dry, it makes a hole. If such an accident occurs, apply dilute ammonia liberally at once. Wool and silk resist better, and if the garment be put in water at once, most of the damage is avoided. Most colors are changed if the acid dries in, but if it is washed at once and ammonia applied afterward, the colors will probably be restored. When it is feared that ammonia will ruin the color if applied directly, wring out a cloth in ammonia and hold just above the spot, and the fumes will rapidly neutralize the sulphuric acid.

Table Tops.

When they have become spotted with white stains they can usually be restored if the stains are slightly smeared with oil containing a very little turpentine. Then rub hard with a soft flannel.

Tallow.

Scrape off all that is possible, and if the tallow is old, soften with a little castor oil. Then use carbon tetrachloride.

Tannin.

Sponge repeatedly with water and alcohol, then treat with eau de Javelle and wash well.

Tar.

Usually a combination of solvents works best for removing tar. Carbon tetrachloride will do it if the stains are not too old, otherwise brush first with chloroform and then use the carbon tetrachloride. Sometimes ether will take them out when all else fails. On silk it is often necessary to soften the stain with fresh oil. Work it in well, but do not injure the threads or separate the fiber. A good way to clean it is to stretch the spot over a Mason jar. When it comes time to clean, run a ring of pure solvent around the outline made by the top of the jar and work in toward the center, letting the dirty solvent drop in the bottle.

Tartaric Acid.

This is for the same uses as citric acid, but is stronger and apt to be less injurious to fragile colors.

Tea.

Usually boiling water poured from a height on the stain will remove it. If it proves obstinate after being dipped in eau de Javelle water, rub in gylcerin as under the directions for removing chocolate stains.

Temperature.

The ordinary person has little idea of the required temperature for the washing of blankets, the dyeing of silk, etc. It is better to experiment with a thermometer at the different grades—70 degrees for albumen stains; never over 90 degrees for woolens, silk gloves, silk stockings, etc.; 120 degrees for washing white cottons or bleaching ivory. You will be surprised to see how cool 90 degree water is and will think it is too cool for the blankets. If you haven't a bath thermometer, it won't hurt to use the ordinary kind.

Tobacco.

Use hot water and soap on cottons, with a little ammonia in the water. On wool or silk use permanganate of potassium if white, or the colors are fast to these bleaches. First, however, try the direction for cottons.

Tomato Stains.

This stain will usually come out of cottons with washing, but bleach it out of white silk with permanganate of potassium.

Train Oil.

Use carbon tetrachloride.

Tussah Silk.

This silk cannot be dry cleaned. It must be washed to be satisfactory.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Problem of Conduct.

"Dead Miss Blake: When a girl is introduced to a fellow and after a short conversation leaves, what should she say in reply, if he says 'Glad to make your acquaintance,' or something in that order? If he does not say anythig should the girl say it first?

"A READER."

Just bow and say "Thank you." The girl makes no remark of like nature.

Don't Telephone Boys.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 16 years old and I am in love with a young man two years my senior. I have called him up several times, but it does not seem to do much good.

"Please advise me what to do in regard to this young man, as I love him dearly.

"HEARTBROKEN AND WAITING."

Now, dear young 16, if you will take a kindly word of advice from me you will not call young men up. Let them do the calling. There's a fine instinct in every desirable young man which is incensed when a girl begins phoning him and running after him. You'll be a much more popular young lady if you don't do it, dear.

She's Only 17.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and love a fellow of 20 who lives in the same house as I. I am sure he likes me very much, but my parents object on the basis that we are entirely too young. What would you advise?

"ANXIOUS."

You are pretty young, Anxious, aren't you now? That is, for serious and steady attention. Of course, you could have him for a nice boy friend and not give him all the attention you may have to spend on the other sex. And don't demand all his attention for you, either. If the feeling is absolutely genuine it will survive this temporary lapse.

"Lots of Good Fish."

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it true that when your girl goes away for two weeks that you lose her? My friend went away, and since she came back she does not seem to care for me any more. I am asking you whether I should drop her or try and get her back.

JOHN."

Kind of sad, John, when a poor chap is handicapped because he can't lock the girl up or check her away somewhere to be called for only when he does the calling. But that's just one of the little disappointments of life, John, which we manage to survive and often substitute with a more pleasant item.

Find Pastures New.

"Dear Miss Blake: There are two young ladies in my little love affair. I adore one but cannot make her love me. The other seems to worship me, but I cannot offer her my love. What would you do in such a case?

"TANGLED."

Untangle myself by branching out into brand new pastures where I'd find one girl I could love and who would return me the compliment.

Is She in Love?

"Dear Miss Blake: Is there any way of knowing when one is in love? I have been going with a young man since July and when he puts his arm around me, I feel a comfortable glow in the region where the heart is supposed to be. He often speaks of love indirectly. But he understands I do not like hugging and kissing.

"HILMER."

Your case indicates one of the early symptoms. When a young lady begins analyzing the heart location, which before gave no indication of its presence, then she is threatened with an attack, that's sure. I guess you suspect it, don't you? Just a word of warning—don't allow the huggings and kissings until you have heard very direct remarks about love as it applies to him and you.

Joe, who is a patient in the hospital, likes coffee with his breakfast, but has been forbidden it by the doctor in charge. However, the attendant nurses sometimes give him a little coffee.

The other morning his nurse refused him, and he cried so loud that the head nurse of the floor came in his room to see what was the trouble. Joe's nurse explained the situation, and the head nurse told him that hereafter he positively could not have any more coffee.

Joe stopped crying and looked up at her, and said: "Say, when are you going on your vacation?"

Tabloid Book Review

By Fanny Butcher.

The best sellers at a leading Chicago book store last week were:

FICTION.

"Main Street" [Harcourt], by Sinclair Lewis.
"Master of Men" [Lippincott], by Hall Caine.
"Scaramouche" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Rafael Sabatini.
"Alice Adams" [Doubleday], by Booth Tarkington.
"Thirteen Travelers" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.
"Her Father's Daughter" [Doubleday], by Gene Stratton Porter.

NONFICTION.

"Journal of the Great War" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Charles G. Dawes.
"Hail, Columbia!" [Harper's], by W. L. George.
"Mirrors of Downing Street" [Putnam's], Anonymous.

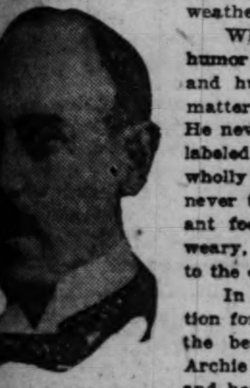
The six best circulators at the public library were:
"Main Street" [Harcourt], Sinclair Lewis.
"The Brimming Cup" [Harcourt], Dorothy Canfield.
"Galusha the Magnificent" [Appleton], Joseph C. Lincoln.
"Queen Victoria" [Harcourt], Lytton Strachey.
"Mystic Isles of the South Seas" [Century], Frederick O'Brien.
"Outline of History" [Macmillan], H. G. Wells.

A Pleasant Man—Never Dull.

"THE Indiscretions of Archie" is P. G. Wodehouse's latest contribution to the joy of life. There are those who think Mr. Wodehouse unimportant, fragile, frothy. Myself, I think he deserves a special kind of laurel wreath, nothing so permanent and waxy as those adorning the brows of the literary gods of the mountain, but a well tailored, snappy headdress warranted to hold its shape in rough weather.



P. G. WODEHOUSE.

When others go down under a heavy sea of humor P. G. Wodehouse jauntily stands by the rail and hurls peppy conversation at the waves. No matter how humorous he tries to be, he never is dull. He never forces a point. His jokes are all new and labeled P. G. W. His plots are always ingenious, wholly impossible, and charming. His sentiment is never tense. His sentimentalists are always pleasant fools. His books are always a rest for the weary, a relaxation for the oppressed, and a solace to the casualties from too literary literature.

In a word, of all the writers of light conversation for the lightweight minded P. G. Wodehouse is the best, and his latest—"The Indiscretions of Archie"—is as good as he has ever done. Personally and heartily recommended by the committee on reducing morbidity among readers.

Mildly Heckling Mr. Hecht.

"Erik Dorn" is the title of a long awaited novel by our fellow citizen, Ben Hecht. Unless I am much mistaken, it is going to cause a tempest of criticism. It is going to have its acolytes who will worship with all of the swinging of censers. And it is going to have its atheists who will grab you with a [illegible] hand and argue with you while you miss the soup if not the savory.

A fate more propitious than that no first novel could ask.

Every one is going to agree that it has spots of vividness, of brilliance that almost dazzles. Every one is also going to agree that its hero grows, that the Erik Dorn of the last page is the Erik Dorn of the first page plus years of experience. That is a quality which is rare in a first novel. Most writers' maiden attempts at a novel are merely photographic reproductions of incidents which the author foists upon his characters. The characters themselves are [illegible].

I should say that Erik Dorn's mental and spiritual development, logical as Mr. Hecht has made it, is complete assurance that this author is really an author and not just a pusher of a pen across paper.

So much every one will agree upon. The schism will come when individual talents are discussed, when methods are arraigned and tried. His followers will say that he has done something new in novel writing, that he has applied the imagist method to prose fiction. The other camp will say that he has jazzed up James Joyce and that the result is a hodge-podge of images, sometimes extraordinarily apt, but often merely dazzling.

His friends will say that sometimes he drops from the heights of imagery and writes the sort of prose that anybody might write, that it is good writing but that it is not brilliant. His antagonists will say that when he lapses from his fetishes, when he writes simple, straightforward prose, with the subjects and the predicates in the sentences and not floating in the unwritten atmosphere, he writes brilliantly and beautifully. They will also say that his bizarre effects are his worst, that his simple panoramas of life as it moves across Erik Dorn's horizon are beautiful, that only when Erik Dorn insists upon translating them into exotic images does the author lose his power. After you have read the book you will understand that there must be these two opposing armies of readers.

Erik Dorn is the story of a Chicago newspaper man, much like Mr. Hecht himself. Some one once said that any first novel is three-fourths autobiographical. This might easily be true of Erik Dorn. Probably Mr. Hecht has many of his hero's psychological reactions to life. But, strangely in a first novel, he has made of his hero the sort of weak master that an absolute stranger might have made of him. Erik Dorn is not like the heroes of most of the young English novels. He is not, in his own eyes, an absolute monarch. One reviewer dislikes the dragging in of vulgarities. Other reviewers will consider those vulgarities a sign of the strength of the realism. The same reviewer—meaning this Tabloid person—thinks that Mr. Hecht's picture of old Isaac Dorn with his "memories that had lost the bloom of words" and the disintegration of the love of Erik Dorn and Rachel against the background of a little New England windswept village are the essence of simple effectiveness, but that the gaudy lovemakings of the mad Mathilde and the whirrings of the revolution in Germany are ineffective. She also thinks that when Mr. Hecht is simplest he is best.

The Lore of the Game.

Mrs. Albert C. Spalding has presented to the New York public library the entire collection of the literature and the history of baseball which her husband gathered throughout his life. At the beginning of his interest in the sport Mr. Spalding began collecting books, photographs, newspaper clippings, and everything obtainable concerning the national game. To his printed material he added correspondence, official records, reports of sessions of organizations, and manuscript memories of distinguished players. Some years ago he bought the collection of Chadwick, known as the father of baseball, which contained some of an earlier date than his own. The entire collection is said to be the most complete on the subject. After Mr. Spalding's death in 1915 various offers were made to Mrs. Spalding, but she refused to sell what seemed to her a memorial to her husband's keen interest in his favorite sport.

A Columnist "Almost Boisterously Funny."

"Carter" is a collection of short stories by Don Marquis whose Hermione and Archie, the trained cockroach, are personal friends of half the newspaper reading public of New York and whose "The Old Soak" was almost boisterously funny. These stories, however, are mostly serious, some of them extremely so. There is a strange coincidence in the last thing in the book, a one act play called "Words and Thoughts." It was written in 1911, Mr. Marquis says in his preface, and has been offered to every theatrical manager in America. "I still believe in it as a thing that could be acted with effect, and I am determined to get it read, even if I cannot get it produced. The fact that it has been going the rounds of theatrical managers for ten years is no indication that it has ever been read."

The strange coincidence is this:

Alice Gerstenberg has written and has had acted on amateur stages and in vaudeville on the biggest circuits a play called "Overtones" which is built on exactly the same idea as "Words and Thoughts." I don't know when "Overtones" was written, but it has been well known for at least five years.

Antidoting Ibanez.

"A Son of the Hidalgos," by Ricardo Leon, translated by Catalina Paez (who is the daughter of the first president of Venisuela) is offered by those who know Spanish literature as an antidote to the overfeeding of the world with novels of Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

They say that M. Leon is just as Spanish as the Vicente and not so obvious. This is the story of the son of a gentleman of old Spain, a lonely, motherless child who, when he grew older, ran away from the dreamy little village to Madrid. There he married a Socialist and joined a Bohemia whose dissipations ruined his health. Shaken, like an old man, with the death of his wife and his [illegible], broken in spirit, he went back to his native village to find peace.

W. L. George is coming back to America next winter. His tragic memories of the death of that lovely, vivid being, Russet, his wife, are softened by the abundant sincerity with which his American friends and acquaintances suffered with him, and he is coming back.

While he was in America last year he received 600 columns' worth of publicity in American newspapers, an amount, I should hazard, comparable to the space accorded the battle of the Marne. No wonder he says, "Hail, Columbia," and not farewell.

MISS EMILY TAFT.
[Florence Hendershot Photo.]
Miss Taft, who is the daughter of Lorado Taft, the Chicago sculptor, comes to the Playhouse tomorrow night as one of the Provincetown players who will give Chicago its first view of Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones." She appears also in "Suppressed Desires," a short comedy which precedes the performance of the O'Neill play.

Civic Music Is 100 Per Cent as Artistic Force

By Edward Moore

THE annual report of the Civic Music association, just issued, makes interesting reading for those who have the cause of music at heart. For the others, those who take a merely academic interest in the matter, it is a fairly astonishing record of a great deal accomplished without great support.

Herbert E. Hyde is the secretary, an able executive, an enthusiastic supporter of the association's doctrine, which would seem to be to give the under dog a chance and see if good music will not result.

Probably the most sensational action the association ever took was to organize the Civic orchestra of Chicago. It was put together two years ago. A group of eighty or ninety young players was put under the direction of three conductors, Frederick Stock, who is the conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra; Eric DeLamarter, assistant conductor, and George Dasch of the viola section of the same organization.

Soon the new orchestra bloomed into public concerts, and the results astonished every one who heard them. It did things in the way of execution, fine tone, and interpretation that seemed fairly incredible.

Yet, after two years of accomplishment, there is still a wide misapprehension about this body. Many people believe it to be a students' orchestra, which it is not at all. Instead of being a means of teaching young people how to play, it is a means for teaching young artists how to play together. The phrase is Mr. Hyde's, and it is an accurate one.

Given a young artist with the ability to play first and the routine of orchestral playing afterwards, and you have an eagerly sought subject for a position in a symphony orchestra. The first season of the Civic orchestra of Chicago, after less than six months of existence, four of its members were graduated into the symphony orchestras of Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Cleveland, and this city. The second season sent away three, all to Cleve-

A Ray of Hope for the Playgoer's Pocketbook

By Sheppard Butler.

WHAT about the high cost of playgoing? One Chicago theater, the Olympic, will reduce the price of its best seats by more than a dollar tonight, charging you $1.65 for the privilege of seeing "The Broken Wing," instead of $2.75, the rate which prevailed last week. It's a hopeful item of news, but what does it mean? Well, the doctors disagree—as, indeed, they have been disagreeing these many months in prescribing for the not entirely tranquil affairs of the theater.

In some quarters it is believed that the Olympic's announcement, made with the approval of A. L. Erlanger and Martin Beck, important overlords of the amusement world, is the opening gun of a price-cutting war that will enliven things considerably hereabouts and bring welcome relief to the beleaguered pocketbook. Other authorities will tell you, with much emphasis and some irritation, that no such thing is possible. The case of "The Broken Wing," they say, is an isolated one—that of a play with no expensive stars in its cast—and not an example to be followed by the majority. Prices, it is submitted, already have fallen somewhat below their wartime peak; the theaters cannot operate at still lower rates and live.

We can only wait and hope for the best, being thankful meanwhile for such crumbs of comfort as are vouchsafed. During the summer assurances were given frequently that the new theatrical year would bring a substantial downward revision of amusement costs, with $2.50 the standard at most of the better playhouses. These promises have been only partially fulfilled. A survey of the fourteen standard theaters, all of them in operation last week, found them grouped as follows in the matter of price, the figures in each case being those for the best main floor seats, with war tax included:

MISS PHYLLIS TILLMAN.
in "The Champion" at the Cort.
[Bloom Photo.]

One at $3.85—The Colonial.

Six at $3.30—The Apollo, Central, Cohan's Grand, Great Northern, Illinois, and Studebaker.

Seven at $2.75—The Blackstone, Cort, Garrick, Olympic, Playhouse, Powers', and Princess.

In this list it is interesting to note that two thoroughly established successes—"Lightnin'" at the Blackstone and "The Gold Diggers" at Powers'—are being offered at the lowest rates. Both had enormous popularity and long runs in New York, and might presumably have commanded top prices here.

The whole thing, of course, is complicated by matters little known to the general public—the intricacies of deals with ticket scalpers and "authorized agents," and the half rate plan, whereby some theaters sell two seats at the price of one to members of organizations or employés of large industrial concerns. As an attaché of the Olympic put it yesterday: "It's just a case of some doing it one way and some another. The —— will cut its prices in half if you can make up a theater party. We are offering our reduction to the general public."

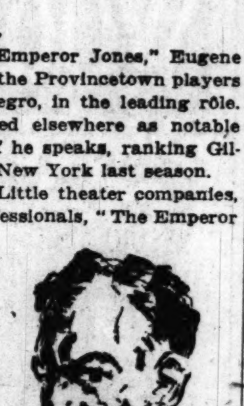
O'Neill, Gilpin, and the Provincetown Players.

To the Playhouse tomorrow night comes "The Emperor Jones," Eugene O'Neill's strange fantasy of the West Indies, acted by the Provincetown players from down Cape Cod way, with Charles Gilpin, a Negro, in the leading rôle. The play and Gilpin's acting of it have been hailed elsewhere as notable achievements, one critic, who usually knows whereof he speaks, ranking Gilpin's performance as the best piece of acting seen in New York last season.

Of the plays brought to light by the guilds, the Little theater companies, and the other organizations of amateurs and semi-professionals, "The Emperor Jones," undoubtedly has made the deepest impression in recent years. O'Neill, its author, is the son of James O'Neill, who used to wander up and down the country playing "The Count of Monte Cristo." In his early years he shipped as a sailor on various voyages to South America and South Africa, played in vaudeville with his father, and settled down to a brief career as a newspaper reporter. In 1914 the Provincetown players were holding forth in a studio at the water's edge in Provincetown, Mass., with a sea view, seen through an open door at the back of the stage, as the background of their performances. An early play of O'Neill's was one of the first they presented, and he has been identified with the organization ever since. His work is not new to Chicago—Richard Bennett brought his "Beyond the Horizon" to the Princess last fall—but "The Emperor Jones" will be the Provincetown company's first venture in these parts.



EUGENE O'NEILL,
from a sketch by Ivan Opffer.

Gilpin, the actor, used to play at Robert Mott's old Pekin theater in South State street, a Negro institution of some renown, where they staged a different show each week. Not long ago he had a part in Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln." When that play closed he turned to the sort of thing he has frequently fallen back upon during his variegated career, and got a job running an elevator. This was his occupation when the Provincetown players found him and gave him the chance of a lifetime.

News Notes of the Theaters.

Sarah Bernhardt, the indomitable, is again to visit America. No announcement to this effect comes from Paris, but the tidings may be accepted as authentic, for they have the authority of Edward J. Sullivan, formerly manager of the Studebaker in Chicago, and now in charge of a playhouse in St. Louis. He traveled with Mme. Bernhardt on all her American tours during a period of five years beginning in 1905, and has received from her a cablegram asking him to take charge of her affairs in the United States this season. Nothing has been made known as to the nature of her employment here, but it appears likely that it will be in the varieties.

It all seems rather a pity. The days of high glamour, when Bernhardt was "the world's greatest actress," are gone. She is 76 years old now, and to

New Plays Galore Scheduled for the Advancing Season

The New York Times.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Mr. Belasco, mindful of the temper and the temperature of the times, is cannily withholding his new productions until later in the season, and in the interim is devoting himself to revivals. Thus, not only is "The Easiest Way" holding the boards at the Lyceum, but a resuscitation of "The Return of Peter Grimm"—with Mr. Warfield of course—will open at the Belasco ten days hence.

"The Easiest Way" will continue for eight weeks at the Lyceum, which means that the house will be free for a new production on about Nov. 1. The wise ones believe that it will be "Kiki," with Miss Lenore Ulric, that will come to the Lyceum, since Mr. Belasco is again devoting himself to that piece at present. Mr. Warfield will remain for ten weeks at the Belasco, which means that that theater would again be available during New Year's week.

Then—still on the word of the wiseacres—Mr. Belasco will produce Guitry's "The Grand Duke" at that theater, with Lionel Atwill as its star and Miss Ruth Shepley as leading woman. In the meantime, with Mr. Erlanger as his assistant, Mr. Belasco will present "The Wandering Jew" at the Knickerbocker on Oct. 24.

"Sonny Boy," "The Poppy God," "The Mimic World," and "Nobody's Money" gave up the struggle tonight, and others are trembling on the brink. But still more are on the way. During the week beyond this, for example, comes "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" to the Ritz; "The Man in the Making" to the Hudson, Otis Skinner in Blood and Sand" to the Empire, David Warfield in "The Return of Peter Grimm" to the Belasco, and "The Spring" to the Princess (leased for the year by the Provincetowners). And then, lest you think that the producing managers are not looking out for your interests,

DODO, AGED 54, DE SENECTUTE AND OTHER DISABILITIES—BUT STILL GAY

DODO WONDERS——, by E. F. Benson, author of "Dodo" (1893), and "Dodo the Second" (1914): Small octavo, pp. 273. George H. Doran Co., New York.

MR. BENSON, aged 54 now, again brings Dodo on the scene, and she, too, is 54. Eight and twenty years ago the world first encountered her. She dazzled then. She smoked cigarets. She still does. She shocked then. She shocks no more, for the world has grown up to her in sophistication. Her intimate, Edith Arbuthnot, now smokes a pipe—by the doctor's orders.

In 1893 "Dodo" was a literary succès de scandale, partly, perhaps, because it was the work of a son of the archbishop of Canterbury. In 1914 came "Dodo the Second," called in this country "Dodo's Daughter." And now the trilogy is rounded out with "Dodo Wonders."

It is a clever, thoughtful, salubrious book—parts of it almost in the strain of Thackerayan social satire.

Dodo herself remains inconsequent, droll, vital, kind. She lights her cigaret in line one, chapter one, and she is never beyond reach of another. She has not a gray hair in her head.

It is wartime. Dodo is skittish, curious, and, as before, ever "a character." Like Frou-Frou, "frivolous to the end." But pensive a little sometimes, because it is wartime.

Strange man, Mr. Benson! Archæologist, athlete, of a great connection, deft in drama ("Aunt Jeannie," for Mrs. Campbell, 1902, was a good play), knowing everybody and many things, he might have done big things. Well, maybe he has. He has diverted mankind. Perhaps he thinks his brother, the fiery Roman monsignor, dead too soon, and his father, the innocuous archbishop, and his other brother, the scholastic A. C., master of Magdalen, have done the family's share toward saving mankind along serious lines.

So he declines to be serious, but he does not palter. Once when a reporter asked him what he thought of America he replied: "Well, if that isn't the silliest question I ever heard in my life!"

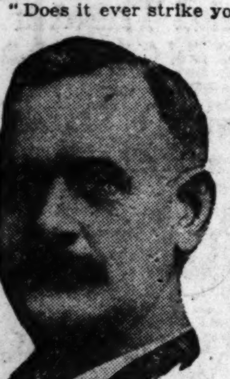
The original Dodo, he once said, is not Mrs. Asquith (Margot Tennant), adding that he never met that lady until his first Dodo book was half finished.

But the world would not believe him.

Dodo on Old Age.

Dodo speaks:

"Does it ever strike you that we are growing up? Slowly, but surely, darling, we are growing up. I'm 55; at least, I'm really only 54, but I add one year to my age instead of taking off two, like most people, so that when the next birthday comes, I'm already used to being it, if you follow me, and so there's no shock."



E. F. BENSON.

"You're not afraid of dying?" asked Edith incredulously.

"Good gracious, no. I'm never afraid of certainties; I'm only afraid of contingencies like missing a train. What I am afraid of in getting old is continuing to feel hopelessly young. . . . We're both Victorians, Edith, and all sorts of people have reigned since then. But I don't feel Victorian. I like the fox trot, and going in an aeroplane, and modern pictures which look equally delicious upside down, and modern poetry which doesn't scan or rhyme or mean anything, and sitting up all night. And yet all the time I'm a grandmother, and even that doesn't make any impression on me."

"Do you remember my spectacles? That was a serious expedition in search of middle age, but it did no good. I always forgot where they were, and sat down on them with faint, fatal crunches."

"I am lost without spectacles," said Edith.

"But I'm not; it was my spectacles that were always lost."

"As long as anybody creates she is not old. Stretching out: that's what youth means."

"But my dear, what pitfalls there are for us to avoid, if we are to steer clear of being terrible, grizzly kittens."

"Such as?" asked Edith.

"The most obvious is one so many sprightly old things like us fall into, namely, that of attaching some young man to their hoary old selves. There's nothing that makes a woman look so old as to drag about some doped boy, and there's nothing that actually ages her so quickly. It is so easy to make a boy think you are marvelous; it's such a cheap success, like spending the season at some second rate watering place."

Of "Lulls Before Storms."

"Darling, there has been a lull before the storm ever since I can remember, but the storm never breaks. I wonder if the millennium has really come years ago; and we haven't noticed it. How dreadful for the millennium to be a complete fiasco!"

"Suppressed laughter is as dangerous as suppressed measles when you get on in life. There's another thing about your Germans. I thought of it while I was dressing. They only laugh at German jokes."

"O, Jack, it is silly to go to London in June," she said. "And yet it doesn't do to stay much in the country, unless you have a lot of people about who make you forget you are in the country at all."

Dodo on Snobs.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets, but I rather like having both. Most people are snobs, Jack though they won't say so."

". . . in fact, that's the best definition of snob. Snobs want to show other people how nicely they are getting on. . . . The snob's main object is not actually having the king or pope or the archbishop of Canterbury for dinner; what he cares about is that other people should know that he has done so. Snobbishness isn't running after the great ones of the earth, but letting the little ones know you have caught the great ones. . . . We all want to associate with our superiors in any line. It is more fun having notable people about than nonentities. When it comes to friends it is a different thing, and I would throw over the whole Almanack of Gotha for the sake of a friend——"

Dodo on the Spice of Life.

"You've changed, Grantie, because you've gone on doing the same sort of thing for so long. Nothing has hap-

The Dead Master, and the Deathless Charm

MRS. FARRELL, by William Dean Howells; with an introduction by his daughter, Mildred Howells: Octavo, pp. ix+266. Harper & Brothers, New York.

By Eye Witness

From some unpublished notes of Mr. Howells' talk:

He was wont to call his novels "My little cycloramas," and he would plaintively lament the fact that, "as in the battle cycloramas, there is a hopeless dividing line where the real ground and real grass ends and imitation ground and imitation grass begins."

To a frequent and stupid question he would reply: "I do not know what quality it is makes a novel universally pleasing. If I did I should set about writing it forthwith." More or less apropos he would add, "It is the personal quality in an author which wearies you at last—as it won you at first."

But in the foregoing connection, although in another direction, he often emphasized the following principle, which was fundamental with him: "The novelist will find readers subtly privy to what may seem to him his most elusive meaning. This is his reward after the first zest of recognition is gone. If he puts into his book anything especially intimate, especially peculiar to himself, he will find that is the one thing universal."

Concerning the romanticist he was, by turn withering and whimsical, but more often whimsical. He defined him thus: "He believes he can, by adding something to nature, embellish her; by taking something away, refine her." This was his conception of the novel as distinguished from the romance: "An earnest attempt to depict life exactly as it is—while the romance takes for its use types rather than character."

The larger popularity of the romanticists he sternly attributed to the fact that by far the larger number of people are children, preferring lies to truths, and he would add in half apology, "You see, I take the novel rather seriously."

He did, indeed. He said it was "the unrivaled literary form," and he would add, with his soft drollery, "I would rather read my own novels than read no novels at all."

Asked for the prime test of a novel, he said: "With me truth is the prime test. If it have not truth, it is not for me. I never read any novels that were all truth except Tolstoi's. If the novel cannot succeed in painting life truly, no good can come of it."

But he was never cruel concerning the harmless ephemeral novel that is read by thousands for a day and in a day forgot. There was an echo of Ingersoll's ingratiating melody in what he once said of such tales: "They filled a passing want or touched with artless potency a chord of real feeling."

"In cities," he often said, "people do not read books, but read about them."

He was ever modest but never theatrically humble. "The novelist," he said, "must endeavor to give the average view of life. I cannot do it, for I was bred in a false schol whose trammels I cannot throw off."

Of "aims," and such like portentous matters, he would quietly remark: "The novelist would better not aim to please. He would better not aim to instruct. If he reflects truth he will succeed in doing both." In a graver tone he would say: "There has been no cause vital to the happiness of the human race which has been unfriended of the novel."

About his ways of work he was never self-conscious and he would willingly communicate such secrets as were communicable. Thus: "You never master your art as a whole. I used to think when I was a young writer that when once I struck my gait I should strike it for good and all. But that has not been so. I find I have to strike my gait with each new story. Upon each one I find myself beginning again as a 'prentice hand."

IN turning the leaves of the early novel by Mr. Howells that more than a year after his death now for the first time is given book form, the obvious—perhaps the inevitable—thing to be said is that the hours thus spent are like the hours we sometimes give to bundles of old letters from some dear and understanding companion of vanished days.

This man was like that.

For more than half a century he uttered himself with singular intimacy, and with a courtly tenderness, to a public that was both choice and large. He was so good a man, so true a craftsman, so exquisite an artist, that he spoke to the world as more than a teller of tales. His inherent qualities, which were noble and endearing, and his method, which in part he originated and which he brought to lovely perfection, combined to make him a unique figure in the annals of American letters.

What he was he made his books, and doing that he became as wise, as lovable in print as he was in less conspicuous utterances of himself. He was and he continues to be a revealer because he was true. He was and he remains a solace—because he was true.

W. D. HOWELLS.
[At Eighty.]

A Crusader Without Banners.

The new story—for to all save those who were reading the Atlantic Monthly in 1875, when "Mrs. Farrell" appeared as a serial, it will be new—will neither diminish nor increase his solid fame. It will none the less provide a genuinely interesting and pleasing specimen of his workmanship while it still was in far from the 'prentice stages, but in the experimental.

It should never be forgotten that Mr. Howells had much to overcome. He was a crusader, although a genial one. He had to experiment, though he never compromised. His first novel, "Their Wedding Journey" (1871), was emphatically an experiment. As such, as a thing peculiarly fresh, winsome, and veracious, it was by some unrecognized, by some laughed at. Today it is a classic. In 1873 came "A Chance Acquaintance"; in 1874 "A Foregone Conclusion"; in 1875 the serial publication of "Mrs. Farrell."

Mr. Howells was then 38 years old. He was in the fourth year of his editorship of the Atlantic (1872-'81). "The Rise of Silas Lapham," perhaps his masterpiece, lay ten years in the future. "Venetian Life," with all of cultural growth it implied, was nine years behind him. And he had been thirteen years married, a fact needing to be recorded in a consideration of his earlier period of novel writing.

Such are the biographical memorabilia helpful in enjoying this new-old book as a piece of craftsmanship. To a period nearly half a century gone does it belong, and yet in no constricted or tawdry sense does it "date"—any more than does, in that sense, Jane Austen date. The touch is soft, a little wistful, but sure. Such experimentation as some may discern is experimentation in material, not in the presentation of material. Howells' book of 1875 is fragrant and fresh and its style is of delicious and abiding purity because it is a true book—and because his method was a true method. It comes to us, therefore, not solely as a fine specimen of his work, but as a full vindication of his method. It does not drearily or dustily "date."

That is the vindication.

That is the test of masterpieces—of classics, so-called. They are not good, because they are old; they are old because they are good. An enduring masterpiece is not a superstition. It is the most vital, vivacious fact in human annals.

The Howells Touch.

The summertime tragi-comedy about Rosabel Farrell, widow, aged 24, is full of Howellsisms—those fleeting, pregnant, bewitching touches in the bestowal of which he was incomparable in his time and country—those things that would identify him in a wilderness of books, those things upon which the mind loves to linger in soft self-communion almost audible.

We have the landscape of the New England hill country, not in meticulous description but in brief waftings of notation of the things that make it unforgettable—after Howells has done the remembering for us. They float along these pages like down along the highway. This one is wonderful:

"Many houses in the region stand empty, absently glaring on the passer with their cold windows, as if striving in vain to recall the households long since gone West, to whom they were once homes."

And this:

"The old stone walls straggle and fall down even along the roadside; in the privacy of the wood lots and berry pastures they abandon themselves to reckless dilapidation."

Who that has fared into that region has not seen just that, but who save Howells ever so caught the forlorn humor of the sight? It is what I like to call his unflagging winsomeness, his demure witchery.

The ancients of that countryside:

". . . It is certain they often evince an aptness to open the mouth and stand agape at unusual encounters, which one cannot well dissociate from ideas of a complete mental repose. If they have no thoughts they have not the irrelevance and superfluity of words. . . . I have seen two of them, old neighbors, meet after an absence, and, when they had hornily rattled their callous palms together, stand staring at each other, their dry, serrated lips falling apart, their jaws mutely working up and down, their pale blue eyes vacantly winking, and their weather beaten faces as wholly discharged of expression as the gable ends of two barns confronting each other from opposite sides of the road."

And the summer boarders—tiny etchings, some unnamed, all individualized, all alive. There is Mrs. Gilbert, voluble, bright, curious, fond, an invalid, but—"disposed to celebrate the charm of a headache that always went off with the going down of the sun."

Husbands, up from Boston for Sunday, "and after breakfast each husband took by the hand the child or two with which his wife had scantly provided him"—and so on. It is that "scantly provided" that is the treasure.

One of the married ladies who had no children painted. "She painted cat-tail rushes, generally; not very like, and yet plainly recognizable."

And their landlord (in name only, for his wife was the manager), Nehemiah

The Theaters

the present generation of playgoers she is a tradition; not the brilliant reality of the past. A few of us will render her the old homage, saddened perhaps by the inevitable decline of her powers. A few will be curious to see the woman who was for so long the toast of France. But will the theaters be crowded to receive her? Or will it be like that pathetic visit not so long ago of Lily Langtry, playing an inane vaudeville skit to audiences that did not care and to most of whom the name of the Jersey Lily meant precisely nothing?

Shubert vaudeville, promised for many moons, will become a reality on Monday, Sept. 26, when, in Chicago, the Apollo theater will be dedicated to the new régime. In New York the venture will be launched a week earlier, at the Forty-fourth Street theater, and on the 26th the Winter Garden also will become a temple of the varieties.

Simultaneously with the New York opening theaters in Boston, Cleveland, and Detroit will get under way. Similar groups will be opened on each succeeding Monday until the entire new circuit is in active operation, including theaters in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Washington, Newark, N. J.; Dayton, O.; Springfield, Mass.; Louisville, St. Louis, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Toledo, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Providence, Toronto, and Montreal.

Each program sent over the new circuit will include an established dramatic success condensed from hours into minutes and presented whenever possible by the original cast. The same treatment is being accorded musical productions, which will bring the vaudeville bills to a close. The various "acts" will be grouped into units, each unit comprising a complete bill which will be held intact until the entire circuit has been covered.

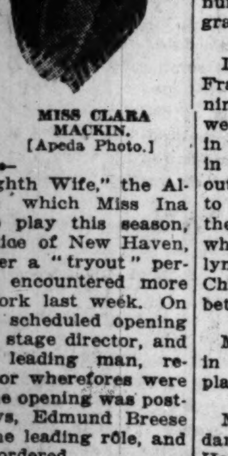
MISS RUTH ETTING at the Marigold. [Atwell Photo.]

The Policemen's Benevolent association got under way last week with plans for its annual benefit performances, to be given at the Auditorium, Oct. 9 to 29. The object of the undertaking is to obtain funds for carrying $2,000 insurance for each member of the department. Ernie Young is in charge of the entertainment this year, and will present a revised and elaborated version of the mannerly revue now being performed under his auspices at the Marigold garden.

"Three Live Ghosts" faded from our ken last night and, for the time being, the Central theater will be untenanted. There was good acting in the piece, but it did not have the drawing power requisite to lure crowds to the somewhat out of the way playhouse in Van Buren street.

Norman-Bel Geddes, known well to opera goers of this neighborhood for his massive and original settings of Montemezzi's "La Nave" and Felix Borowski's "Boudour" when they were staged two years ago by the Chicago opera, is the originator of a new mise-en-scène for the Wilson-Hopper restoration of "Erminie," due next week at the Illinois. Norman-Bel Geddes is [or are] in reality two persons—Norman Geddes and Bel, his wife.

The Victoria theater, on the north side, opens its regular season next week with the installation of a resident stock company, an institution which seems to have regained a good deal of its old time favor. This week, as a preliminary attraction, the Victoria will have the musical comedy "Bringing Up Father in Wall Street."



MISS CLARA MACKIN. [Apeda Photo.]

Miss Clara Mackin, a Chicago girl, will join the cast of "Toto" at the Studebaker tonight, assuming the rôle formerly played by Miss Nellie Burt, who in turn replaces Miss Lenore Phelps as the daughter of the play's central character. Miss Mackin's last appearance in Chicago was in the cast of "Keep It to Yourself," which was acted at the Princess three years ago.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," the Alfred Savoir farce which Miss Ina Claire proposes to play this season, and which the police of New Haven, Conn., stopped after a "tryout" performance or two, encountered more trouble in New York last week. On the day before its scheduled opening Robert Milton, the stage director, and Claude King, the leading man, resigned. No whys or wherefores were made public, but the opening was postponed for ten days, Edmund Breese called in to play the leading rôle, and further rehearsals ordered.

New York is to have a pantomime theater, the first of its kind on Broadway. Mabel Normand, the promoter, is going to Europe to study pantomime teaching methods in French and Russian schools, and plans to start with programs of short plays, to be developed later into productions of standard modern and classic pantomimes.

They are smiling in London over a letter sent by a collector of income tax to one John Gay, author of "The Beggar's Opera," which we saw at the Central and which is still current at the Lyric theater in Hammersmith. The collector asks why Mr. Gay has made no return of his profits, as provided by law. And nobody has told him that Mr. Gay departed this life in 1732.

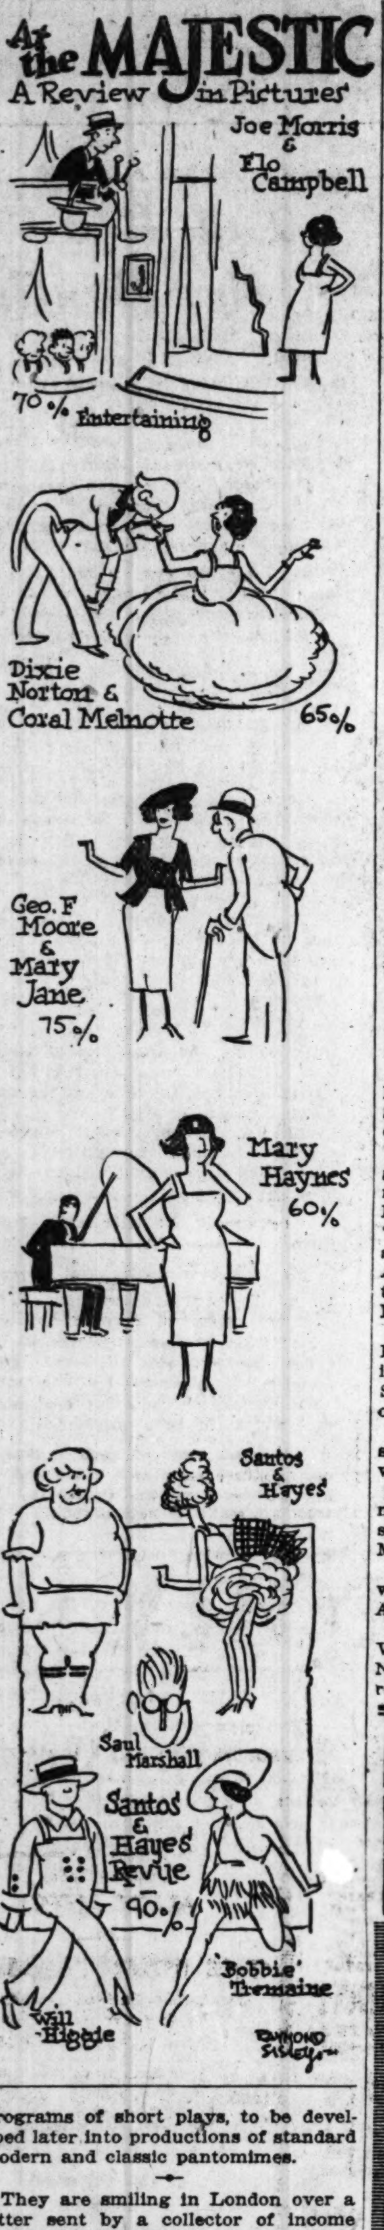
Miss Lorraine Lally, who appears briefly in "The Gold Diggers" as a once famous actress reduced to the selling of soap for a livelihood, is a Chicagoan, a graduate of St. Mary's High school, and the daughter of former Assistant District Attorney John H. Lally. She had leading rôles in a number of school plays before her graduation.

London will not have to wait on Frank Bacon for a glimpse of "Lightnin'." The play's sponsors decided last week to send it to the British capital in the early spring with Milton Nobles in the leading rôle. Nobles was lured out of a retirement of fourteen years to take the part, and has played it for the last year in a special company which is now holding forth in Brooklyn. There was talk of sending him to Chicago a year ago, but they thought better of it.

Miss Mabel Taliaferro is to adventure in the varieties this season with a playlet called "The Rose of Italy."

Michael Fokine has staged a new dancing act in which Miss Gertrude Hoffman will be seen in vaudeville before long.

Louis Mann will make his debut as a producer in Baltimore tomorrow night when he will present himself as the star of "In the Mountains," a play by Samuel Shipman and Clara Lipman.



New Plays for the Advancing Season

cast an appraising eye over this list of futures:

John Golden's "Thank You," a comedy by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, opened in Stamford last Friday night and will almost certainly come to town in two weeks.

A comedy by Rachel Crothers, entitled "Me," will go into rehearsal this week with Tallulah Bankhead in the leading rôle, and a cast including Minnie Dupree and Frank Sheridan.

"Pot Luck," a comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter, which opens in Atlantic City tomorrow night, with James Rennie and Clara Moores in the leading rôles.

John Charles Thomas in "The Love Letter," a Molnar-Jacobi-le Baron-Dillingham musical production, opened in Philadelphia last Monday night, and probably will come to the Globe in a month or so. "The Phantom Rival" set to music.

"Other Lives," by Theresa Helburn and Edward Goodman, now on tour, and heading for New York.

"Main Street," a dramatization by the O'Higgins-Ford team of Sinclair Lewis' celebrated, to say the least, novel. The Shuberts will put it in rehearsal next week.

Irving Berlin's "Music Box Revue," which will open the new Music Box "late this month." The practically unbelievable cast includes William Collier, Sam Bernard, Irving Berlin, Florence Moore, Wilda Bennett, Joseph Santley, Ivy Sawyer and others almost equally celebrated.

Booth Tarkington's "The Wren," which with Helen Hayes as its star will open out of town this week, and in Boston next Monday.

"The Reckoning," by Marjorie Chase. Produced by Mr. Woods, with Dorothy Shoemaker, Felix Krembs, and George Gaulin in the cast.

Avery Hopwood's "The Demi-Virgin," also a Woods venture. Now in rehearsal, with a company including Hazel Dawn, Kenneth Douglas (late of "Mr. Pim"); Constance Farber (the smaller of the Farber sisters); Glen Andrews (late of "The Ghost Between"), Alice Hegeman, and Homer Barton.

"The Fan," a comedy from the French, with Hilda Spong in the leading rôle. Will open in Baltimore on Sept. 26, and in New York (they say) on Oct. 10.

The new and unnamed Al Jolson show, coming to the Imperial in a week or two.

Mr. Cohan's "The O'Brien Girl," now marking time in New England. Some say it is coming to the Liberty, but Mr. Erlanger says not.

Ned Wayburn's "Town Gossip," which opened in Baltimore last week. Also a candidate for the Liberty.

"Lilies of the Field," a comedy by William J. Hurlbut. Marie Doro and Norman Trevor will have the leading rôles.

1921 Is Rewarding Fighters

About Herzl, Bees Film Folk, and a Few Queries

"THE WANDERING JEW."

Produced by Gollas & Gollas.
Presented at Barbee's loop theater.
THE CAST.
The wandering Jew......Rudolph Schildkraut
King David.................Josef Schildkraut
Dr. Theodor Herzel....................H. Bath
Baron Hirsch................Thomas Morley
Pope Leo XIII....................David Tutnam
Torquemado..................Thomas Pearson
Sultan of Turkey.................James Battle

By Mae Tinée.

"THE WANDERING JEW," which is being shown a second week at Barbee's loop theater, can hardly be classed under the heading of entertainment.

The picture is a succession of illustrations which supposedly picture accurately various events in the life of Theodor Herzl, who was the founder of modern political Zionism and who revived the hopes of the Jewish people for a restoration of political autonomy (I didn't know what that word meant either. Looked it up. Means self-government.)

I don't see how the picture will ever prove a box office pull. It may be accurate, but it is deadly dull. A producer with imagination might have taken it, and by deft insertion of a little fiction, color, and punch made of it something that would attract the people and leave an indelible impression on the minds of the people. As it stands, how will it possibly pay even the cost of its making?

The acting is creditable, but none of it will make you grip the arms of your seat. The photography is sometimes good, but mostly mediocre. The crowd scenes are amateurish. Your sympathies are not unduly aroused over the sufferings of anybody in the cast.

Much of the picture is devoted to scenes of the persecution of the Jewish people. The Spanish inquisition, the Dreyfus case, and various other historical events are chronicled as illustration. It is solemn consideration of all this, coupled with unhappy experiences of his own, that drives Herzl to take his stand.

If you haven't an encyclopedia handy, for your information be it known that Theodor Herzl was born in Budapest the 2d of May, 1860, and died at Edlach the 3d of July, 1904.

Mr. Barbee is certainly a gentleman of cosmopolitan tastes. First "Wild Oats," then "The Wandering Jew." What will the gentleman choose next? (At any rate, he keeps you guessing.)

It will cost you 75 cents to see the last named picture.

Why?

Do you remember I asked you all to please tell me why, when bees were swarming, it was the proper caper to beat on a tin pan? Walter Hiers, you remember, did it in the picture called "Her Sturdy Oak." Many of you nobly came to the rescue of our intelligence. Following are three answers to our frenzied query:

THE BEE AND THE BUCKET.

"My little maid!
Where have you stayed
That you did ne'er hear tell
That on the farm
When bees do swarm,
To keep them home
And safe from harm,
One pounds a pan like everything.
"BILL."

"Well, Mae Tinée, I though you knew everything, but as you don't seem to be on to the busy bee I take great pleasure in telling you that when I lived on a Vermont farm in my little girlhood I was many times called on to sound the timbrel and beat the tin pan while my barefooted brothers ran to get my father, who hustled the bees into their new home. The big noise being, so I was told, to drown the queen bee's voice so that she could not tell the family to fly with her to some distant tree instead of going into the hive provided for them.

"A CRANE."

"Easy. A bee is more afraid of rain than a hobo of work. Therefore, pounding an old bucket or pan with anything to make it rattle suggests thunder, wet wings, and death to him. Reflections from a mirror or piece of new tin, thrown into the swarm, simulating lightning, intensifies his terror. Bees do not swarm on cloudy days. His desire for any port in a storm sends him into the waiting new hive. Once inside he usually likes it and rarely cares to change his residence.

"A FARMER."

Several new pictures have started at Lasky studio. Wallace Reid is working on "Rent Free," Jack Holt on "Call of the North," Thomas Meighan on "A Prince There Was," and Ethel Clayton on "The Cradle."

Ask Me! Ask Me!

FRITZIE: Several years is a long time between letters! You mustn't be so careless of us, Fritzie! No, "Humoresque" was not Gaston Glass' first picture. He was in "Oh, You Women," "A Honeymoon for Three," "Open Your Eyes," and a number of other productions. He was born in 1895 and educated in Paris, France. He was on the stage for five years with Sarah Bernhardt in France and the United States. His screen work has been done for Pathé Frères, Gaumont, Famous Players, World, and several other companies.

G. C. S.: How nice to have agreed with you again! The sooner the actors and actresses get over the heaves in emotional crises the better for us who have to look at them. Of course, if Douglas Fairbanks "jumps around and grins" as a Virginian he will be an entirely different person than the character of the original story. Let's live in hopes, however.

So far as I know, Mr. Fairbanks never appeared in a burlesque of the picture you mention. I don't know everything, however.

MARION AND MARGARET: You're darlings to write that letter! Curiosity killed a cat—but I hope it won't kill you. Yes, vurr' much. Address Lloyd Hughes in care of Ince Studio, Culver City, Cal. We'll try not to be conceited—but you have suttinly done your best to make a lady get all puffed up.

GEORGE W. O.: No, you haven't lost me. You and your mother are darlings to feel as you do. The events you mention happened a long time ago, didn't they? Tell your mother that's the way to be—"70 and full of pep." Give her my regards. I'd love to have the pictures you speak of.

JOHANNA: Where have you been keeping yourself? The moral seems to be—never cross an alley. I'm glad you don't believe everything you hear. You're a nice girl not to go around with a grudge against any one.

FRANK E. L.: You should write and compliment me with a nice column of your own like you got it! It's just fine! [The lady may be ungrammatical—but she is honest.]

R. K.: The color of "these wonder-eyes" is blue. And Miss McAvoy has brown hair. She was born in New York. I agree with you.

Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald will co-star in a coming Vitagraph production called "Breaking Through."

C. S. C.: Well, perhaps May Collins would have objected to have Mr. Chaplin kiss her on the platform.

B. B. D.: You're right there, little eagle eyes! We stand corrected. But we swim better than we fish.

CLOSEUPS

Photoplay quotes the following letter, writter by little Julie Cruze to her mother, Marguerite Snow. Julie is 8 years old and was taken for a trip to the mountains with some friends. Upon leaving, her mother gave her a few stamped and addressed postal cards, beseeching small daughter to write occasionally. The first one, jammed with writing, ran as follows:

"Dear mamma. We arrived safe. It is grand up here. Coming up here we had a great deal of excitement. While we were walking up the highest trail we heard a woman wildly yelling for help—Help! Help! There is not room on this post card, so I will finish telling you about it tomorrow. Kisses and love, Julie."

The rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., showed the Tex Rickard motion pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier championship fight on Saturday evening of Sept. 3, as a means of raising funds to help pay the church debt. Fred C. Buimby, who distributes the films, received a letter of thanks from the minister. It ended:

"There seems no doubt that the proceeds will place our work in a very strong position financially."

Lew Cody, so they tell me, wants the world to know that he is a reformed character. (Screen character.) He says he doesn't want to be a male vamp any more. Too bad he didn't reform before he ever started his wild career, isn't it?

Gloria Swanson's next picture for Paramount will be "The Husband's Trade Mark." The story is by Clara Beranger, who wrote "The Gilded Lily" for May Murray.

Dustin Farnum has completed his first picture as a Fox star, and Barbara Bedford is beginning her first star film for the same company.

Margaret Loomis and Fontaine La Rue will be members of the cast appearing in the George Melford production of "The Sheik."

Barbara Bedford has joined the Fox forces.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

Civic Music Is 100 Per Cent as Artistic Force

land. That is one thing that the Civic orchestra is doing.

Another is to give about as agreeable concerts as one would care to hear. It will give many this year, six on Sunday afternoons in Orchestra hall, six more in various high school auditoriums about the city, others as occasion may arise.

Another important activity of the association lies in its work with children's choruses. Twelve hundred children, many of them belonging to the foreign groups, are reached twice a week in chorus singing. They sing their own folk songs—in English as part of the process of Americanization. They gave twenty-six different concerts last season in schools, small parks, and community centers.

Four adult choruses are doing much the same sort of thing, with more complex music and more ambitious undertakings. A dozen concerts or so were given, and others are planned for the coming season.

Community singing is less talked about now than it was during the war, but it continues. No less than 167 sessions of this order were held last year, mostly at civic centers, but others at the Municipal pier, Y. W. C. A. buildings, and Eleanor clubs.

Then there are artists' concerts, and these are numerous. Some of the best concert musicians in Chicago are heard at these events, nearly all of which occur at the small parks. There were twenty-three in the last season.

Now comes the astonishing part of the report. The Civic Music association accomplished all this last year on an income from all sources of $26,911.82. It spent most of it, to be sure, all but about $1,300, and well it might. The wonder is not that it spent the amount, but that it was able to accomplish one quarter of what it did. Figure it out and see how pitiably little can be assigned to any one activity, and how much more could be done with a larger income.

Stage Veteran to Direct Play.

Donald Robertson, veteran actor, producer, coach, and expert on classical and modern drama, has been placed in charge of the production of "The Festival Play of Chicago," to be seen early next month in Grant park. The play is a matter of historical drama, song, dance, pageantry, and processional, and comes from the pen of the well known author, Wallace Rice.

PHOTO - MOFFETT

Donald Robertson, well and favorably known as actor, producer, and authority on dramatic subjects, has been appointed the general stage director of "The Festival Play of Chicago," to be produced in Grant park Oct. 3.

Mr. Robertson sends word that there will be 3,000 participants in the performances, which will take place under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Because of this unusual number, he desires volunteers in a number of scenes. His headquarters are in the Auditorium building.

With the Melody Makers.

The jury sitting upon compositions submitted for the Berkshire chamber music prize this season has submitted its findings, and H. Waldo Warner has been awarded the first position for a trio for violin, cello, and piano. Sixty-four works were passed upon, about half the number turned in last year, but it took the jury three weeks to go through them all.

Mr. Warner is the viola player of the London String quartet that toured the United States last winter. Notification was cabled him, also an invitation to come to Pittsfield, Mass., to hear the performance of his work Sept. 30 by the Elshuco trio.

The performance will be an item in the annual chamber music festival held under the patronage of Mrs. F. S. Coolidge. Leo Sowerby of this city will be importantly represented on the programs. He will play his suite for piano and violin with Leon Sametini, and there will also be a hearing of a major work for woodwinds from his pen.

The Shadow of a Coming Event.

As had been previously surmised, Miss Garden has fixed upon Saint-Saëns' "Samson et Dalila" as the opening attraction for the season by the Chicago Opera association. Lucien Muratore and Marguerite d'Alvarez will be the stars of the two title rôles. Monday, Nov. 15, will be the date.

Miss Garden also cables the news of six revivals to be added to the operatic répertoire. "Manon" and "Werther," both by Massenet and both containing stellar parts for Muratore; "Lakme," by Delibes, an opera of great possibilities for a coloratura soprano and a lyric tenor—Galli-Curci and Schipa did it here last season; "Pélléas et Mélisande," which is one of Miss Garden's greatest achievements; "Mme. Butterfly," by Puccini, in which Edith Mason will be introduced to her new public and probably Edward Johnson will sing Pinkerton; and Wolf-Ferrari's one act comic work, "The Secret of Suzanne," are the additions to the list.

LUCIEN MURATORE
MATZENE PHOTO

It may have been hinted before in this column that Miss Garden is something of an enthusiast over the Chicago Opera association and its new régime. Apparently she continues to be. She has just written a letter from Monte Carlo to George M. Spangler, business manager of the company. Here it is:

"My Dear Mr. Spangler: I hope when you make the official announcement of our opera plans for the coming season that you will be able to impart to the Chicago public something of the tremendous thrill that mere contemplation of our stars and opera répertoire gives me.

"Just think of Muratore, the world's greatest tenor; Galli-Curci, the world's greatest coloratura; Raisa, the great dramatic soprano; Baklanoff, baritone; and Schipa, and Mason, D'Alvarez, Dux, and Pareto and Pattiera, and Marshall, Ivogun, Schubert, Schwarz, and Johnson! All singing in and for Chicago. And Conductor Polacco!

"Does Chicago realize that nowhere in the world do they present such casts, such scenery, such costumes, such ballets as we do in Chicago? And répertoire! Operas in French, German, Italian, and Russian!

"I hope you can get word to the newcomers to make them understand that previous knowledge of opera is not necessary to its enjoyment—if they will only open their hearts and take us in the spirit in which we come to them—and that the soul of music stops neither at the iron gates on the Drive nor at the hall bedroom door once you welcome it.

"That the master romances, adventures, comedies, and tragedies of all the ages are born again in our operas of today, and no life is too business ridden or too frivolous but can be made the better once music enters. All may drink at this fount of inspiration!

"It's a glorious thing—this opera crusading in the twentieth century. I wish I could tell you how deeply I feel our responsibilities and how earnestly I shall strive to meet them. Au revoir."

Aureliano Pertile, a tenor known in Italy and not in this country, has been engaged by the Metropolitan. From all accounts the most favorable impression last season was created by Benjamino Gigli, but he is a victim of ill health and was not able to appear as often as was desired. The same physical insecurity followed him to Buenos Aires this summer, obliging him to make less than his scheduled number of appearances. It would seem that Pertile has been engaged really as an investment in tenorial insurance, but he is said to possess a fine intelligence, if not the voice to carry on the traditions of Caruso.

Mumford and Stanley:

"Did you ever talk back to your wife?"

"Once; I told her her back wasn't covered enough."

"A friend in need is a friend indeed."

"O, yes, but give me a friend who isn't in need."

"I believe in plenty of physical exercise."

"Do you still use dumbbells?"

"No, I'm winding a dollar watch."

"Why is it that firemen seem to lack enthusiasm?"

"Because they're always throwing cold water on everything."

"Is your brother wealthy?"

"In Arizona he is worth $1,000."

"How so?"

"That's what the sheriff offered for him dead or alive."

"Did you call me a liar?"

"Not at all. I merely remarked that the sinuosity of your ultimate conclusion was due to a superficial appreciation of the veracious reality."

To those who have failed to understand Khayyam, I merely advise: Go and see "The Wandering Jew" (Barbee's Loop Theatre).
Where there has been no sympathy, or where prejudice has marked out a man's mental habits, "The Wandering Jew" will right matters to the extent of bringing about a better understanding, a more lasting brotherhood, and an eternal tolerance! Of this, there can be no doubt.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Man Now Dares to Wear Straw Hats Into September

By Mme. X.

GRADUALLY mankind is emerging from the shackles of custom and tradition. A few years ago, if a man had appeared on the city streets wearing a straw hat before June 1, or after Sept. 1, he would have been subjected to mob fury. But last May and this September many a straw sailor hat was visible on our highways without molestation.

It marks a great advance in civilization. Independence is civilization's twin brother. Wearing apparel is merely the outward and visible sign of the inward and invisible spirit. Our present big waisted, short skirted, easy garments betoken a freedom on the part of women never known heretofore. Queen Mary of England, in her long frocks and with her hats perched high and drooping over her royal nose, symbolizes and emphasizes the fact that she stands outside the immediate current, but shares in the prevailing right to wear and do as she pleases. We like her independence and hope that her countrywomen and subjects will copy that rather than the fashions she sets.

Every one is sighing over the departure of summer, but underneath the sighs is a certain sense of exhilaration at the thought of the coming winter with all its possibilities of many kinds of activity—social, philanthropic, intellectual and so on.

The young Potter Palmers—for they will always be that to old Chicagoans—are preparing to occupy the well known family mansion which has for so long stood untenanted, looking out over the waves on the Lake Shore drive. Mr. Palmer has that rare quality among his countrymen, loyalty to old associations. He spent the greater part of his childhood and youth in this brown stone residence and he has for a long time cherished the desire that his children should grow up in the same surroundings. The war and other considerations obliged him to postpone this plan until now.

Newcomers on North Side.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who last season was here but little, is planning to spend this winter in her house on Lake View avenue. Her son, John Borie Ryerson, has been there this summer. Mrs. Ryerson's presence in Chicago always means a quickening of the social pulse. Her Sunday buffet luncheons are a definite feature of life in the beau monde. She is an ardent supporter and constant attendant on opera. She is one of the most enthusiastic patrons of the orchestra concerts and is as generous in her interest in art and literature as she is in music. In short, no one keeps the social ball rolling more swiftly than she does.

Newcomers on the north side, though old Chicagoans, are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hutchinson, who have at last given up their home on Prairie avenue, where they have lived nearly forty years. They have taken an apartment at 234 East Walton place, in the same building where Mr. Hutchinson's nephew-in-law and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster, are going to set up their lares and penates. Gradually the south side is losing its standbys. Mr. and Mrs. John J. Glessner are the only ones left of that distinguished group of social leaders who for many years made the district around Prairie avenue and 18th street the center of fashion.

Mrs. Pullman and Mrs. W. W. Kimball, who for so many years lived near the Glessners and each other on the corners of those famous streets, both died within the last six months. Gone are the rest of that galaxy, the Dexters, the James Walkers, the Hibbards, the Marshall Fields, the Doanes, John Shortall, the Bellases, the Fernando Joneses, Mrs. Charles Kellogg, Mrs. H. O. Stone, the John M. Clarks, and many, many more. Any one who continues to cling to that neighborhood must feel like "one who treads alone a banquet hall deserted."

Farther down on Prairie avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Haskell are for the time being still looking out on a changing world. We suspect that the enterprising Mrs. Haskell, who lived for many years on the north side, will soon lure her husband up to the regions where the lake breezes blow upon most of the social doings of Chicago's smart set.

Another change of domicile, which is within a smaller radius, is that of the "Bert" Schwarzes, who have given up their house at 845 North Michigan avenue in favor of an apartment farther north, at 1100 Lake Shore drive. This apartment was made vacant by the recent death of Mrs. Henry Dibblee.

The death of Mrs. Dibblee took from Chicago society one of its best known social leaders, a personality who will be much missed, both in the gay world and in that of philanthropy. She was an unusually distinguished looking woman. She had lovely silver hair, a remarkably youthful figure, and was always exquisitely dressed. Her manner was gentle and kindly. She was a sister of America's most remarkable merchant prince. We have produced some striking figures in this line, but none quite equal to the late Marshall Field.

Chicago as Art Center.

In spite of Rudyard Kipling's fierce denunciation of Chicago's materialism, a fulmination he made in the early nineties of the last century, we hold that there is that in the stimulating atmosphere of our tumultuous city which breeds art and literature and music. To be sure, our artists, musicians and writers do not always stay with us. Merely to refer to our sons of art, there are Louis Betts, Frederic Bartlett, and Abram Poole and many others who have all abandoned us for the more sophisticated [illegible] of New York, but we bred 'em. [illegible] cannot gainsay that.

And now comes a young Chicagoan, a third generationer, Wheeler Williams, son of the late Lawrence Williams, and grandson of Simeon Williams, who is developing such a marked talent for sculpture that he is creating much talk among those who have seen his work. This is up to now entirely bas relief.

He discovered this talent when the question came up of a medal commemorating the life and death of his schoolmate and roommate, both at Phillips Exeter academy and at Yale, young Stephen Potter of Detroit. The latter entered our aviation service when we went into the world war. He shot down the first German plane off the coast of England that was overcome by an American flyer.

He lost his life in the service and his companions in school and college, to commemorate his short and heroic life and to make it an example for other youths, decided to offer an annual medal to the best runner on the track at the great Exeter school. It was in this field of athletics that he was especially preëminent, being one of the finest pole jumpers the school ever produced.

When it came to the question of a design for this medal many designs were presented, all unsatisfactory. Finally Wheeler Williams said that he would show the competing artists about what was wanted. His tentative medal was so entirely what they were seeking for that it was accepted without further experiments.

It represents in a spirited manner the beautiful profile of the young hero on one side of the bronze disc, while on the other is a graceful outline in low relief of a figure symbolizing aviation. It is a fine piece of work and will for all time to come keep in the minds of his successors at school Stephen Potter's achievements and personality. To a young man who died for his country there would come great satisfaction could he know that the young lads who come after him would carry on his name and fame.

Wheeler Williams as Sculptor.

Inspired by this recognition of his abilities, Mr. Williams has gone on with his work and has been successful in the bas relief likenesses he has made this summer of various people, young and old. One of the most striking of his achievements is a portrait of his grandfather, whose venerable head, fine features, long, thick beard, and skull cap give him the look of a veritable patriarch.

Another excellent piece of work is a portrait of the artist's father, Lawrence Williams. He has also finished some charming likenesses of Mrs. Francis Farwell's two granddaughters, little Marian and Edith Farwell, children of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Farwell. One of the most delightful of these bas relievos is the profile portrait of young Chauncey Blair III., a lad of 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey B. Blair. Another almost as striking is that of Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's second son, Benjamin A. Fairbank, better known as "Benny." There is also a lovely profile likeness of Miss Katherine McCormick, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander A. McCormick.

Mr. Williams has taken a course in architecture at Harvard, besides having received his B. A. at Yale. He is going to Paris this autumn to study and then will make up his mind whether he will be an architect by profession, with sculpture as a relaxation, or whether he will devote himself to the calling of Michael Angelo, St. Gaudens et al., to the exclusion of all else. He is himself an interesting personality, young, dark, eager, with a consuming interest in everything in the world. He is one who will drink deep at the fountain of life.

Wedding Crop Is Large.

The season's crop of weddings is one of the few large yields of this otherwise arid and barren year. The next one of especial interest to society is the marriage of Miss Mary Withers, daughter of Mrs. Henry Malcolm Withers, to Clive Runnells, son of John S. Runnells. The bride to be is one of the prettiest, most popular members of the younger set, while the groom is perhaps the best known bachelor in Chicago, though it must be admitted that Eames MacVeagh and Maj. Frederick McLaughlin run him close.

If they should follow his example, the "smart set" would be in a stricken state, compared to which devastated France would seem a rich and populous region.

The marriage follows quickly on the announcement of the engagement and is set for Sept. 24. The ceremony will take place in the little Episcopal church in Lake Forest, an attractive, quiet, fragrant house of worship. The service will be followed by a reception given by Mrs. Withers at the home of her other daughter, Mrs. Laurence Armour, in Green Bay road. Although this is to be a small affair to which only members of the family and a few intimate friends are invited, the house Mrs. Withers is occupying this summer is not large enough to accommodate them comfortably. The Laurence Armours have a delightful residence and one of the most charming of the smaller gardens in Lake Forest, so the wedding reception will have a beautiful background.

Gardens full of gay blossoms, a pool where the biggest and goldenest fish you ever saw lurk beneath lily pads, a pretty terrace opening on a velvety lawn, a secluded tennis court, seductive paths leading through shrubbery, an exceedingly well kept vegetable and picking garden are all features of the place, while at the east end of the estate is one of the finest kennels of police dogs in the country. Mr. Armour makes a specialty of this species of canines.

A splendid, fierce looking, wolflike lot they are, and the visitor is glad that the bars against which they hurl themselves with formidable baying when a stranger comes near are sturdy. Police dogs are what is known as "one man" dogs, that is, they only know, recognize, love, and obey one person.

Aldis Gardens Scene of Wedding.

Next month another Lake Forest wedding is "on the carpet." Miss Alice Bradley, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dorr Bradley, is to marry Frederick Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fisher, on Oct. 22. The wedding will take place in the lovely gardens of the Aldis place on the corner of Green Bay road and Deerpath avenue, the Bradleys having leased their own place in Lake Forest to Clive Runnells and themselves rented the Aldis place for the summer.

Mr. Fisher, the groom, is living in New York, where he has already taken an apartment for his bride on West 11th street.

The two Miss Bradleys have been brought up much abroad and are excellent linguists and unusually attractive young women. Both are experts at tennis and are fine swimmers. These two sports are specialties of the famous Aldis gardens, where tennis players and swimmers daily congregate in large numbers to enjoy the two courts and to dip into the most popular though by no means the largest swimming pool on the north shore.

These gardens with their adjacent houses are generally known in that neighborhood as "the Compound."

MRS. SHERWOOD A. CHENEY.

[Copyright: Harris & Ewing.]

Miss Louise Delano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Adrian Delano of Washington, D. C., formerly of Chicago, was married to Col. Sherwood Alfred Cheney, U. S. A., yesterday at noon in Stockbridge, Mass., where her parents have a villa for the summer. The service was read in the Congregational church by the Rev. William Wallace Fenn, dean of Harvard Divinity school, formerly of Chicago and for many years a close friend of the Delano family. Following the wedding there was a reception at the residence of the bride's parents. Among the Chicagoans at the wedding were the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. James C. Peasley; the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kidder Gilbert, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. McPherson. Col. Cheney, who is the son of Mrs. John S. Cheney of South Manchester, Conn., was graduated from West Point in 1897. He has just been appointed military attache to the American legation at Peking, China, and he and Mrs. Cheney will sail from San Francisco early in November. Mrs. Cheney was educated at Chicago, Providence, R. I., and Florence, Italy. Her father moved to Washington with his family three years ago. During the war Mrs. Cheney worked in the office of the French high commission.

MISS DOROTHY BUTTOLPH.

[Lewis-Smith photo.]

Miss Dorothy Buttolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. of 5429 Cornell avenue, will make her debut next Thursday afternoon at a reception to be given at the South Shore Country club from 3 to 6 o'clock. Miss Buttolph was graduated from Smith college last June. Receiving with Mrs. Buttolph and her daughter will be Miss Katherine Yeomans of Kansas City, Mo., Miss Susanne Davis of Rock Island, Miss Albert Searles, Miss Frances Tolerton, Miss Isabel Watkins, Miss Frances Coonley, Miss Maurine Moore, Miss Isabel Ayres, and Miss Dorothy Higbie.

MISS ALICE MARK.

[Moffett photo.]

Miss Alice Mark, daughter of Clayton Mark of Lake Forest, will be married to Dr. McMicken Hanchett of Chicago next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the residence of her father. Only relatives and a few friends will be present. Miss Mark will be attended by Miss Edith Swift and her four sisters, Mrs. Everett Wyman, Mrs. John Kimball Saville, Miss Scytha Mark, and Miss Anna Mark. Alfred Hanchett of New York will serve as best man for his brother.

Their immediate population, those whose front doors open onto the Compound, consists of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Graham Aldis, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dorr Bradley, and the Misses Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sturgis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, and John T. Jr., and the occupants of the Hayloft. Until lately Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Milman were living in the Hayloft. They went to Europe early in the summer.

Reports from Chicagoans Abroad.

Among widely wandering Chicagoans who have lately, by postals from distant lands, registered at our desk are Mrs. Carter H. Harrison and Mrs. John Bass. The Carter Harrisons, who are making an extended tour in Europe, which may develop into a round the world trip, spent some time at the American military headquarters on the Rhine. They were guests at a great ball which the American general in command, Gen. Allen, gave there.

His wife is a former Chicago woman, Miss Dora Johnston, a sister of Mrs. Wallace Wakem and daughter of the late William E. Johnston. Mrs. Harrison writes that half America seems to be in Europe, and that Paris was packed. Perhaps in that way France will be able to get enough money to make a fresh start in the world and to pay her war debts. It may in a measure compensate her for our eighteenth amendment.

The other travelers from Chicago who lately sent a word of her wanderings is Mrs. John Bass, who spent some time at Athens after her husband and son left her in Vienna in the middle of summer to return to Chicago for a brief visit. They are now on their way to rejoin her in Italy, where they will all stay for a few weeks, returning to their Chicago home some time in November. Mrs. Bass has also been traveling in the Balkans and on the Black sea, all of these remote regions being as familiar to her as Milwaukee and South Bend are to us. When they are settled here the Basses will be at home at 25 East Walton place.

A former resident and great social favorite in this region, Guido Sabetta, is spending this week-end in Lake Forest as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown. He was Italian consul here some ten years ago, since which time many things have happened to him. He fought in the great war; was wounded during the battles along the Isonzo; recovered from his wounds, and was sent back to this country by his government last winter as chancellor of the Italian embassy at Washington. His welcome here will refute the adage, "Out of sight is out of mind."

He needs it—"The Iron Food for Vitality."

Raisin Pie
Men are quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this
2 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
2 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 teaspoon sugar

Wash the raisins, put in saucepan with 1 cup cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Add sugar, salt and corn starch which has been mixed with 1 cup cold water. Boil 3 minutes; add lemon juice. Pour in pie tin which has been lined with crust, while hot cover; brush top with cold milk and bake in moderate oven until brown.

Tired Man's Dessert
Digests almost immediately Revives his Vim
Men are grateful for a pie like this

A TIRED man's first need at night is new energy—to revive his lagging spirits and his strength.

Give it to him in this luscious pie. Effective and incomparably delicious!

You get almost immediate results.

For this pie—note the recipe—is made with tender, juicy, meaty raisins furnishing 1560 calories of energizing nutriment per pound.

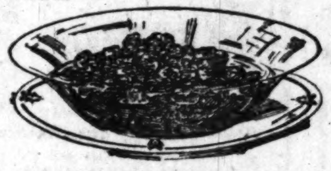
Raisins are 75 per cent pure fruit-sugar (in practically predigested form) so require little digestion and therefore the energy is felt at once.

Raisins are rich in food iron. The "Iron Men"—the men of healthy blood—need but a small bit of iron daily, yet that need is vital.

There's no better way to impart the vitality of iron than through a luscious raisin pie.

Remember these facts when you choose dessert.

Give raisin pie to tired men in the interest of their pleasure and success.



Stewed Raisins
Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron this way

Cover Sun-Maid Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire; bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75 per cent natural fruit-sugar.

All measurements for these recipes are level.

Raisin Bread
Add raisins to the "staff of life" and you have a perfect food

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Use Sun-Maid Raisins, made from California's finest table grapes—American raisins, processed and packed immaculately in a great modern California plant.

Seeded (seeds removed); Seedless (grown without seeds); Clusters (on the stem). Also a fine, ever-ready dessert.

Raisins are cheaper by thirty per cent than formerly. See that you get plenty in your foods.

Mail the coupon for free book of tested recipes which describes 100 attractive ways to serve.

ASTRONOMY

THE SIZE OF MARS.
NORTH AMERICA WOULD SPAN ONE HEMISPHERE OF MARS
BY S. F. MAXWELL.

SIGNALING MARS.

THE annual season for receiving signals from Mars is at hand. Every year some one asserts that he has picked up messages from space on his wireless apparatus which must, per se, come from Mars. It is very fortunate that we have a neighbor world close by whose appearance indicates the presence of intelligent creatures on its face.

Every time a wireless receiver buzzes a little out of the ordinary we are able to assert that we have just heard a bona fide code message in Martian language, inviting the Earthians to hold converse across the blanks of space. Were Mars a desert planet like the moon we should be in a quandary as to who was sending.

But this question has never been satisfactorily answered: How do we know it is Mars sending? Might it not be Venus, which is even nearer, or the moons of Jupiter, or even the moon Titan of Saturn?

As is well known, the waves of wireless move in spheres, concentrically outward from the point of emanation, and it is not possible, without refined and repeated observations, to locate the direction of the sender. In fact, at the present development of wireless telegraphy and astronomy, communication with Mars is much more fanciful than real.

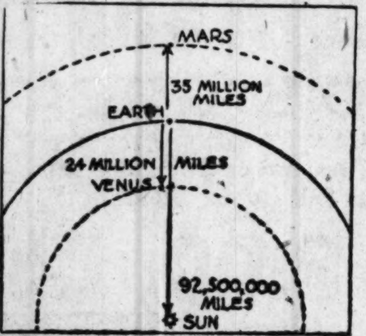
There are unquestionably, however, sounds emanating from the sky to be heard by wireless. Hertzen waves (wireless), heat waves, light waves (colors), ultra violet waves (chemical), and X-rays are all of one and the same nature. Light waves are of the order of one four-millionth of an inch from crest to crest. X-rays are very much smaller than this, heat waves much longer, while wireless waves are yards, rods and miles long.

The sun pours out all kinds of waves. Our eyes are sensitive to a few of them, and we see them as light. Our skins are sensitive to a few more, and we feel as heat some of the rays we cannot see. At times we get "burned" by the ultra-violet rays that we can neither see nor feel, and we call it sunburn. If the air overhead were not so opaque to the X-rays, just as clouds are opaque to light rays and carbonic acid vapor to heat rays, we should be deluged all day long with X-rays as virulent as any in a laboratory tube.

The sun is also pouring out wireless waves. When suitable antennae and receiving sets have been built, it will be possible to hear the boom and roar of storms on the sun where we can now only see them through the telescope as sunspots. It is undoubtedly peaks of this otherwise inaudible sound which affect the listener's antennae, and make him think he hears messages from some planet.



OUR NEIGHBORS IN SPACE

The Great Dipper, or "Seven Stars" of the ancients, has been a guide in the north for many centuries. It formerly occupied about the position the Little Dipper now has, but has been moved, due to the changing tilt of the earth's axis. Neither the dipper nor any other star in the sky has a motion visible to the naked eye. They all seem to move about the pole just as objects seem to fly back when we ride on a train. It is an optical illusion caused by the earth's spin.

The best lens for a telescope object glass is a plano convex or concavo-convex, one inch or less in diameter and sixty inches or more long.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

New York Exhibit of Paintings Is Warmly Assailed

By Eleanor Jewett.

NEW YORK is up in arm against the present exhibition of modern paintings shown in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The exhibit is termed degenerate, and the painters of the canvases are relegated to the class of the insane by reference to such opinions as those held by Dr. Charles W. Burr, Dr. Francis X. Dercum, Dr. J. Madison Taylor, and Dr. W. E. Wadsworth. The theories advanced by these physicians regarding the mental conditions of the modern painters, those modern painters at least who devote their skill to presenting the abnormal as the beautiful, are sustained by the New York public in a pamphlet denouncing Gauguin, Van Gogh, Toulouse-Lautrec, and other cubists, tubists, and futurists.

Leon Bakst, father of the decorative art of the Russian ballet, is at work on designs for the contemplated production of Tschaikowsky's "The Sleeping Beauty." The beauty of his conceits for this ballet is threatening, so say his adherents abroad, to the peace of the dramatic world. We are on the verge, they warn us, of a rare sensation. Sheer beauty and romance, M. Bakst avers, comprise the total of his efforts for the forthcoming production.

The New York Tribune says work is progressing in France on what will probably be the largest of the late war memorials thus far planned. It is the giant obelisk at Pointe de Grave, near Bordeaux, which is being built by popular subscription to commemorate the entrance of America into the world war. More than a thousand French towns have contributed 400,000 francs and over toward the work, and the chamber of deputies has added 1,000,000 francs to this. The monument consists of an immense shaft topped by a flaming light which shines out over the sea. The base will have frescoes and friezes carved by a number of French soldier-sculptors.

Conde Wilson Hickok is showing a group of fifty or more canvases in the offices of Archibald Harris & Co., 515 Marquette building. Some of them are familiar to us, but a number of the paintings are new, and all of them have points of interest and much charm.

Estol Wilson, who exhibited as a boy a number of flower pieces at the Chicago Art institute, has returned from abroad, where he served with the 33d pioneer infantry in the Argonne and at St. Mihiel. His talent as a miniature painter upon ivory is for the minute reduced to a minimum as, due to wounds received in service, he cannot do such fine work at present. Among his portraits which have been exhibited in the Paris salon are those of Mrs. C. Mitchell Depew, Peggy Howe, Mrs. Gray, and a "Portrait of Mlle. Moorehouse."

Frederic M. Grant had an interesting exhibition last week in his studio at 139 East Ontario street, of the pictures which he is sending to the Minneapolis exhibit.

Pauline Palmer is at Provincetown, Mass., for the month of September.

The Saturday afternoon sketching classes given by Carl H. Krafft and Holger W. Jensen on the Des Plaines river will be continued through the present month. The members of the class meet at 2 o'clock at the Burlington railroad station, Riverside. From town the trains leave from the Union depot.

Miss Gracia Alling and Miss Parker of the Art institute have returned recently from a summer's trip abroad.

What It Will Do for You

The Cantilever Shoe will give you more comfort, more strength, more pleasure in walking, more happiness during the day, than shoes of the ordinary type. Moreover, there is a style about the Cantilever which will look well on your foot.

Like the arch of your own foot, the arch of the Cantilever Shoe is flexible. This enables your foot muscles to enjoy a freedom of action which is pleasurable and beneficial. By maintaining the strength of your arch muscles through exercise and free circulation, you are going to save yourself from the unpleasant experience of women who suffer from weak arches, flat foot and kindred ills.

The Cantilever Shoe will give your toes a chance to wiggle a little, straighten out and enjoy themselves. Ten times will you be thanked for this.

It will give your body an opportunity to recover its natural balance, if you have been wearing high heels too often; and possibly some of the internal organs will welcome the improved posture.

It will give your foot the comfort of a shoe shaped to the natural foot, and it will let you enjoy a good walk, with a sense of freedom and a lack of fatigue which may be a new experience for you. The Cantilever Shoe will give you all these things without the sacrifice of good looks.

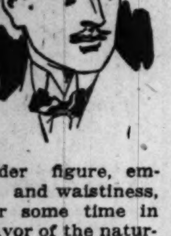
The WELL-DRESSED MAN

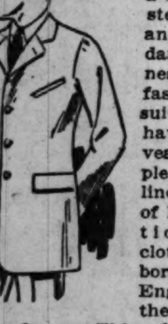
by Alfred Stephen Bryan

Autumn Lines Simple; Felt Hat to Be Small

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Fashion, like bores and boarding house dishes, repeats itself. Wasn't it Daniel Webster who said, "What is valuable is not new, and what is new is not valuable." Men whom fashion follows, as distinguished from men who follow fashion, are almost as whimsical as a woman in turning aside from the overfashionable to readopt modes which were in vogue long ago.



Thus it is that the excessively slender figure, emphasizing narrowness and waistiness, has been dropped for some time in favor of the natural figure, which fills out a suit as a man should, instead of assuming an artificial and dandyfied slimness. Autumn fashions in both suits and top coats have never revealed more simple and sensible lines. It is a case of lending distinction to one's clothes instead of borrowing it—the English idea, and the only rational one in dress. This plainness is not merely true of the cut but also of the colors and patterns, which are of the darkish sort in self, striped, plaid, diagonal and masked effects of green, brown, gray, smoke, blue, and the like. Varitone heather intermixtures, like the old guard, neither die nor surrender. To sum up, the salient characteristic of autumn clothes is naturalness—to seem what you are and to be what you seem.



For some seasons the fashionable soft hat has been taking on a smaller contour—lower and rounder of crown and snugger of brim. This form is more becoming to the generality of men and reflects the sophisticated taste of metropolitan centers. The top sketch portrays one of these autumn hats having an upslanting brim, a low creased crown and a deep ribbon, harmonizing or contrasting, as may be preferred.

Pearl gray comes first and then brown and green, with a sheaf of in between tints, as seal, bronze, copper, mocha, and so on, are the shades most preferred this season. If some men would trust their own judgment less and their hatter's more, one would chance upon fewer soft hats which are clearly not intended for the heads they cover.

Waistcoats are a stodgy subject, bereft of inspiration alike for the clothes designer or the fashion tipster. Nevertheless, one must wear the things, and the five button affair, reproduced here, exemplifies the paucity of change in this ultra-respectable garment. It is still well waisted, with peaked bottom points, and it has the cut out scyes (armholes) to allow free arm play and shoulder sway.

Start RIGHT in the $30,000 Scenario Contest
HOW you may gain the same advantage as the three who won the $5,000 in prizes given in the J. Parker Read Jr. contest. May we send you the free questionnaire test which showed them the way?

$2,500 to Her
Frances White Elijah, of Chicago, who writes:
"You can understand how grateful I feel to Mr. Read for giving me an opportunity to succeed, and how thankful I am to the Palmer institution for having given me a training which made the success possible."

$1,500 to Him
A. Earl Kauffman, Secretary to the Mayor of York, Penn., who writes:
"I didn't win the $1,500 prize. The Palmer Plan won it. But I'm going to spend it."

$1,000 to Her
Anna B. Mezquida, of San Francisco, who writes:
"I should not have known how to go about preparing an acceptable scenario without the Palmer Plan to point the way. MY TIME FOR STUDY WAS VERY LIMITED, AS THE CONTEST CLOSING DATE WAS DRAWING NEAR; but in the short time allowed me I mastered that course."
The $30,000 prize contest of the Chicago Daily News offers you a wonderful incentive to try your hand at photoplay writing.
Because they had the courage to clip a coupon and test their ability to write for the screen, the three whose pictures are shown above won $2,500, $1,500 and $1,000 respectively in the smaller but hotly contested competition closed by J. Parker Read Jr. this summer.
No greater courage is needed for you to clip the coupon on this page. Test your ability as those three winners tested theirs, and get the right start in your effort to win a prize in this latest and greatest of screen writing contests.
The story adjudged best will win $10,000; the next ten $1,000 each, and the next twenty $500 each.
That's the whole story of your opportunity. What you will do with it depends upon your own initiative. It took initiative to enter Frances White Elijah, of Chicago; A. Earl Kauffman, of York, Penn.; and Anna B. Mezquida, of San Francisco, in the Read contest, and they made the RIGHT START by the simple home test of story-telling ability which we offer to you free; they learned the simple, but vastly important, technique of screen writing through the Palmer method; and they won every prize against a field of nearly 10,000 contestants.
It is a source of genuine satisfaction to the Palmer Photoplay Corporation that the three winners, who combined natural ability with the correct writing technique, discovered their talent through our free test, and acquired the technique through the Palmer Course and Service.
Will You Start with the Advantage These Winners Had?
You may not suspect that you have the story telling ability for which the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, with the active aid and encouragement of the leading producers, is literally combing the nation. But remember this, the winners in the last big contest did not know they had this peculiar gift until the Van Loan questionnaire brought it out.
Producers Demand Stories—Not Mere Ideas
The idea alone is useless to the producer. He will not waste his time with it, much less buy it. But for good, original stories, written in the simple screen language which enables him to see its action, he will pay from $500 to $2,000. Finished literary style is not required; fine writing cannot be transferred to the screen. Only a few can write with distinction, but many can tell a story, and with proper training can sell it in scenario form. The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is finding those thousands in homes and offices all over the land. The producers are ready and anxious to pay liberally for their stories.

2,000 New Photoplays Must Be Found
The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is essentially a clearing house of screen stories—the largest in the world. Its Department of Education is conducted for the training of new scenario writers—the industry's present greatest need. Look over the list of its Advisory Council; see the leaders who constitute it. These leaders realize that the future of the screen drama is absolutely dependent upon the discovery and training of new creative talent. The photoplaywrights of the future will be from the ranks of men and women like you and your friends. "I do not expect to hear the name of a famous author," wrote Samuel Goldwyn in the Daily News on August 22d. "I believe that the winning stories of real life will come from the ranks of housewives, laborers or stenographers." Mr. Goldwyn, who will produce the winning scenario, voices the opinion of the motion picture industry, as proved by experience.
Try at Least—Send for the Free Van Loan Questionnaire
The questionnaire prepared by H. H. Van Loan, the celebrated photoplaywright, and Professor Malcolm MacLean, formerly instructor at Northwestern University, is for our protection as well as yours. If you have story telling talent, we want to help you develop it. If you have no story telling ability, we want to discover that and tell you frankly. For unless you can write scenarios that we can sell, we do not profit.
We will treat the questionnaire confidentially; we will be perfectly frank. But for your own sake and the sake of the motion picture industry, send for the questionnaire and try it, at least.
The cost is nothing. The rewards in the case of Mrs. Elijah, Mr. Kauffman and Mrs. Mezquida were immediate money—and a profession which insures constant income, fame and satisfaction.
Clip the coupon, put in an envelope and mail; who can tell what the rewards in your case may be?
Chicago Office Open
A branch of the Educational Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation has been opened in Suite 1322, 127 North Dearborn Street, by Mr. Roy L. Manker, Vice President and General Manager of the Corporation. Mr. Manker is Chairman of the Examining Board, and a member of the Screen Writers' Guild of the Authors' League of America. He will receive and examine questionnaires submitted and save time for students who enter the Daily News contest. Appointments may be arranged by letter or telephone for special service to Palmer students.
Telephone Randolph 3931
Applicants for the questionnaire will receive a free sample copy of The Photodramatist, official organ of the Screen Writers' Guild of the Authors' League of America, the photoplaywrights' magazine.
Palmer Photoplay Corporation, Dept. of Education,
Please send me, without cost or obligation on my part, your questionnaire. I will answer the questions in it and return it to you for analysis. If I pass the test, I am to receive further information about your Course and Service. Also send free sample copy of the Photodramatist.

The Dead Master, and the Deathless Charm

Woodward, who had been a preacher but had failed at it—"parish after parish had shifted him from its aching shoulders"—and now——

"The physical shape of the farm was favorable to his luckless gift of going down hill, but the energy of his wife now stayed his further progress as effectually as if he had been a log propped on the edge of a slope by some jutting point of granite."

Just one more:

". . . they walked on in silence till they came to a rise in the road overlooking a swampy meadow. In the midst of this stood a slim, consumptive young maple in a hectic of premature autumnal tints, and with that conscious air which the first colored trees have."

You will not forget that maple.

An Early Howells "Heroine."

In this book Mr. Howells' "heroine"—if one must use as a definition a banal word he much disliked—is that perilous quantity, a mischievous woman who has the graces and an incorrigible propensity to play-act herself into every situation she encounters and into every life she can intrude upon. There is no other social peril comparable with such a being. The type is ancient. It is as old as Cleopatra, as Mary of Scotland, as Christina of Sweden, as Lady Hamilton, as that Duchess of Berry of the Vendée adventure, as Eugenie Montijo, as Draga of Servia, as General Gabler's daughter.

The allusions above are mainly regal. Well, Mr. Howells' Rosabel Farrell is American royalty in her beauty, her charm, her skill, her gowns, her caprices, her diabolical joy in effects and in being a factor. The woman is drawn full length in many moods—in her pride, her strength, her weakness, her contrition, her passionate and woebegone self-revelation,

"It seems to me," she says, "that I know how to feel, but that I never feel. It seems to me that I am always acting out the thing I ought to be, or want to be, and never being it."

She is twisted and poisoned with what Mr. Howells calls her "consciously insolent caprice"—and she can look up to baffled men and women "with the eyes of a nun."

"There is no harm in her," says one; "she simply wants excitement, luxury, applause all in one, all the time."

That confident speaker became a victim she almost wrecked.

Whom else she almost wrecked, how she and they were in some sort saved and salvaged, is the tale.

Than the study of his incorrigible theatricalist, this being of shreds and patches of emotions and brief surges of passion, the old master, then young, never did anything more delicate, more dazzling also, for there are scenes in "Mrs. Farrell" of the most poignant and swiftly moving drama.

The story was highly worth rescuing from old numbers of a magazine, for it reaffirms what was Howells' supreme service to morals and to letters. That service proceeded from his fidelity. It was this:

He made you see the truth in your life, your world, the truth in art and in letters and in conduct, and by so doing he gave you the standard by which to detect the false. And to detect was to shun. He made the false very hateful.

The old master's daughter Mildred writes a nine page introduction to the book. One wishes it were ninety, for she has her father's charm.

Dodo, Aged 54, on Disabilities

pened to you."

"But all my relations have died. That's happened to me."

"No; that happened to them. You want routing out. Why do you live in the country, for instance? I often think that doctors are so misunderstanding. If you feel ill and consult a doctor he usually tells you to leave London at once and not spend another night there. But for most ailments it would be far more useful if he told you to leave the country at once. It's far more dangerous to get mossy than to get overdone. You can but break down if you get overdone, but if you get mossy you break up."

Dodo and Her Fellow Fleas.

The placid Miss Grantham, having been compared by Dodo to a cabbage, replies:

"I may be a cabbage—though as a matter of fact, I am not—but I would far sooner be a cabbage than a flea."

"A flea?" asked the bewildered Dodo.

"Yes, dear, I said 'flea.' All the people who live the sort of life which you have deliberately adopted as your own are precisely like fleas. You hop about with dreadful springs, and take little bites of other people, and call that life. invention, you ask the inventor to lunch and suck a little of his blood. Then at dinner you are told that everybody is talking about some new book, so you buy a copy next morning, cut the first fifty pages, leave it about in a prominent place, and ask the author to tea. Meanwhile you forget all about the inventor. Then a new portrait painter appears, or a new conjuror at the music halls or a new dancer, and off you hop again and have another bite. For some obscure reason you think that that is life, whereas it is if you hear of some marvelous new only being a flea."

Dodo says:

"But really you wrong me: I am something more than a snobbish flea."

"Yes; you're a parody," said Miss Grantham thoughtfully. "That is the deplorable thing about you. You have always made a farce out of your good qualities, and a tragedy out of your bad ones. What a waste! You need never have been either a farce or a tragedy, but just a decent, simple, commonplace woman like me."

"Grantie, I hate you," said Dodo. "Why don't you make the best of other people, as I always do?"

"Simply because they insist on making the worst of themselves, and it would be rude to disagree with them," said Grantie.

Dodo on Selfishness.

"A thoroughly selfish woman can make herself behave unselfishly, just as a greedy person can starve himself, but they remain just as selfish and greedy as before. O, Grantie, I've got a dreadful nature, and the only thing to be done is to blow soap bubbles all over it, so that it appears to be iridescent. . . We are all in cages, at least I am. Iron bars do make a cage, whatever Lovelace thought about it, if the iron bars are your own temperament. I can't get out, and isn't it awful?"

Dodo gave a great sigh and lit a cigarette.

Dodo to a Prince of the Blood.

"Yes, do come down, sir," said Dodo. "It was me talking."

"Also, in English you should say 'I' not 'me,'" said this profound scholar.

"No, sir, you shouldn't," said Dodo. "You say 'I' when you're learning English, because that is correct, and when you've learned it you say 'me.'"

Dodo on Remedies.

"Oh, Jack, if you've got an ache in your mind, the cure is to work your body till that aches, too. Then two aches make an affirmative."

"Dodo Wonders"—this book is called. Wonders about what? The last page tells. Edith had been saying that "the war hasn't made the slightest change in any of us."

"Darling, you're wrong there," said Dodo. "It has made the most immense difference. For instance—nowadays—we're all as poor as rats, though we trot along still."

And she goes on to say, as a parlor maid enters, that nowadays "we all have parlor maids"—instead of footmen.

Edith shouted with laughter.

"Poor as rats," she said, "and parlor maids!

Any other differences, Dodo?"

"I wonder," she said.

"THE END," says Mr. Benson.

But shall we not meet her again? No doubt, no doubt—say at Philippi, which is seventy.

BANG GOES ANOTHER GUN IN THE WELLS-JONES RIOT

In the book section of last Sunday's Tribune Mr. H. G. Wells, writing copperplate from Easton Glebe, Dunmow, England, told us what he thought, and what ought to be thought, about Henry Arthur Jones. In replying Mr. Jones did not wait to write copperplate but dispatched a cablegram from 19 Kidderpore avenue, London, on Sept. 3, after the high spots and the hot parts of Mr. Wells' "pennyworth of cat's meat" epistle had been cabled to him.

NINETEEN Kidderpore Avenue, London, Sept. 3, 1921.—[To the Editor of The Tribune, Chicago.]—Mr. Wells' letter gives the American public an entirely false account of the facts in the case. He represents me as inflamed by the petty motive of personal malice. He says that I am carrying on a campaign "here, there, and everywhere where there is a paper in need of cheap copy."

Mark how my plain tale shall set him down.

I have written no letter about him whatsoever to any paper other than the New York Times, the London Evening Standard, and the London Morning Post. Will he say that these are papers which are "in need of cheap copy"?

I have written no private letter to Mr. Wells since this discussion began. I thought it courteous to send him, before publication, a copy of each letter before it appeared. I have done this through my secretary, who has inclosed quite a short, polite note explaining the circumstances.

Nor has he the faintest excuse for posing as the victim of my persecution. In reply to my secretary, a lady whom he did not know, he wrote her a letter containing personal abuse of me.

He says that I desire him to call me names. If I had such a desire he has amply gratified it, for his epithets would fill a good part of a column.

His entire case rests upon paltry quibbles, ad nauseam. He repeats his charge of misquotation. Apropos of the "beloved Lenin," he cannot even quote himself correctly. His exact words were: "Lenin, beloved of all that is energetic in Russia." If in inadvertently placing "beloved" before Lenin instead of after it I have misrepresented Mr. Wells I offer him on my knees ten thousand abject apologies, ad nauseam.

In the Morning Post he says that I profess myself to be under the impression that he has threatened me with an action for libel, and disclaims having had any such intention. Messrs. Dutton wrote me that they were holding over publication of "My Dear Wells" [Mr. Jones' forthcoming book] under some apprehension of legal action. Having received a further communication from Mr. Wells, they wrote me again, asking me to hold myself responsible for the costs of such an action.

How could they do that unless he had overtly or covertly threatened them to bring one?

My object in writing "My Dear Wells" is a very simple one.

We have a busy group of thinkers and writers whom I call the Haters of England. They always think and write against their own country. If there is sedition and revolt in any part of the British empire they stir it up. If there is trouble and unrest at home, they foment it. During the war they were worth many army corps to Germany. Now that the war has left us a legacy of new insecurities and perils, these Haters of England are busy spreading disaffection and disunion both in our internal and foreign affairs.

Mr. Wells is one of the most popular of these thinkers and writers who always think and write against England.

For years in our most widely circulated journals he has been spreading theories that tend to promote sedition at home, to break in pieces the British empire, and to shake the foundations of civil order throughout the world. In the present treacherous condition of British industries and finances, imperiled as we are in all parts of the world, I count Mr. Wells as a more dangerous enemy of England than any German who four years ago bombed our women and children.

For this reason I have written "My Dear Wells" and have carefully dissected his main doctrines and theories.

Again and again I have challenged him to meet me in argument upon these matters of deepest concern to hundreds of millions of mankind. When he refused I felt I was justified in using a tone and method of controversy which I should not have allowed myself to use against an opponent for whom I could feel greater respect.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

Surely the Great Novel of the Year

IF WINTER COMES
By
A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

From the first four reviews:

Edwin Francis Edgett, in the Boston Transcript:

No review, no amount of comment or praise, can reveal the warm humanity of this story. It is more serious in manner and plot than "Once Aboard the Lugger," "The Happy Warrior" and "The Clean Heart," with an intense and deep note that is undoubtedly the outcome of its author's mental and physical experiences during the war. Rarely if ever has any such man as Mark Sabre appeared in a novel before, although now that we see him in Mr. Hutchinson's pages he is the perfect incarnation of one aspect of a very lovable masculine mankind. If ever the mirror were held up to nature, it is held up by Mr. Hutchinson in "If Winter Comes"; if ever man were recreated in a literary image, that man is his Mark Sabre.

William Lyon Phelps, in the New York Times:

"If Winter Comes" is not only a thrilling tale, it is an important work of art. It has a real and skillfully constructed plot; the hero is unforgetable, and even the minor characters are impressively human; it abounds in humor and wit, the laughter of fun and the laughter of the mind; it is based on the spiritual truth revealed to the world some nineteen hundred years ago. I do not know when I have had more continuous enjoyment in reading a new book.

"If Winter Comes" is one of the best books of our times. Its author is a creative artist and a spiritual force.

John Clair Minot, in the Boston Herald:

And this is a novel of distinction. Have no doubt about that, those of you unhappily unfamiliar with Hutchinson's earlier work. There is a sense of power in the way the whole thing sweeps along, through the development of character and the unfolding of plot, to the tremendously intense climax that you rarely find in contemporary fiction.

Heywood Broun, in the New York Tribune:

"If Winter Comes" deserves the attention of all readers who love fine prose combined with deep and warm feeling for character. Mark Sabre is one of the most fully revealed persons we have encountered in any novel for a year. . . . With the exception of Tarkington's "Alice Adams" we have not read any book this year of such sustained feeling. We think that "If Winter Comes" is the best novel in English which has come from the war.

Of this novel, which is being favorably compared to TOLSTOY'S "Resurrection" and HAWTHORNE'S "The Scarlet Letter," the Public Ledger says: "Mr. Caine has revitalized the much-disputed question of equal standards for both sexes by forcefully placing before his readers the true meaning of the standard of morality embodied in the law. The denouement is dramatic in the extreme. The author has put his entire genius into this terrible story, in which every human passion is treated with the powerful grasp of human understanding and the literary style of a consummate artist."

THE POTTERS

ILLUSTRATIONS-BY-J. H. STRIEBEL

By J. P. McEVOY

In Sunset Camp—Part Two.

Prologue.

The hiking party, which includes Bill, the Flapper, the Oracle, the two School Teachers, who ask many questions and make many notes, the Nature Lovers, the Geologist and the Walking Guide, have had lunch on the shore of the lake and are now starting back to the camp hotel, nine miles away. . . . Bill is determined to show the Flapper just what a manly sort he is. . . .

Scene III.—The Return from the Lake.

WALKING GUIDE (to Bill):
You pace the others back and I'll stay with these ladies (the Nature Lovers) and help them collect specimens.

BILL (half dead, but too proud to admit it):
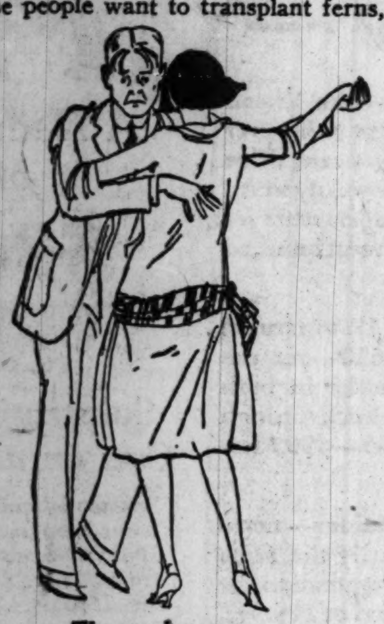
Sure thing. (To Flapper): C'mon, let's slog back. These people want to transplant ferns, I guess.



The weaker sex.

FLAPPER:
I'm with you, lead the way.

(Bill starts out at a 4-mile clip . . . the Flapper, seemingly without an effort, keeps just two paces behind.)

GUIDE (to Impassioned Tourist):
Well, what do you think of the Glacier?

IMPASSIONED TOURIST:
The mightiness! The vastness! My God, how I love it all!

VETERAN TOURIST:
Say, you ought to see the Alps once. You just ought to see 'em, say.

GEOLOGIST:
How clearly the diorite intrusion shows up today, and that other band must be Siyeh limestone, don't you suppose?

IMPASSIONED TOURIST:
The mightiness! The vastness. . . .

FIRST SCHOOL TEACHER (interrupting):
Where do the goats go in the winter?

ORACLE: O, the Forest Rangers fold up the switchbacks and herd them into the vacant spaces.

SECOND SCHOOL TEACHER:
And what do they find to eat?

ORACLE: The Rangers feed them Chinooks.

(The school teachers take this down, making a note to look up a Chinook and see what it is. When they do, they'll be surprised.)

BILL (about a mile ahead):
Waddye say, we rest a while?

FLAPPER (scoffingly):
You're not tired, are you?

BILL (gamely):
O, no; but I thought maybe you might . . . you might. . . .

FLAPPER (scornfully):
Me? . . . I should say not.

(There's nothing for Bill to do after that but keep going if it kills him . . . back in the city he has to take a taxi to go three blocks, but out here she'll walk poor Bill bowlegged. . . . Flappers are like that, and Elizabeth is even more so. . . .)

FIRST NATURE LOVER:
O, what is the name of that darling little berry over there?

GUIDE: That? O, that's fly honeysuckle.

FIRST NATURE LOVER:
I just wish I could get to it, but these woods are so cluttered up with underbrush and stuff. I don't see why they don't tidy the place up a bit.

(Another job for the ranger. He has only 100 square miles of this wilderness to look after . . . what does he do with all his time, anyway?)

BILL (just about to die):
Don't you . . . don't you really want to rest?

FLAPPER (chipperly):
Why no, what made you think of that?

(How could she ask! But Bill's going to win her or die . . . . eight to five he dies. Hours, it seems to him, toil by, but finally the camp shows up. He is barely able to drag himself to his room. The Flapper skips up the steps ahead of him. . . . About an hour later the rest of the party waddle in, dead both ways from the waist . . . that night the Flapper inveigled poor Bill into a dance, and when he limped to bed at 10 o'clock, she was still at it . . . the weaker sex! Poor Bill's romance—blooie!)

Scene IV.—Over the Continental Divide.

All the Potters, except the Baby, are off a horseback ride . . . any tourist will tell you (the next day) that any one is off who goes on one . . . mountain horses would be all right if they were only equipped with shock-absorbing rubber heels and pneumatic spines . . . but when they camel walk, stiff-legged, down a mountain trail you can easily feel your spine jogging through the top of your hat.

MA (who has finally got up with the assistance of all the guides around the place):
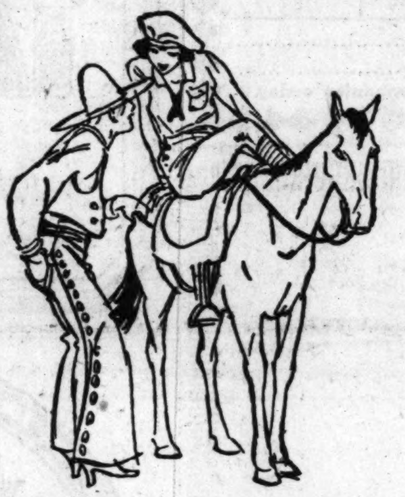
Are you sure this horse won't run away?



"Won't you fix them for me?"

GUIDE (under his breath):
Run? He can hardly walk with her.

MAMIE (blandishingly to Guide):
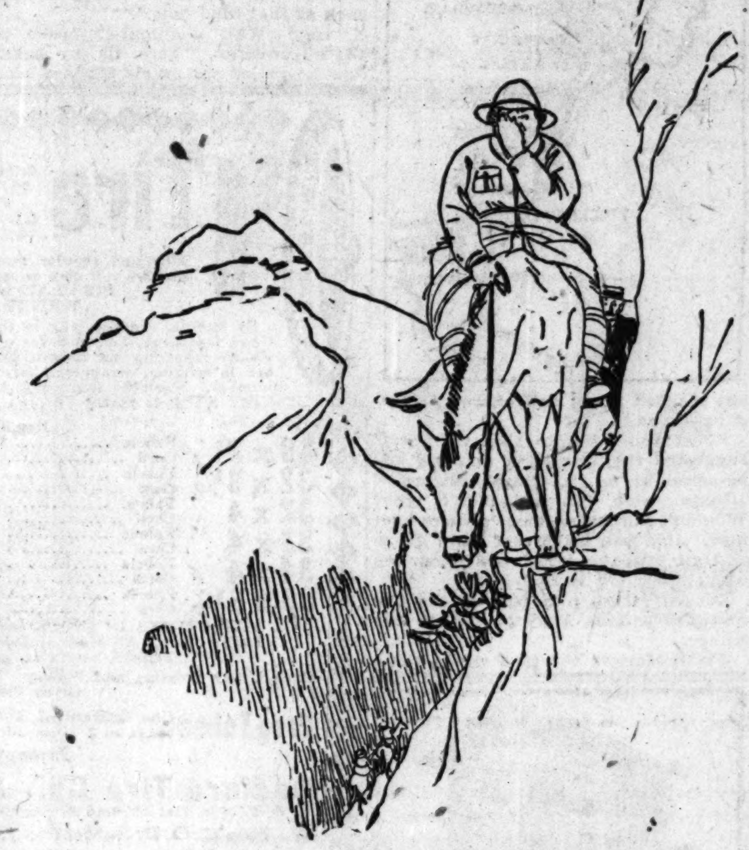
O, I'm sure these stirrups are too short. Won't you fix them for me?

(That's three times already.)



"O, I know he's going to fall off!"

FUSSY OLD GENTLEMAN (loudly):
This isn't what I paid for. I paid for a guide for a special party . . . there's five of us here . . . we're a special party, we don't want to mix up with all these people.

("All these people," which includes the Potters, try to look unconcerned.)

BILL (to nobody particularly):
They ought to give him a private mountain.

PA: Haven't you got a horse that's a little softer?

GUIDE: Let's go.

(They all trail after him single file, until they are well started and then he drops back and takes last place near Mamie, which makes her awful mad, of course.)

INQUISITIVE OLD LADY (to Guide):
How far is it between those posts (indicating mile posts)?

GUIDE (who is somewhat of a wag):
It's supposed to be a mile, lady, but you can't tell nothing about distances in these mountains.

FIRST SCHOOL TEACHER (pointing to sign which she can't read):
What does that say?

ORACLE: That's a sign warning tourists not to chase the mountain goats.

(They begin to go up the first switchbacks which are trails cut zigzag up the side of an almost perpendicular cliff. Ma is riding an ex-pack horse, who has been forced by his profession to walk on the outside edge of the trail or else be brushed off. After he gets up three thousand feet with Ma clinging desperately to the horn of the saddle, he stops every few steps and reaches over the edge of the precipice to graze. If he ever slipped, it would be only 3,000 feet to the bottom. Ma has just got through all the prayers she knows and has started over again.)

GUIDE (who has taken the lead again and is on an upper switchback):
There's a wonderful view of the valley, people.

(Everybody takes a quick look at the valley, and then feverishly resumes concentrated attention on the ears of their respective horses.)

FUSSY OLD GENTLEMAN (mumbling):
This isn't what I paid for. We're a special party of five. This isn't what I paid for at all.

PA (to Guide):
Can't you show this gentleman a special valley for his party of five?

(Here Ma's horse begins to let his outside hind foot slip off the trail. . . . Ma watches the rocks fall with fascinated horror . . . they seem to fall for hours before they disappear . . . poor Ma is a pale green all over and she has to clinch her teeth to keep her heart from jumping out. . . .)

MA (wildly to Guide, as horse slips again):
O, I know he's going to fall off this trail. What will I do?

GUIDE (helpfully):
That's all right, lady; just let 'im go; we got lots of horses.

IMPASSIONED TOURIST (on the very crest of the Divide):
The mightiness! The vastness! My God, how I love it all!

(And at last they are over the Divide. . . . If it took three to help Ma on the horse, it took five to help her off . . . it might have been a better plan to hold her and let the horse walk out from under . . . the look on his face would seem to say he'd be glad to.)

MA: I'll never get on that horse again if I have to walk.

HORSE (to himself):
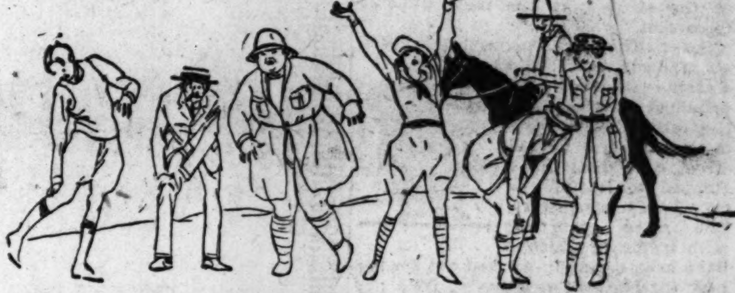
Fair enough, I'd say.

PA: After I get back I'm going somewhere for a vacation.

BILL: Me, too.

CHO. BY TOURISTS:
Ouch, my legs . . . ooh, what a ride . . . what kind of a horse did you have? . . . I think he was a concrete horse. . . . Do we have to go down that again? Ooh, migod. . . .

(AND THAT'S THAT—UNTIL NEXT SUNDAY.)



"Ouch! My legs! . . . Ooh, migod!"

Farmer Sees Bright Prospects in Big Harvest of All Crops

By Frank Ridgway.

FARMERS have been looking through smoke colored glasses practically all summer. Nineteen twentyone was labeled a bad year at the time they stuck their plows in the ground last spring, and they looked into a foggy, hazy future until a few weeks ago.

When the dry season was at its hottest point farmers began to take an invoice, figuring out the ages of their live horses and cattle and rounding up the farm implements into one corner of the lot, preparing to play the leading role in that famous, that destructive rural drama, "I Will Sell at Public Auction." The pessimism is less intense now. The gloom cloud has been gradually fading away since the August rains came and started corn to growing so rapidly that it is now stretching the shuck.

Market Grain "on the Hoof."

Cracks in the silos and holes in the corncribs and pigpens are being patched throughout the entire corn growing district. Feeders are planning to run their meat factories at full speed this fall and winter. Corn will be piled into the cribs and pigs will be held in the pens until they are ready for market. It is common to hear farmers predict that corn will go to 25 cents a bushel by next spring, and most of them have it figured out that the best way to market this year's crop is in the form of pork, beef, and mutton.

The latest crop estimates show a big increase over early reports. Corn suffered a loss of about 91,000,000 bushels in the prospective production in July, but made a gain of 154,000,000 bushels during August. According to the crop estimates on Sept. 1 doors of corncribs in most sections of the corn belt will be bulging when this year's crop is picked. The estimate for corn on that date was placed at 3,186,000,000 bushels.

Rains Speed Up All Crops.

All of the growing crops, including the farmer's vegetable garden, have been growing rapidly since the rains in almost every section of the central states, and that is generally true over the whole country, except in some of the southern states. Cotton growers have suffered, for the crop has been handicapped all season and is beyond the stage where it can even be expected to rally.

With plenty of rains in most sections to stimulate the growth of forage crops and pastures the outlook is favorable for the handling of all classes of live stock at a small cost this fall. Ranchers in the western states are throwing their hats in the air since the rains have transformed their yellow tinted alfalfa and clover fields into green carpets.

In some spots over the upper Mississippi valley basin corn belters have had some of their corn damaged by the strong winds that accompanied the rains. Much of the corn is said to be knocked down and will be difficult to harvest with machinery. Fortunately this happened at the beginning of the silo filling and corn cutting season and most of the broken down corn can be saved.

Speculating on the Corn Crop.

Most of the speculation among farmers during the last few weeks has been with their corn, since it is the principal field crop in this region that is yet to be harvested.

There has been a great improvement recently in the potato and sweet potato crops all over the country wherever they are grown, but there is expected to be a shortage. Just how serious this shortage will be depends somewhat upon the development made by the late plantings.

Late potatoes in Michigan, Indiana, Missouri, and Illinois are growing well and show marked improvement since the recent rains, but the early crop is being harvested and probably will be short.

While fruit growers have suffered a heavy loss this season there is such a demand for most all fruits that they are receiving good prices. In the northern part of the fruit belt of the middle states the crop is exceptionally [illegible] this season, giving the growers a chance to harvest and market their

Variations in Cream Tests

LONG before the Babcock test was heard of, people in the cities were interested in the cream line on the milk bottle that was left at their door every morning. Back in those days the farmer was little interested in the amount of cream in the milk he sold, but now, with milk and cream sold on the butterfat basis, he is eagerly following the cream line himself.

The size of the dairyman's milk and cream check depends upon the percentage of butterfat found in the milk he sells, and recently he has found occasion, he thinks, to register hard kicks against the operators of dairy plants or cream buying stations. For several years many dairymen have been accepting their cream checks with a questioning look out of one corner of the eye that has caused operators at the various cream buying stations over the country to explain, "Why does my test vary?" many times during the year.

If all dairymen and cream buying station operators were familiar with the causes of the variation in the tests, much of this trouble could be avoided. In attempting to familiarize dairymen and operators with the conditions that cause variation, Prof. H. W. Gregory, head of the dairy department at Purdue university, says that usually the man who sells his cream or milk is seldom familiar with the conditions which cause the cream or milk test to vary, and consequently he does not understand why it is that the cream from his herd tested 40 per cent one day, while the day previous it tested 35 per cent.

Operators Seldom Dishonest.

He finds that many creamery operators, as well as farmers, are unfamiliar with the causes of variations of the cream or milk test, and that such conditions excite suspicion and dissatisfaction among the patrons. Dissatisfied dairymen in Indiana asked for an investigation, and it was found by the creamery license division at Purdue that only in a few cases were the plant or station operators dishonest.

Milk from individual cows often shows variations in the percentage of butterfat. Dairy experts say that some of these variations can be explained, while others are still unexplainable.

The significant fact with which farmers are often confused is pointed out by Prof. Gregory, that it is often thought that the richness of the milk varies with the feed the cow receives, but as far as ordinary practice is concerned this is not true. There is no way known of feeding a cow whose milk averages 4 per cent fat for a year to make her average 4.5 per cent, he says. Two herds were tested for fifteen consecutive days and one of them showed a variation of from 4.1 per cent to 5.2 per cent of butterfat in the milk, while the other showed the two extremes of 3.7 per cent and 4.4 per cent.

Rate of Flow Regulates Test.

These variations in the cream test may be caused by the rate of inflow of the milk into the separator, the speed of the separator, temperature of the milk, or amount of water used in flushing the separator bowl.

Dairymen who have made a study of these variations find that the faster the milk flows into the separator the thinner the cream, while the greater the speed of the separator the thicker the cream. Thicker cream comes from the separator when the milk is cool. Ninety degrees Fahrenheit, the temperature of the milk as it comes from the cow, is considered the best temperature at which to separate the milk. It is quite natural that the more skim milk or water used in flushing the bowl, the thinner cream will be.

It is important that dairymen keep their cream in good condition until it is delivered by cooling it immediately after it comes from the separator to avoid the formation of lumps. When the cream is lumpy it is impossible for the operator to take an accurate sample for testing. Pouring warm cream into cold cream also causes lumps. The lumpy condition of cream may be avoided by keeping stirred frequently until it is delivered and samples are taken.

South Chicago's Prize Pumpkin.

In spite of heat and drought this summer South Chicago gardeners raised over $10,000 worth of vegetables in home, community, and school gardens. More than fifty acres of ground have been under cultivation since spring.

Some of the produce raised was recently exhibited at the garden show held by the Y. M. C. A. in coöperation with the merchants of South Chicago. Prizes were put up by the business men for the best displays made by the gardeners and for the biggest vegetables grown in South Chicago this season. Twenty-three different kinds of garden truck were exhibited at the show.

All South Chicago records for pumpkins were shattered by the 66½ pound pumpkin exhibited by Mrs. Fred Reuss, 10815 Avenue N, South Chicago.

TOURS TO THE SOUTHLAND

Weather hereabouts is still ideal for touring, but the season is drawing to a close. The open road then will lead only to the south and southwest. What will probably be the best though not the shortest routes to Florida and California are shown on this map.

The routes from Chicago to Springfield and Indianapolis show how to go to take advantage of the best roads to these points, from where the trails to Los Angeles and Jacksonville respectively may be picked up.

Missouri Pours Big Bond Issue Into Ideal Roads

By J. L. Jenkins.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—[Special Correspondence.]—Sixty million dollars, derived from a bond issue that was voted simply for "good roads" and with practically no program for their definite location, is being spun into leagues of splendid concrete paving which will eventually link every important center of Missouri with every other center and with all cities bound in interstate trade. Years late in its launching of the vast improvement, Missouri is redeeming its highways at a huge cost. Engineers estimate that thousands of dollars are lost to every community in the delay to crop movements following every rain. Excessive freight rates eat deeply into the value of every basic commodity moved in the state. Communities everywhere are impatiently urging rush work on the slow and tedious paving enterprises, and the builders find that they are forced to close stretches of important transportation arteries for construction work at a time when they are needed most.

Links All Centers of Trade.

An official tour of the eastern and middle states, made recently by members of the Missouri highway commission, served to formulate a bond issue construction plan which includes the best features evolved in modern highway building. It calls for permanent, connected roads of concrete or other durable construction to connect all centers of trade and a system of secondary roads to link all county seats with one another and with the pavements. A patrol and maintenance fund has been set aside for the latter purpose, and these roads are going down as fast as the contracts can be let. The program is rounded out by wide highway specifications and careful provisions for a surfacing thick enough to carry the maximum traffic developed in the future.

The surprising feature of the highway campaign, which has swept Missouri like a prairie fire in the last twelve months, is the active interest shown by people in farming communities and villages remote from the main lines of travel. They have studied every angle of the road situation, figured the cost of construction against the greater cost of delay, and have refused to allow anything to stand in the way of immediate improvement.

Delays Costly to Farmer.

"Every day this road system remains unimproved costs me cash money," is the way a Frankford farmer explained his part of the general campaign. "I lost $200 on my corn because a rain came up the day the market was right and I couldn't haul it in. It costs me 80 cents a pound for ham because I pay a freight rate on the Frankford hogs that go in to the yards and another freight rate when they come back to me instead of being able to truck them into St. Louis and enjoy the profit both ways. We cheerfully pay 25 cents to drive over the county toll roads hereabouts, and save money by doing it. There's no more argument for paved roads needed in Missouri. We have been shown."

Wider Roads Gain in East

WHILE no immediate construction activities will result, the state highway department of Pennsylvania for the last two years has been making a study of traffic conditions on thoroughfares leading to important municipalities of Pennsylvania, and eventually steps will be taken to increase the width of the arteries leading into the larger cities of the state.

It is apparent that with the normal increase in the registration of motor vehicles the present width of highways will be entirely inadequate within a few years. At the instance of the state highway department the 1921 legislature gave consideration to this matter and enacted legislation which received the approval of the governor and which will give the state highway department power to extend the width of important thoroughfares so that they will be adequate for the safety of road users.

It is not the purpose of the department immediately to widen these highways, but merely to make a survey of possible future traffic, so that lines may be laid down for the guidance of individuals or others who are contemplating improvements along these routes. The proceeding is similar to that followed by municipalities which establish building lines along undeveloped streets. The department hopes by this procedure to save the enormous expenditure which will necessarily be entailed in widening arterial roadways after improvements have been completed. To this end it is working in conjunction with the Suburban Association of the Main Line, whose membership is composed of students of the highway problem in Philadelphia and the adjacent counties of Delaware, Montgomery, and Bucks.

Commissioner Sadler and the engineering forces of the department are looking ahead fifteen or twenty years to the traffic which will then be using the roads of Pennsylvania. The recent legislature gave the department authority to extend the width of highways to 120 feet. That a number of arterial thoroughfares will be extended to that width eventually is a certainty. If this were postponed and owners of adjoining property had made improvements, the cost would be extraordinarily high, as was the cost of opening the parkway in Philadelphia several years ago. Commissioner Sadler believes that by setting the lines now property owners, if they build, will build back of those lines.

The great increase in motor vehicle traffic within the limits of the larger municipalities of Pennsylvania will eventually necessitate the building of thoroughfares skirting these municipalities and wide enough to accommodate several streams of traffic going in both directions.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Find the Truth About Motordom.

The Question.

What is the most common mistake made by auto drivers?

The Answers.

Policeman Patrick Gilligan, stationed at Michigan avenue and Ohio Street.—The most common mistake of autoists is the failure to obey officers' signals. I believe this to be the cause of a large majority of the accidents in Chicago at the present time. We are straining every nerve for the safety of both autoists and pedestrians, and autoists should help us by religiously observing officers' signals.

Policeman Henry C. Binder, stationed at Michigan avenue bridge—Running out of line, holding conversations while driving along congested streets and boulevards, failure to obey signals of officers on crossings duty; these are the main causes of many sad and absolutely unnecessary accidents. I personally believe that conversation between driver and occupant of auto is the worst common mistake of all and at the same time the most difficult to correct.

Sergt. Thomas Condon, interviewed at Madison and State streets—One of the principal mistakes is the failure of autoists to stop ten feet behind street cars that have stopped to let off or take on passengers. The rules governing auto traffic in Chicago have been carefully worked out for the best interests of everybody, they are not at all complicated, and the autoist should willingly obey all of the rules.

Policeman James F. Durkin, stationed at La Salle and Adams streets—One of the most common and at the same time extremely dangerous mistakes of autoists is turning in the middle of the block without properly hand signaling to those following. The practice of "doubling up" is also the cause of serious accidents. But the importance of signaling by hand whether they are going to stop or in what direction they are going to turn cannot be overestimated.

Policeman Max A. Seeger, stationed at State and Lake streets—So far as the downtown section is concerned, if autoists would not take a chance on street cars and would pay closer attention to officers' signals and whistles there would be very few accidents. The number of excuses given to officers by autoists who have ignored signals is surprising. And it is the offender who causes the accident.

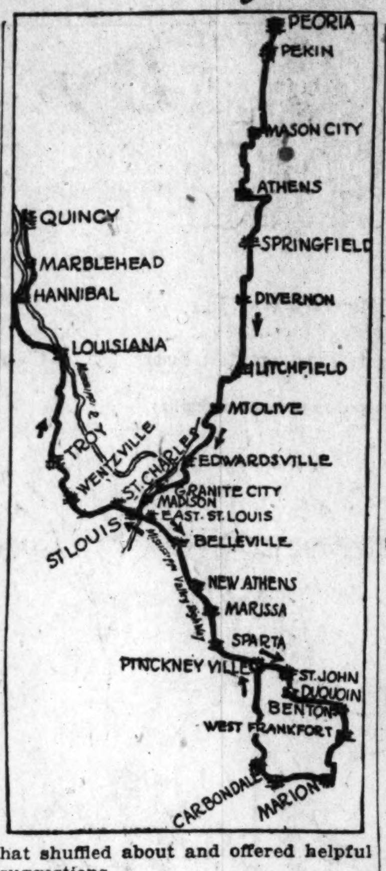
TALES OF THE TRAIL

by Jenks

FRIDAY—Bring along plenty of low and intermediate gears and come on down into Egypt. Here you can be guaranteed more spills and thrills of the trail than anywhere else in the world, more mellow sunshine and drowsy beauty, more friendly interest from calm, unhurried folks, more roses, rain, and deep clay mud than you are likely to find in another lifetime of journeying.

THE TRIBUNE's expedition of inquiry headed south from Peoria yesterday, warily avoiding the battalion of speed cops along the concrete road, and making the run to Springfield in two hours. There an oiled highway follows orange and white markers south to Litchfield, parallel to the state road now under construction, and climbs and twists over unholy clay and dirt roads through Mount Olive into Edwardsville. We found fair paving leading into St. Louis, and left the river metropolis in the late afternoon over the municipal bridge and through a steady rain that swept all of southern Illinois.



Darkness fell with the rain south of Bellville, but a fair oiled road gave us good footing. A few miles north of Marissa we rounded a turn and swung sharply over to the right with the emergency brake screaming to avoid collision with a patient old touring car. It was standing in the exact middle of the road while a perspiring man in near white trousers fumed over a puncture. At his elbow a "super cargo" in palm beach suit and derby hat shuffled about and offered helpful suggestions.

"Jest you get into that thar car," suggested the perspiring driver, "it'll be easier on us all. Howdy, stranger! Mighty nigh hit us, didn't you? Wouldn't hurt us no more'n we're hurt now. Jim, you leave thet casin' alone and git into the car, I tell ye, or we won't never get home."

We left them pumping up the tire and drove into Marissa for a late dinner.

From Marissa the trail winds along the railroad track to the west, across rubbish yards and cinder dumps, turning south into a sea of clay. Sliding through the darkness, we negotiated another abrupt curve and jammed on the brakes again as our lights made out the mud caked outline of the same old touring car dead ahead. The "super cargo," with trousers rolled up was standing on the running board trying to push a muddy piece of timber under the mired back wheel while the driver was on his knees in the mud jacking up the car.

We pushed them out at last and ran through the mud hole after bridging it with fence posts, but found them across the road a half mile beyond. They were both lighting matches and turning out their pockets.

"This son of a gun," explained the driver, "says he lost a roll of money back at that mud hole."

"Hey! Wait a minute," broke in the super-cargo, "here 'tis, by hek!" And he pulled out an old tobacco sack from the lining of his coat.

SATURDAY—A river of yellow clay, cut by deep, heavy ruts, runs from Sparta to Pinkneyville, scatters mire over the pavements of that busy town, and heads out again to Duquoin. From Benton to West Frankfort fair gravel is linked up with Franklin county concrete through the latter town, where big cars and rushing business is the feature.

SUNDAY—Few high lights marked the run today from Marion through Carbondale and Murphysboro into St. Louis. Rough roads, with here and there deep mud on the clay hills, follows the star trail into the city.

TUESDAY—A hard, but rough, road follows the old National trail to St. Charles through the Missouri valley, and the Red Ball route climbs north to the beauties of the Mississippi bluffs about Louisiana and Hannibal. We found the old bottoms road graveled from Hannibal to Quincy and well marked for night driving.

AMBITIOUS CHICAGO WOMEN never let a morning pass without a careful reading of THE TRIBUNE. They know they can't afford to

IMPERIOUS VICTORIA, QUEEN AND WOMAN

BY LYTTON STRACHEY

ALBERT had never been accustomed to giving way; and now, more than ever before, it would be humiliating to do so. Not only was he constantly exasperated by the position of the baroness in the royal household; there was another and a still more serious cause of complaint. He was, he knew well, his wife's intellectual superior, and yet he found, to his intense annoyance, that there were parts of her mind over which he exercised no influence.

When urged on by the baron he attempted to discuss politics with Victoria, she eluded the subject, drifted into generalities, and the began to talk of something else. When at last he protested she replied that her conduct was merely the result of indolence; that when she was with him she could not bear to bother her head with anything so dull as politics.

The baron declared that the root of the mischief was Lehzen; that it was she who encouraged the queen to have secrets; who did worse—undermined the natural ingenuousness of Victoria and induced her to give, unconsciously no doubt, false reasons to explain away her conduct.

A Queen in Love.

It was only natural that in so peculiar a situation, in which the elements of power, passion, and pride were so strangely apportioned, there should have been occasionally something more than mere irritation—a struggle of angry wills. Victoria, no more than Albert, was in the habit of playing second fiddle. Her arbitrary temper flashed out.

Her vitality, her obstinacy, her overweening sense of her own position, might well have beaten down before them his superiorities and his rights. But she fought at a disadvantage; she was, in very truth, no longer her own mistress; a profound preoccupation dominated her, seizing upon her inmost purposes for its own extraordinary ends. She was madly in love.

The details of those curious battles are unknown to us; but Prince Ernest, who remained in England with his brother for some months, noted them with a friendly and startled eye.

One story, indeed, survives, ill authenticated and perhaps mythical, yet summing up, as such stories often do, the central facts of the case.

Albert Locks the Door.

When, in wrath, the prince one day had locked himself into his room, Victoria, no less furious, knocked on the door to be admitted.

"Who is there?" he asked. "The queen of England," was the answer.

He did not move and again there was a hail of knocks. The question and the answer were repeated many times, but at last there was a pause and then a gentler knocking.

"Who is there?" came once more the relentless question. But this time the reply was different. "Your wife, Albert." And the door was immediately opened.

Gradually the prince's position changed. He began to find the study of politics less uninteresting than he had supposed; he read Blackstone and took lessons in English law; he was occasionally present when the queen interviewed her ministers, and at Lord Melbourne's suggestion he was shown all the dispatches relating to foreign affairs.

An important step was taken when, before the birth of the princess royal, the prince, without any opposition in parliament, was appointed regent in case of the death of the queen.

Albert Wins Victory.

Before long the decisive moment came. There was a general election, and it became certain that the Tories at last must come into power. The queen disliked them as much as ever, but with a large majority in the house of commons they would now be in a position to insist upon their wishes being attended to.

[Mr. Strachey explained previously that Victoria after her accession was deeply infatuated with the prime minister, Viscount Melbourne, although he was 58 and had a questionable past His influence almost turned her life into unfortunate channels and almost broke up her love for Prince Albert. His influence persisted even after her marriage.]

Lord Melbourne himself was the first to realize the importance of carrying out the inevitable transition with as little friction as possible, and with his consent the prince, following up the approchement which had begun over the regency act, opened a negotiation with Sir Robert Peel. In a series of secret interviews a complete understanding was reached upon the difficult and complex question of the bedchamber. [Victoria on a previous occasion had insisted on naming her own household attendants.]

The Turning Point.

It was agreed that the constitutional point should not be raised, but that on the formation of the Tory government the principal Whig ladies should retire and their places be filled by others appointed by Sir Robert. Thus in effect, though not in form, the crown abandoned the claims of 1839, and they have never been subsequently put forward.

The transaction was a turning point in the prince's career. He had conducted an important negotiation with skill and tact; he had been brought into close and friendly relations with the new prime minister; it was obvious that a great political future lay before him.

Victoria was much impressed and deeply grateful. "My dearest angel," she told King Leopold, "is indeed a great comfort to me. He takes the greatest interest in what goes on, feeling with and for me, and yet abstaining as he ought from biasing me either way, though we talk much on the subject, and his judgment is, as you say, good and mild."

Lord Melbourne Goes.

She was in need of all the comfort and assistance he could give her. Lord Melbourne was going; and she could hardly bring herself to speak to Peel. Yes, she would discuss everything with Albert now!

Stockmar watched the departure of Lord Melbourne with satisfaction. If all went well the prince should now wield a supreme political influence over Victoria. But would all go well?

An unexpected development put the baron into a serious fight. When the dreadful moment finally came, and the queen, in anguish, bade adieu to her beloved minister, it was settled between them that, though it would be inadvisable to meet very often, they could continue to correspond.

Melbourne could not bear the thought of surrendering altogether the privilege and the pleasure of giving counsel to Victoria—of being cut off completely from the power and the intimacy which had been his for so long and in such abundant measure. Though he had declared that he would be perfectly discreet in his letters, he could not resist taking advantage of the opening they afforded.

He discussed in detail various public questions, and in particular gave the queen a great deal of advice in the matter of appointments. This advice was followed.

The Last of Melbourne.

Stockmar was much alarmed. He wrote a memorandum pointing out the unconstitutional nature of Lord Melbourne's proceedings and the unpleasant position in which the queen might find herself if they were discovered by Peel; and he instructed Anson to take this memorandum to the ex-minister. Lord Melbourne, lounging on a sofa, read it through with compressed lips. "This is quite an apple pie opinion," he said.

He continued to write to the queen as before, and two more violent bombardments from the baron were needed before he was brought to reason. Then, gradually, his letters grew less and less frequent, with fewer and fewer references to public concerns; at last they were entirely innocuous. The baron smiled. Lord M. had accepted the inevitable.

Lehzen Is Conquered.

More than a year was to elapse before another and an equally momentous change was effected—the removal of Lehzen (1842). For, in the end, the mysterious governess was conquered. The steps are unknown by which Victoria was at last led to accept her withdrawal with composure—perhaps with relief; but it is clear that Albert's domestic position must have been greatly strengthened by the appearance of children.

The birth of the princess royal had been followed in November, 1841, by that the Prince of Wales; and before long another baby was expected. The baroness, with all her affection, could have but a remote share in such family delights. She lost ground perceptibly. It was noticed as a phenomenon that, once or twice when the court traveled, she was left behind at Windsor.

The prince was cautious; at the change of ministry, Lord Melbourne had advised him to choose that moment for decisive action; but he judged it wiser to wait.

At length he perceived that he need hesitate no longer—that every wish, every velleity of his had only to be expressed to be at once Victoria's. He spoke, and Lehzen vanished for ever. No more would she reign in that royal heart and those royal halls. Returning to her native Hanover, she established herself at Buckeburg in a small but comfortable house, the walls of which were entirely covered by portraits of her majesty.

Harmony at Last.

The baron, in spite of his dyspepsia, smiled again: Albert was supreme.

The early discords had passed away completely—resolved into the absolute harmony of married life. Victoria, overcome by a new, an unimagined revelation, had surrendered her whole soul to her husband.

Her dear mamma, too, [the duchess of Kent, had been relegated to obscurity when Victoria ascended the throne and there had been bitter quarrels], had been drawn once more into the family circle, for Albert had brought about a reconciliation, and the departure of Lehzen had helped to oliberate the past.

In Vivtoria's eyes, life had become an idyll, and, if the essential elements of an idyll are happiness, love and simplicity, an idyll it was.

The past—the past of only three years since—when she looked back upon it, seemed a thing remote and alien that she could explain it to herself in no other way than as a kind of delusion—an unfortunate mistake.

The Bliss of a Queen.

Happy, certainly she was; and she wanted every one to know it. Her letters to King Leopold are sprinkled with raptures. "Oh! my dearest uncle, I am sure if you knew how happy, how blessed I feel, and how proud I feel in possessing such a perfect being as my husband." Such ecstasies seemed to gush from her pen unceasingly and almost of their own accord.

When one day, without thinking, Lady Lyttleton described some one to her as being "as happy as a queen," and then grew a little confused, "Don't correct yourself, Lady Lyttleton," said her majesty. "A queen is a very happy woman."

Lazy Ben

(Franklin by nature was indolent.—Biography by John T. Morse.)

By Guy Lee.

Ben Franklin was an editor, philosopher, and sage;
His wisdom, wit, and preachments were the universal rage.
He snatched the lightning from the clouds, the scepter from the tyrant,
And always had a kindly word to aid the young aspirant.
There wasn't anything in which his genius didn't mix:
He led in school and science and in war and politics.
He wrote and talked, advised and helped, and had a heap of fun
In bettering his neighbor's lot—and never got quite done.

Ben Franklin soothed the Injuns and the British, and he taught 'em,
But when they got his dander up, by Jupiter, he fought 'em!
He went to France and raised the cash to set the Yankees free,
And made the whole world rooters for the Land of Liberty.
His labors for his fellow man encompassed every phase,
And he was busy all the time throughout his mortal days.
For four-and-eighty years the doc for work was simply crazy—
I wonder how much he'd have done if he had not been lazy!

EDWARD H. GOODRICH,
Director of Science and Automobile Dept., Technical High School,

—they valued it far above its cost, then—

"I have previously owned 14 different makes of cars, ranging up to $3500. Have found the weak spot in all of them but Essex. My total mileage is 38,598 miles at a total repair cost of $91.52."

A. C. ALEXANDER, M. D.,

N. D. NAMAN,
Naman's Inc.,
Waco, Tex.

and now you save $420

Where can you get such a value?

The Essex has always been an outstanding value by every standard of price and quality comparison.

Since its reduction of price this advantage is even more evident. Especially interesting now is a price to price measurement of the Essex against cars you have regarded as comparable to it in quality.

Will you today find any car that even approaches Essex in quality and ability, within hundreds of dollars of its cost? And doesn't its low cost with such quality appeal to judicious buyers, whether they are considering a car slightly less in cost, or have been seeking Essex quality in some much costlier car?

Farmer Sees Bright Future in Big Harvest

crop in advance of the usual dates, relieving them of this task when the heavy fall work begins.

Plowing for Winter Wheat.

Heavy rains have made it possible for thousands of acres of stubble to be plowed for the fall sowing of wheat. Farmers are fortunate to have an abundance of comparatively cheap labor available and with the favorable condition of their early fall work up to this time they will be able to handle their operations economically and efficiently. Recent heavy rains have advanced the fall work several weeks because they moistened the ground and made much of it available for plowing which was too dry before.

Most farmers are optimistic and believe they will be able to seed the fall wheat crop without drought interferring, and the Hessian fly is not as threatening in most localities as it has been in previous years.

Live Stock Back to Farm.

One of the most outstanding indications of a renewed prosperity in the rural districts is the rapidly increasing movement of live stock from the central markets back to the farms, where they will be kept to consume the farmers' corn crop before they are finally taken to the slaughtering pens. Last Wednesday 18,000 ewes and lambs were taken from the stock yards at Chicago and put back on the farms by farmers who have plenty of roughage and cheap feed to use in giving them a good finish for the market. This is the largest number of ewes and lambs—17,000 of them were lambs—that has been shipped from this big market back to the farm in two years. This is an important fact when it is considered that the tendency during August was downward rather than upward. There were only 284,598 sheep and lambs shipped back to the farm last month, a decrease of 258,137, or 47 per cent, compared with the same month last year.

On the other hand, the increase in the movement of feeder cattle back to the farm during August also shows that farmers are becoming more optimistic. Last month there were 291,388 feeders taken away from the nine leading markets, while there were only 227,756 sent back to the farms during August last year, an increase of 63,632 cattle, or 27.93 per cent. Up to August, however, there had been a light movement of feeders from the central live stock markets to the farms.

Helps to Hold Stock.

The $50,000,000 cattle fund was subscribed to help farmers hold their stock on the farms or buy more. This has greatly helped the situation. The selling of small grain from this year's crop has helped to put money into the farmer's pocket which he has been able to use in buying stock or pay debts that have accumulated during the last year or two, enabling him to keep his live stock and feed his crop.

The great burden on the American farmer today, he thinks—and for this nobody is blaming him—is that he is not able to buy on the same basis that he sells. It is not likely that the farmer will quit grumbling until the prices he has to pay for commodities that he uses and the wages of his hired nand have come down to correspond with the prices he gets for the products he sells.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville

MAJESTIC.

Bal Lloyd and Ben Rubin:

"I have a wonderful ear for music, look at my drums."

"If a snake bites a fella he can get all the whisky he needs to cure it. I know a man who has a biting snake that he rents. I waited in line two hours the other day and when it came my turn the snake was too tired to bite. Just my luck."

"Where were you last July 2?"

"I was in Newark, N. J., at the Dempsey-Carpentier fight."

"You're crazy, the fight was in Jersey City, fifteen miles from Newark."

"Well, I had one of those $5 seats."

"I hurt my knee the other day. I'll have to go to Africa to have it fixed."

"Why Africa?"

"That's where the Negroes."

"That's a funny looking hat, it doesn't fit you."

"Yes, it's funny I can't find a hat to fit in any of these Chicago restaurants."

Test this Car's Value by its Performance

IT IS now a little over six months since we introduced the Oldsmobile "47" in this community.

The performance record of this car during that period, leads us to state without reservation that in power, performance, smooth easy riding, and lack of vibration, it surpasses any other car that approximates it in price, size or weight.

We make this statement carefully and thoughtfully because we know it is backed not only by our own judgment but by the consensus of expert opinion and owner-experience.

And now come lower prices to still further emphasize Oldsmobile's policy of exceptional value.

Everywhere the Oldsmobile "47" is known, it is spoken of with unconcealed enthusiasm; so much so, that we are thoroughly convinced that any intelligent man or woman who will take the trouble to compare values will decide favorably on the outstanding superiorities of this Oldsmobile model.

For that reason we are eager to have you make your own test of this car's value. We feel certain you have only to inspect this car—to ride in it and drive it yourself—to be readily convinced that in design, appearance and performance it yields nothing, except size, to the highest priced and best-known eight-cylinder cars on the market.

If you are looking for a car at an extremely reasonable price, that will give you not only dependable transportation, but also true 8-cylinder luxury of travel, longer life and economy of up-keep, we strongly recommend that you let the Oldsmobile "47" demonstrate its finer performance by a personal trial.

We have received a special shipment of Oldsmobile "47's" in anticipation of this announcement and are prepared to handle orders for this model with prompt delivery.

Real Economy in Closed Car Transportation

Today's Oakland Six Sedan and Coupe are not seasonable purchases. Instead they are all-year-round investments in personal transportation.

To those who wisely demand economy in the car they drive, but who have felt that closed cars are too costly to own and operate, Today's Oakland Six closed models offer much. From 18 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline, and 12,000 to 16,000 miles per set of tires are just two noteworthy features of economy that together with the low price have contributed greatly to the popularity of Today's Oakland Six Sedan and Coupe.

These unusual equipment values are standard on Oakland Six Closed Models:

Cord Tires
Gabriel Snubbers
Metal Visor
Perfection Heater
Cowles Locks on Doors

The Oakland Creed

To build at a fair price an automobile so sightly as to uphold its owner's honest pride, so competent as to arouse his general respect, so reliable as to win his confidence, so economical as to serve his highest interest—this has been the purpose, is now the accomplishment, and will continue to be the endeavor to which Oakland devotes the whole of its energies, its resources and its skill.

The Prices of Today's Oakland Six are: Touring Car $1145, Roadster $1095, Sedan $1725, Coupe $1625 and Sport Model $1265—f. o. b. Pontiac

AVIATION

Chicago Airmen Happy Over City's Interest in Races

By Morrow Krum.

The first air race ever held by Chicagoans was staged last Monday, Labor day. Nine Canadian Curtiss airplanes were flown in the contest, all but one finishing. The one that did not finish turned over on the Dempster street field when the pilot attempted to touch wheels of the ship on the ground. The accident was not serious, as neither pilot nor passenger received a scratch.

The flying time of the winner, David Behnke, was a few seconds more than 44 minutes for the fifty mile course. and the other contestants all finished within five minutes after Behnke landed. The takeoff was made from Ashburn field. The pilots flew over and touched their wheels on the checkerboard field, the Lincoln Tavern field, the Dempster street field, and Nimmo Black's Peterson avenue field.

The speed of the airplanes was not unusual. All were of the Canuck type, capable of doing an average speed of seventy-five miles an hour. No world's records were established, neither had they been expected.

The two outstanding features of the race were the fact that there were no serious accidents and that thousands of Chicagoans went to the various flying fields to watch the contest.

No long campaign of publicity preceded the event. No money was spent on preparations. Yet more than 5,000 people were on Ashburn field when the contest finished.

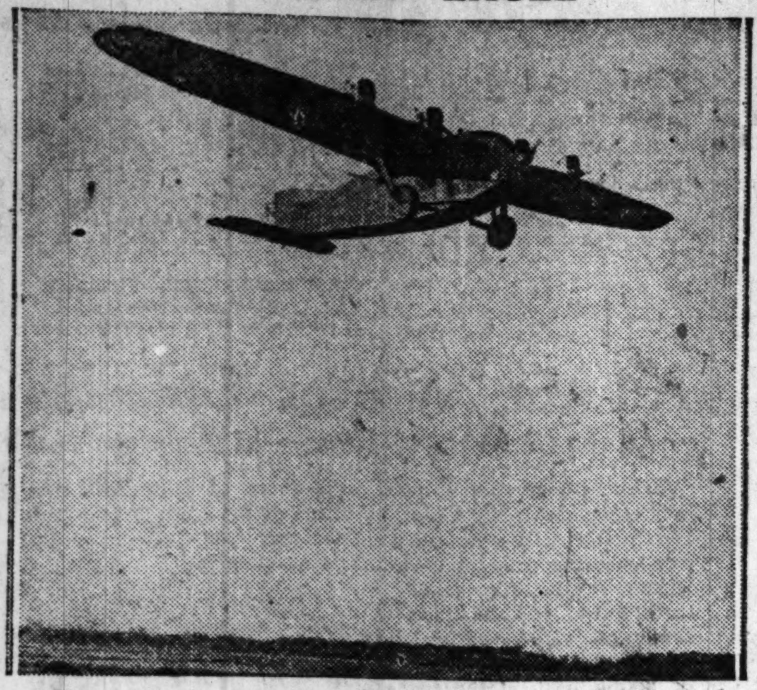
More than 2,000 persons were on each of the other fields. These people were thrilled, perhaps, by the straight flying. Many of them went away convinced that aviation is a bit more safe than it was in 1912. The crowds go to indicate that Chicago is interested in flying, that Chicago people want their city to become the aviation center of the United States, and that they will support such a campaign.

So Chicago airmen are happier today than they have been for many months.

New Landing Station.

The Newport Chamber of Commerce of Newport, R. I., is preparing to establish a flying boat station and is constructing ways and other facilities for visiting air yachts.

A GERMAN "EAGLE"



The metal monoplane with the motors in the wings, pictured above, was built in Germany by Rohrbach, the engineer. The ship has a span of 32 meters, four 230 horse power motors, and has attained a speed of 210 kilometers an hour. There is room for sixteen passengers in the cabin.

Here Is Another Reason Why You Will Like to Fly

A VETERAN of the fragile air service of the great war is now in Calcutta tending his business with the usual seriousness of a true Englishman, yet finding time to do a little flying over India. In a letter to a friend in Chicago he wrote the following:

"I have two machines out here, a two seater Avro and a wee-wee Scout called a Pup. . . . I can assure you that there is absolutely nothing which will help one to view the cares of life from their true perspective like flying.

'A few months ago we had a visit from the Duke of Connaught, and I thought it would be interesting to fly up the line and meet him and then watch his arrival from the air, which thing I did. I climbed up to 5,000 feet and went down the line till I saw below me a thing like a little white maggot crawling along—this being the royal train.

"Well, it crawled along over little bridges and through little stations till it reached a funny little medley of streets and houses, which is called Calcutta. At the wee station I could just see a little red carpet put down and some funny little men walking down the platform to a line of pigmy carriages and horses.

"Now, I am not scoffing at royal visits and civic functions. The point is—there was I, sitting as it were with the gods and watching the sons of men carrying out their little duties. That is one side of the picture. The other side: Suppose I had been in the royal procession, meeting this uncle of our king. How different my point of view woud have been! I should have felt important and " heavy " and as one of those on whom the welfare of India depended. And rightly so. Yet perched up there in the air I saw another view of the picture, and also rightly so. Just the difference of mental perspective owing to a difference of physical perspective! D'you get me, Steve? Isn't that a long wind-

Flowers for Flyers.

Chile is exerting herself in regard to the promotion of both military and commercial aviation. In regard to the first named, the government recently gave its support to a collection of funds throughout the country in order to provide a national military air service. A considerable proportion of the sums raised has been received from the sale of floral emblems offered in the streets by Chilean ladies, both native and foreign. The Chileans seem to have subscribed liberally towards this object, the amounts collected in Valparaiso and the sea coast suburb, Vina-del-Mar, having amounted to nearly 400,000 dollars in the course of one day. In the capital, Santiago, over 260,000 dollars were collected, and more than one million pesos in all have now been raised.

Sweden.

For civil aviation the Swedish government has applied for a grant of 170,000 kroner for 1921 and 360,000 kroner for 1922. Also 60,200 kroner for 1921 and 60,800 kroner for 1922 are requested for improving the meteorological service.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

I NEVER KNEW.

(Adapted and Dedicated to the Kindly Medics.)

FIRST VERSE.

I always thought I'd prefer to be healthy,
Thought that I'd like to stay well;
I never dreamed I'd live to see a doctor,
But you can never tell,
For now I love a doctor's place—
I find he has a kind old face.

CHORUS.

I never knew where to get a libation,
Doctor, till I came to you.
I didn't care at all
For wood alcohol,
Or for Home Sweet, Home Sweet Brew.
Dear M. D., you for me;
Since you're prescribing pints of liquid T. N. T.
I never knew how to sprinkle my giblets,
Doctor, till I came to you.

SECOND VERSE.

I simply dote upon bronchial troubles,
I love a cold in the head;
Coughing and sneezing I find very pleasing,
With drinks around my bed.
If I have prescription pints,
I don't mind an ache in my jints.

CHORUS.

I never knew where to get a libation.
Doctor, till I came to you.
I didn't care at all
For wood alcohol,
Or for Home Sweet, Home Sweet Brew.
Whisky, such! a quinine touch.
I take the whisky first—the quinine later—much,
I never knew how to sprinkle my tonsils,
Doctor, till I came to you.

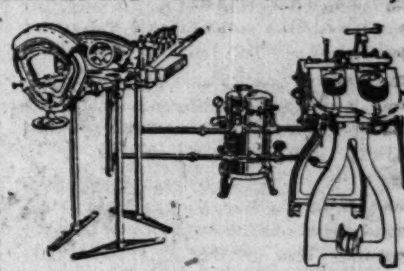
ENCORE CHORUS.

Let us pray
Oremus Te,
Perhaps we'll get a sacramental gin frappe.
I never knew I could be so religious
Till the Volstead act went through.

The Tire, Repair Business Will Make You a Fortune!

Did You Ever Stop and Consider That Every Automobile Which Passes You Is Wearing Out and Consuming Tires?

Did it ever occur to you that where there is so much depreciation and replacement necessary there must be an ever-increasing and dependable income flowing into the hands of tire repair men fortunate enough to be in position to keep in service the forty million tires which are at present grinding away for all they are worth, with the seeming desire to create more business and work for this industry?



It is this condition and the continual addition of millions of new cars to this vast army each season which has caused this industry to grow by leaps and bounds, and while other industries have suffered on account of the present business depression, the Tire Repair business continues to thrive and produce large financial returns to those who were shrewd and far-sighted enough to choose this tremendously profitable and fascinating occupation over all others.

There is a crying need now for first-class Tire Repair Shops in smaller towns, and if you will take the time to investigate this statement you will be surprised at the wonderful opportunities offered to men establishing themselves in this business in towns with a population as low as five hundred.

We maintain one of the largest and best equipped Tire Repair Schools in the World, and are also one of the largest manufacturers of complete tire shop equipment and supplies. We teach you this business absolutely FREE, supply you with tools, find you suitable locations, and equip your shop completely on liberal time payments.

You owe it to yourself and your future to at least investigate our proposition, and if you will call or write at once we will be glad to show you how easily you can establish yourself in a well-paying Tire Repair business without placing yourself under any obligation, financially or otherwise.

Methodists Will Hold Rock River Conference Here

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

THE eighty-second session of the Rock river conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held Oct. 4 to 11 in the Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, West 64th and South Paulina streets. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will be the presiding officer of the sessions and will be assisted by District Superintendent Polemus H. Swift and the Rev. John H. DeLacy, pastor of the Thoburn church, who will be the conference host. The pastor has started to make arrangements for the entertainment of the ministers of the district who will attend the conference. The Rock River conference is the second largest of the Methodist church in the United States.

Important changes in pastorates of Methodist churches will be made at the end of the conference.

One of the features of the seven days' program is the course of lectures to be given by Harry F. Ward of the Union Theological seminary on the general topic, "The Future of the Church in Modern Industry." The lectures will be delivered Oct. 5, 6 and 7 and will be open to the public.

The annual memorial service and ordination of deacons and elders will be held Sunday, Oct. 9. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will deliver the sermon at the morning session, and the Rev. Charles M. Stuart, president of Garrett Biblical institute, will be the speaker at the memorial service at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

YOU WIN—
When You Are Trained

What You Do with Your Evenings Largely Determines Your Success or Failure.

A few hours spent each week in study and congenial associations with other men will help you do your work better. It will prepare you for advancement, keep your mind keen and alert and prevent you from getting into a rut.

TEN YEARS FROM NOW

What do you expect to be doing?
Will you be taking or giving orders?

Unless you are more fortunate than 99 out of every 100 men, your spare time represents the largest share of your capital.

You may take the position of the man who says that he works hard all day and is entitled to a good time in the evening—and your evenings will produce debts and possibly other liabilities from the moral and physical standpoints.

Or you may spend a portion of your evenings in well directed study, which will yield for you far greater dividends than the best stocks ever placed on the market.

CENTRAL Y M C A SCHOOLS offer courses which meet the needs of men and boys in all degrees of educational advancement. Last year the enrollment exceeded 4,000 students. Federal Taxes are with us to stay!

THE demand for men who have an authoritative knowledge of income tax laws and procedure is constantly increasing. New rulings, regulations and precedents continually present new problems. Accountants, lawyers, bankers, and students preparing for Institute and C. P. A. examinations require a knowledge that is both authoritative and up-to-date as provided in the combined, by special arrangement, with

Walton Course In FEDERAL INCOME and PROFITS TAX PROCEDURE and Accounting

THE CORPORATION TRUST COMPANY
Federal Income Tax Service and War Tax Service

The Walton Course, because of its logical treatment and arrangement of subject matter, because of the direct references in the lectures to official rulings, because of its constant revision (being in loose-leaf form), is valuable not only as a course but as an authoritative reference work as well. All changes and revisions in both Course and Service made during the calendar year are furnished to each subscriber. This insures up-to-the-minute information on all income tax matters, and puts at the finger-ends of every Walton student unerring knowledge, not only of the Federal tax laws but of every formal official decision and regulation, hundreds of informal rulings and precedents, Supreme court and other court decisions affecting specific tax problems.

The Walton Income Tax Course and The Corporation Trust Company's Services will give you the necessary training to take advantage of the really splendid opportunities offered in the big field of income tax work to improve your position and increase your income.

Ours is an organization where character counts.

Of course we want sales—but we are more interested in how you sell than in how much you sell.

If you know that you are a salesman—if you stand four square—if you have the courage to lose a sale rather than to make it on a basis that you know is wrong—then answer this advertisement.

PAIGES

5 and 7 passengers, coupes, sedans, roadsters, sport models.

NOTE—When Bird-Sykes say "rebuilt Paige" they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear—replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repairing body—refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

CHANDLER

Used car dealers tell us that Chandlers are always in demand.

Why is Chandler resale value so high?

Because lasting qualities are built into them at first!

Because there have been no chassis changes in 6 years and only minor changes in 8 years. The principal changes have been in body design only. This means the design and quality was right and has continued better and better. It means it is easy to get repairs and part supplies, as the models are not obsolete. It means when you are ready to sell or trade your Chandler you have a car which will bring a high price, as it is a current model and therefore salable. See these cars we are offering and compare the service they will give with that of a new car at the same price.

Chandler Sedan, '20 series. This is our latest model sedan and is identical in every detail with the present model. The mechanical condition is as good as the day it was first delivered. The upholstery is rich tan velour. All bright parts have been renickled. The finish is new. This is our first offering this year of this late model sedan. We advise quick action on your part, as the price of this car will sell it on sight. Special Price, $1,950.00.

Chandler Coupe, 1920 series. This car was turned in to us on a new sedan. It has received the best of care and is in excellent condition. We have made all necessary repairs and adjustments after making a complete examination. It is refinished in standard Chandler blue and black, with cream wheels. All bright parts renickeled; 4 very good cord tires; dark tan velour upholstery, with detachable linen covers. Remember, this is an exact duplicate of our present model. Special Price, $1,850.

Chandler Sedan, '18 series. This car has been thoroughly overhauled in our shops. Needless to say it runs as well as when new. The gray whipcord upholstery is in excellent condition. Body is refinished in standard Chandler colors. All bright parts are renickled. Our price on this car is very low. Special, $1,560.

Chandler Coupe, '19 series. This car is in exceptional condition throughout. Has just been refinished in standard Chandler colors. Is equipped with excellent set of Goodyear cord tires. We know this car is ready to give a great deal of hard service at a low cost. Our price is low. Special, $1,460.

Chandler Touring, '20 series. This is a late model car that is almost an exact duplicate of our present model. The original finish is excellent. Is equipped with complete set of new tires. Your decision must be made quickly on this car. It will sell on sight at our low price. Special, $1,150.00.

Chandler Chummy Rd., '19 series. The appearance of this car exactly resembles a new car. The car has been thoroughly rebuilt. Refinished a beautiful Chandler blue, with cream wheels. This is an ideal car for a small family. The expense of using this car will be extremely low. Special, $975.00.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

MEMORIAL TREES TO LINE STREETS OF NEW SUBURB

Midlothian Highlands to Use Tribune Idea.

BY AL CHASE.

Three hundred world war fighters will have their names perpetuated by having 300 American elm trees planted and named for them along one mile of thoroughfare in Chicago's new subdivision—Midlothian Highlands, a "garden suburb" being developed by John R. Robertson & Co. along lines advocated by the National Association of Real Estate Boards at its recent convention in Chicago.

"Trees are one of the most important things in any community," said John R. Robertson, "and in this instance when we plant 300 elms we're able to accomplish two results, beautify the streets and carry out THE TRIBUNE war memorial idea."

Two Miles East of Midlothian Club.

Midlothian Highlands comprises 160 acres of rolling prairie land bounded by West 147th street on the north, South Central Park avenue on the east, South Crawford avenue on the west and West 151st street on the south. It adjoins the Midlothian station of the Rock Island, which is about two miles east of the Midlothian Country club. The 300 war memorial trees will be planted next spring along 147th street and Crawford avenue.

"We've been trying for fifteen years to buy the Ludwig farm at Midlothian," said Mr. Robertson. "In 1908 I made John Ludwig a proposition and he turned me down. Then in 1915 he died and we approached the widow and were again turned down. In the meantime the oldest boy grew up and left the farm. Then the daughter became a dressmaker in Blue Island. The youngest son began to show signs of wanting to taste city life. Still Mary Ludwig wouldn't sell.

Keeps Interest in Farm.

"Then one day while talking to her I suggested that she sell me all the land but the farm house and that she keep a life interest in the house. The she should retain possession of the she should reatin possession of the house and one acre of orchard as long as she wanted to or until her death, when it would come to me. She says it makes her heart ache to see the new subdivision houses going up on what was once her old farm land."

There were eighty acres on the Ludwig farm. The Louis Hageman eighty acre farm also was bought. Five acres have been set aside for a community park. It will be improved with a clubhouse, ball ground, tennis courts, etc. An artesian well is being drilled in one corner of the park to supply water to the entire town. There already is a school and sites for several churches have been set aside.

Whole Tract to Be Zoned.

The tract has been surveyed into twenty business lots, each 60x132, ninety half-acre residence lots and 111 acre lots. Twenty of the acre lots and fourteen of the half-acre lots already have been sold and ten houses are under construction. Over three miles of water main will be put in before cold weather so that building can start on a large scale next spring. The whole tract is to be zoned, confining all business to one street and barring all factories.

The big sewer from Oak Forest is now being built north to the Sag channel and will care for all sewage from Midlothian Highlands. Gas will be piped from Posen and electric lighting wires already are in. There already is a township school. Lots will sell from $600 ot $1,000 for the half acres and $1,000 to $1,500 for the acre lots.

Forest Preserve Report Almost a "Best Seller"

If the forest preserve commissioners charged for their new annual report on Cook county's forest preserve, it surely would be listed in Fanny Butcher's "six best sellers," for the first edition of 30,000 already has been given out and a second edition, probably of 30,000 is contemplated. The Chicago Plan commission has asked for 500 copies of this attractive and useful guide to the outer park belt for distribution all over the world. Joseph Dillabough, formerly with THE TRIBUNE and now secretary of the Chicago Zoölogical garden, wrote the text of the book, and was assisted in compilation by Peter J. Ellert. The book was issued by the direction of President Samuel Ryan of the forest preserve district.

Here's a New Year's Gift for 70 Chicago Bachelors

Here's a prospective New Year's gift to the Chicago bachelors—at least a few of 'em. On that date the seventy room Jonquil aartment hotel, at the northwest corner of Ashland avenue and Jonquil terrace, designed by Architect Paul F. Olson, will be open for unmarried men. There will be showers with each room and a restaurant and four shops on the first floor. Mrs. Anna Strohm of 847 Oakdale avenue is owner. It will cost, including furnishings, $200,000. Present plans call for rooms to rent for around $10 a week and up.

PLANS NORTH SHORE RESIDENCES.

Architect Leon E. Stanhope has awarded contracts for a $40,000 residence on Bluff street, Glencoe, for A. C. Allen. It is designed in the Spanish renaissance. He also has drawn plans for a $30,000 residence for B. B. Clover to be built at 2247 Orrington avenue, Evanston, in the modern English type of architecture.

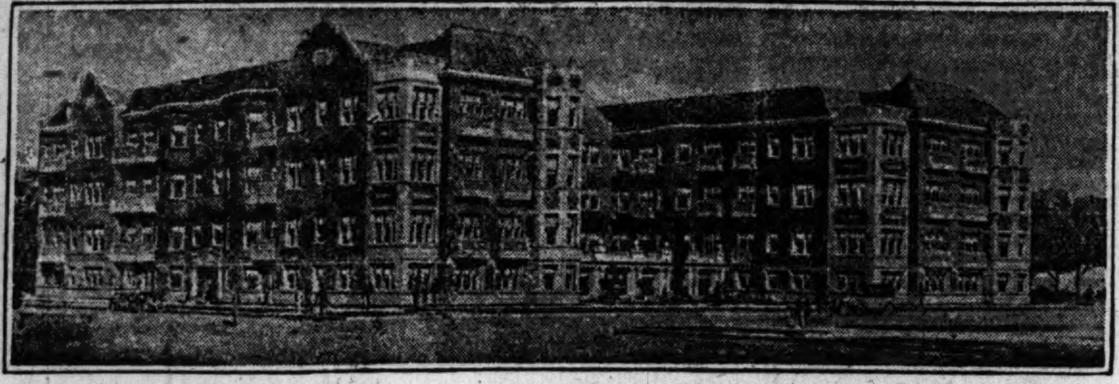
Another Big Flat Building for Sheridan Road



WORK will start within two weeks on the new Erdanelle combination apartment building and apartment hotel at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Lunt avenue, from plans by Architect Andrew Sandegren. It will cost $300,000 and have fifty-four apartments of two, three, and four rooms each, all with kitchenettes. The site is 150x150. There will be a large rotunda and lounge and also a large dining room. It will be of light brown brick trimmed with Bowling Green stone, with a green tile roof. The owners, S. A. Danielson and John S. Erickson, hope to have it completed by next April.

GOLD COAST FLATS TO BE MADE INTO STUDIOS AND HOTEL

Miss Sybil Makeel has bought the four story eight flat building at 1203-05 North State street, 40x102, from Richard R. Kirby, wholesale jeweler, for a reported $50,000, and will remodel it into twelve modern apartments on the first three floors, and artists' studios on the top floor. Wolf, Sexton, Harper & Truex are drawing the plans.

The same architects and engineers are converting the Lincoln apartments at 1419-21 North Dearborn street into a one and two room apartment hotel. Hiram Hewitt has just bought it from R. W. Walters for a reported $47,500. It is 40x150. Crowe Brothers & Co. handled both deals and will manage both properties.

1922 Own Your Home Show to Be Held Last of March

Chicago's second annual Own Your Home exposition will be held in the Coliseum, opening March 25 and closing April 1. Official announcement of the dates was made yesterday by Fred C. Balthaser, assistant manager of the Chicago exposition, who volunteers the information that even at this early date, most of the exhibitors who made the 1921 show a notable success, have made space reservations for the 1922 exposition.

Robert H. Sexton, managing director of the Chicago and New York expositions, fixed the dates for the Chicago show after visiting several midwest cities and making a personal investigation of the home building prospects for 1922. Basing his statement on personal observations in Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, and St. Louis, Mr. Sexton predicts unprecedented activities throughout the middle west in the residential building field for 1922.

His prediction is based on evidence that building material prices will have been completely equalized by the first of the year, labor wage controversies will have been settled and duplex residences will be greater than ever before.

Mark Levy Pays $50,000 for North La Salle Street Fee

Mark Levy of the firm of Mark Levy & Bro. has bought as a personal investment the fee in the property at 110 North La Salle street, directly opposite the city hall, from the First Trust and Savings bank, trustee for the James A. Murphy estate, for $50,000. The property is subject to a ninety-nine year lease, made thirty-one years ago from Henry J. Willing as lessor, to Lyman Baird and Francis Bradley, lessees, at a net annual rental of $3,000. This makes it a 6 per cent net investment. The lot is 21x112 and is improved with a five story building. It is said the land value is considerably in excess of the value of the fee. Robert L. Davis of the First Trust represented the seller and Mark Levy & Brother the buyers.

Begin Work on 36 Flat Building in Evanston

Work has just started on another big Evanston flat building at 2108 Sherman avenue by A. F. Carlson. It will be known as the University Court apartments and will contain eighteen three room flats and eighteen with four rooms. It will cost a reorted $160,000. Cochran & McCluer have underwritten a bond issue on the property. According to Smart and Golee of Evanston, the roperty managers, the building will be ready before the spring renting season.

Hoosier Farm Traded for Big Woodlawn Apartments

A reported $140,000, subject to $70,000, was paid by Eva C. Peck to Martin Moelin of Burlington, Ia., for the seventy-two flats at 6615-35 Kenwood avenue, according to the brokers, Joseph C. Ficklin and E. P. Albee. An Indiana farm was given as part payment.

West Suburban Hospital Begins Work on Addition

The West Suburban hospital, Austin avenue and Ontario street, Oak Park, has started work on a new ninety bed addition to cost $25,000. Holmes & Flinn are architects.

RAINBOW CHOCOLATE SELLS BUILDING.

The Rainbow Chocolate company has sold the five story building, together with the leasehold interest in the ground, at 123-27 South Jefferson street, 50x160, to Edmund J. English, for a reported $40,000. Mr. English will spend $50,000 in remodeling and then rent the entire property. He assumes a lease on the ground expiring in seventy-four years, at $2,000 annually. Hart & Wheaton were brokers.

Building Permits

Eighteen building permits were issued, among which were the following:

3759 S. Ashland-av., 1 story brick and concrete warehouse addition; Pullman Couch company, owner; A. Epstein, engineer; E. W. Sproul, mason and carp.	$15,000
7438 Calumet-av., 2 story brick flats; Mrs. Johnson, owner; J. Kocher, arch.; C. A. Carlson, mason; John Gudmundsen, carp.	10,000
5917 S. Mozart-st., 2 story brick; Joe Schaeffer, owner and carp.; A. C. Lund, arch.; Val Schaflein, mason	10,000
1454-56 Warner-av., 2 story brick flats; J. Schoendorf, owner; B. J. Bruns, arch.; C. J. Wharncliffe, mason; F. L. Rielly, carp.	10,000

Rush Work on Jefferson Park National Bank

WORK is being rushed on the new home of the Jefferson Park National bank at the southwest corner of Milwaukee and Lawrence avenues so that President Fred Esdohr will be able to have a birthday celebration on Dec. 10, the tenth anniversary of the bank's organization. Architect Clarence Hatzfeld has designed a building 59x125, to cost around $150,000. It will have over 7,000 safe deposit boxes. One of Jefferson Park's landmarks was torn down to make way for the new bank building.

Mr. Stork to Be Welcome at $400,000 Boulevard Flats

Old Mr. Stork, who much to the shame of certain landlords is an unwelcome visitor in many Chicago flat buildings, is going to be a guest of honor in Caryl court, the $400,000 apartment building soon to be built at 4537 Drexel boulevard, according to Architect John Archibald Armstrong.

"J. I. Jordan, the owner, believes families with children make the best tenants," said Mr. Armstrong, "so he's had me arrange for a big playroom for children, with a complete gymnasium, in the basement."

Caryl court will have seventy-two flats of two and three rooms. It will be six stories and stand on a 150x250 site and will be of brick and stone in the colonial type of architecture. It will have a rear frontage of 150 feet, overlooking an attractive garden, enclosed by a brick wall with green lattice and vines. The back of the building will be of white painted brick with lattices.

A building line of forty feet from the boulevard will be observed and the front embellished with fountains and shrubbery. The $25,000 iron fence, which surrounded the lawn of the Isadoro Schmidtt residence, now on the site, will be retained. The site is just south of John G. Shedd's residence. Architect Armstrong hopes to have the flats ready by spring. S. W. Straus & Co., have underwritten a $335,000 bond issue on the property.

Realty Picnic Interest Grows

Basing his estimate on the way members of the Chicago Real Estate board are sending in their O. K.'s and checks, Chairman Fred A. Gates predicts this year's outing at Olympia Fields Country club next Thursday will be the most successful ever held.

The regulation program of games and races has been arranged and one of the club's three golf courses will be reserved solely for realtors. The various prizes are now on display in the directors' room of the board. The Chicago Real Estate board special will leave Randolph street at 10:20 Thursday morning, stopping at Van Buren street, 53d street, and 63d street.

Beg Your Pardon

In last Sunday's real estate section in the story about the new north shore suburb to be called Chiwaukee it was mentioned that lake front lots on the north section of the property were selling at $14 a front foot. This was a typographical error and should have read $15 a front foot.

Buys Entire Block as Site for Office Fixture Plant

The entire block bounded by Grand, Trumbull, Augusta and Homan avenues, containing approximately 95,000 square feet, has been purchased by the Chicago Store and Office Fixture company for a reported $30,000. The seller was Albert J. Weisberg. The buyers intend to erect in the near future a three story mill constructed building to cost around $150,000. It is understood no architect has been engaged. The company has outgrown the present quarters at 818 South Clinton street. A. F. Andrews of Albert O. Anderson & Co., represented both parties.

Realty Notes

The new four story Emerman building now building at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Lawrence avenue, is reported by the Hool Ralty company to have been turned over to them to manage. There will be stores on the first floor, shops on the second and third floors, and offices on the fourth.

Marks & Co., who have occupied the main floor of the building at 846 West Madison street for fifteen years, will remove about Jan. 1 to the main floor of the new six story building now being erected at 710-14 West Madison street from plans by Levy & Klein. They will conduct a mortgage banking business and will spend a reported $50,000 on interior improvements, including safe deposit vaults.

James Walsh of 607 Rush street writes that the account of the lease made by George F. Porter of the Walton and Michigan corner told in this department Sept. 3, reminds him that the late W. D. Kerfoot offered him the lot with the frame building for $4,500 in 1877.

NORTH SHORE WAR MEMORIAL IDEA GAINS IN FAVOR

Important Forces Line Up for Big Project.

Several important forces along the north shore have within the last few days voiced approval of the plan for a gigantic memorial, 650 feet high, to be erected by popular subscription in memory of the north shore men who died in the civil, Spanish, and world conflicts.

The first public showing of Architect George W. Maher's conception of the memorial was made in THE TRIBUNE on Sept. 2.

According to Harry L. Lyons, north shore realtor, fisherman extraordinary, and Evanston resident, who originated the idea of building a huge mound 300 feet high and topping it with a 350 foot war memorial shaft of marble, Andy Rogers, commander of the Evanston post of the American Legion, has indorsed the project, and predicts other north shore town legion posts will do likewise.

Clayton Mitchell, realtor, will in the next few days take the matter up with the Evanston Real Estate board and the Evanston Chamber of Commerce. James A. Patton has written his approval of the project.

Calls Mound Appropriate.

"An earth mound, being our most tangible record of the existence of prehistoric Americans, is singularly appropriate for the base," said Mr. Lyons, "especially when a truly American design is carried out in stone and marble on top."

"Statuary will be the chief embellishment," said Architect Maher, "which will bring out the history of war in a permanent way. This great monument will be the keynote to all future shore beautification. All boulevards will center there, especially those from Chicago.

"It will dominate the north shore in the most impressive way imaginable and will always be one of the greatest attractions Chicago can offer its tourists."

Tallest Manuoment in World.

Being 650 feet high it will be the tallest monument in the world. The Washington monument is only 555 feet. The Wrigley tower is only 398 feet.

A tentative site on Dempster street, Evanston, just west of the drainage canal, is being considered. The monument will require a ten acre base. Material for the 300 foot mound will be secured from the spoils banks along the canal.

CHICAGO BUILDER AT LAST FINDS HIS WAY BACK TO HOME TOWN

A significant angle to the announcement made by the W. J. Parsons Housing company of its entry into the Chicago field is the fact that this is a Chicago concern, backed by local men and with a Chicagoan, W. J. Parsons, as president of it. Mr. Parsons said yesterday he had steered clear of Chicago for the last two years, doing his extensive housing operations in Gary, Ind., Morgan Park, Duluth, Minn., Farrell, Pa., and other cities, because he didn't like labor conditions here.

"Even now I can build cheaper in other cities," he said. "For instance, I figure we can save about 10 per cent on a two flat building in Chicago by quantity construction—and this saving, by the way, is passed on to the buyer. But I saved 25 per cent in Gary and other places."

Work started yesterday on thirty apartment buildings, of two flats each, by the Parsons company on North Mason avenue, near Milwaukee and Bryn Mawr avenues. They will have five rooms in each flat and stand on 30x125 lots and will cost $10,500. Mr. Parsons claims these would cost about $11,500 if materials were bought for each building separately.

The company also has contracted with Math. Thomas to build 100 frame and stucco bungalows on 50x147 lots in Edison Park which he will sell at from $7,000 to $8,500. Work already has started on five of them. George C. Nimmons & Co. are the architects for the bungalows and Architect Carl W. Westerlind designed the two flat buildings. Every bungalow will have a different design. Mr. Parsons hopes to have some of the apartments ready by Oct. 1. He has acquired other groups of lots in the Milwaukee, Peterson and Elston district and will build on them in the near future.

MADISON STREET VALUES INCREASE

How property values are increasing along Madison street, west of Garfield park, is shown in the purchase of fifty feet on the north side of the street, 275 feet west of Crawford, by Madigan Brothers, from E. H. McIntyre, for $40,000, or $800 a front foot. A year ago Madigan Brothers bought seventy-five feet adjoining on the east, and paid only $500 a front foot. Joseph J. Lelivelt was attorney and broker in the deals. Both properties are vacant. Madigan Brothers, who have been on Madison street for fifty years, have a large general merchandise store at 4127 Madison, with a lease to run a year and a half. They will probably start work on a two story store on their new property in eight or nine months. No architect has been engaged.
